Biloxi, near Mobile, always continued a settlement, even if across its bay to the east the memory of Fort Maurepas was lost in the oaks and pines of that promontory. Piernas early made a grant to the widow of Baptiste Christian, who had lived at Biloxi since her birth; and a little later Mathurin and Careaux obtained land at Dumanon Point, bounded south by the sea and east by "the mouth of the Bay of the Old Fort', for cultivation and other uses. James Innerarity in 1809 became the owner of Round Island, once the property of Frances Krebs.

Few documents survive in the Mobile Archives of the later English period in Mobile, and the one deed in the Translated Records is so indefinite, says Hamilton, in description as not to be of much aid. But its form of "grant, bargain, sell" and the rest of it, with the "to have and to hold" is at least a reminder of English Procedure. One paper is dated February 2, 1775, and by it Augustin Rochon buys three lots (for $100), with a house all falling to pieces. The sellers are Margaret Belluque, Francis Fleurs (Fievre ?), Martonne (Martha) Dubroca and Louisa Rochon. The property is a double lot, that is, extending east and west from street to street, bounded on the south by Henry Driscol, and on the north in part by the vacant lot also conveyed and the lot of J. B. Lafleaux...the vacant lot in turn being bounded on the north and west by unnamed streets.

This same property became the subject of litigation in American times between the omnivorous Kennedys (Joshua and William) and the heirs of Rochon; and in this way we learn its location to have been at the southeast corner of Conception and Government Streets. It seems that the original grantee was B. F. Fievre, probably the ancestor to the parties selling to Rochon. Augustin Rochon married Louisa Fievre, and she as his widow resided there...with the yard, fruit trees and park overlooking the common - at least until 1789, the year the Spanish under Galvez conquered Mobile from the British. Whether Madam Rochon was there later or not was the point in the suit, which depended on whether U. S. Commissioner Crawford reported in 1814 that she had lived there "36 years" or "35 years age". Marie Jeanne Lapointe, the mother of the wife of Urbanne Dubouy, must have been the first wife of Rochon. At the time (February 5, 1780) when Galvez was staging Mobile, the British burned the home of the widow Augustin Rochon at the SE corner of Conception and Government Streets, no doubt to enable the fort the better to command the neighborhood.

During the occupancy of Mobile by the Spanish there were 13 pastors of the little Church of the Immaculate Conception until American times. The first entries during this period in the church records are by Father Salvador de Esporanza, who describes himself as "parish priest of the Mercedarian Order". Almost his first duty was to enter Augustin.....(there must be a page or so missing).....

The energetic Pierre Rochon, the master contractor of Mobile during British times, (and the son of Charles Rochon and Henriette Colon) according to Lorimer's report in 1771, made all necessary repairs on the barracks and stockade at Fort Charlotte and on boats to be sent to Haldimanoat Pensacola, as well as at Croftown on the eastern shore of Mobile Bay. Lorimer's Report hints the effect of the abandonment of the fort for residence of troops. By April 1771, the work at Croftown was finished.

It is pleasant, says Hamilton, to turn to the side lights in the correspondence between Pierre Rochon and the general (Haldimand). Rochon was compelled by his wife's illness in April (1771) to remain at Mobile, and from there he sends a few dozen fowls as a compliment. He was then building boats, one a schooner for the government, but had to wait until the middle of May for a sail maker from New Orleans. His own schooner was taken for carrying guns, but he has the policy to express himself as satisfied about it. He asks that his white workmen have rations at the royal tariff, which he will repay if not allowed. To Pensacola he sends over diables (despite the name, the peaceful articles we call log carts) and two pairs of oxen. Once Pierre Rochon expresses the intention of coming to Pensacola after finishing his work at Mobile, which would be June 20, 1771. He was anxious to obtain further employment "In order to refit his house spoiled by the bad conduct of his children" but he does not let us into the particulars of this domestic affair. This home may have been at Dog River, whence his later letters are dated.

Pierre Rochon was also a slave holder, and his clear, bold signature to the negro baptismal entries contrasts strangely to the cramped hand of Pere (Father) Ferdinand, the Acadian, who was parish priest. This good father continues his ministrations during English times in Mobile. The same forms, the same words all in French as before, continue in this record, in the same thin book that had been paged and issued to him in 1757 by the French commandant. Ferneret, R. Roi (the Indian interpretor), Montelimart, Lusser, Trouillet, Girard, A. Rochon, as well as Pierre Rochon, Chastant, DeMouy, Greiot, Carriere, Badon, Moniouls and others, bring their children and slaves to Pere Ferdinand for baptism as in the old days, or to attest his entries as they chat with the good father of French times and friends. The inhabitants of Mobile were not able to support him, however, and bout 1771 he retired to New Orleans. 26 of them earnestly petitioned next year for his recall, and Governor Chester warmly recommended it, and that a salary be allowed him. He soon returned to Mobile, although Lord Hillsborough refused the salary and we can imagine the good priest's welcome home.

Sir Robert Farmer, the English governor of Mobile for many years, first found 98 French families, and of these almost 40 remained, withdrawing largely to their river and bay homes and there raising cattle. Lt. McLellan was sent to New Orleans to induce the French to move to Mobile and Pensacola, but in this he was unsuccessful. Pierre Rochon, who was to be the master contractor of Mobile, and who did most of the fort repairs in later French times was of the Mobile inhabitants who remained. A great many of the French having relatives and friends in New Orleans on the founding of that city in 1718 followed Bienville there. Many of the French inhabitants as well could not subject themselves to be ruled by the British, entertaining the thought that the treaty of Paris would deprive them of both home and land and living.

The British, however, set to work the first thing to improve Mobile and much construction work and repairs was done....The receipt of Pierre Rochon of April 9, 1763, for payment for all the labor performed by him has also come down in the Haldimand Papers. It is stated he did his work by order of Major Farmer of the 13th Regiment, and Farmer's account shows that Rachon received in all 2232 Pounds. A certificate dated April 13th, of officers of the 34th and 22nd Regiments, shows that the work was satisfactory. A note says Lt. Pittman connected with the great survey of Mobile in Brithish times, on April 8, 1765, paid Pierre Rochon 22-1/2 pounds for repairing a boat for Pittman "to survey the lakes with". Family as well as Mobile history records tell us that Pierre Rochon grew so popular (and we can readily imagine he was now in great demand) that after a short while the patriotic British at Pensacola were up in arms about this Frenchman's taking their business away.

In the summer of 1771, we read of only a small amount of sickness in Mobile and the garrison of the fort proper. And in November (1771) we find Haldimand corresponding with Pierre Rochon II at Pensacola, who speaks of the death of his father. The mantle, says Hamilton, had descended on worthy shoulders, and the young man announces that he will carry on his father's agreements and intentions....The last letter from Pierre Rochon I was dated July 11, 1771, from Mobile. Haldimand no doubt missed his old friend when, on November 28, 1771, he was in Mobile to attend a congress of the Chickasaws.

The Eslava Bay Tract below Arlington or Garrow's Bend on Mobile Bay (which is different from the Eslava Mill Tract) was by the Spanish Commandant Osorno granted Michael Ardas as a cotton plantation on March 26, 1803. The Diego McVay Tract of 4, 374.09 acres was a claim of Cornelius McCurtain, who seems to have purposes. 20 acres at the mouth of Dog River was in 1798 the property of John (Jean) Trouillet at a place called Bateau Panche. He wanted it for cattle, of which he had a large stock.

Across Dog River was where lived Pierre Rochon I, Hamilton says, for much of Hollinger's Island stood in Rochon's name, the origin of its modern titles. The 800 arpens which Powell was to get from James Innerarity as the executor of Trolliet's widow (nee Isabelle Rochon), his mother-in-law, was probably south of Deer River, and not on the Island.

Mary Rochon, widow of Arbanne DeMouy, for $400 sold John Murrell 1,200 arpens situated "by the junction of Dog River, about three leagues south of Mobile, belonging to her deceased husband, acquired by grant of Corondelet. It was bounded on the north by Monlimar Creek and lands of Charles Lelande, on the south by another creed (Cedar, in a later deed) and the same estate, on the west by public lands, and on the east by Dog River. Four months later Murrell sold the tract to Eliphalet Beebe, and he in 1810 conveyed half of it to _____ Beebe for $300. This is the Beebe Tract at the mouth of Hall Mill Creek.

The most prominent re-garnt of the Mobile territory was that made by Governor Grimarest of Dauphin Island to Joseph Moro - the origin, in fact, of the existing title to that historic spot. Moro's petition of July 31, 1781, is dated at New Orleans, and says that he is an inhabitant of that city. Galvez the next day directs Grimarest to investigate the matter, and if the land is vacant to put Moro in possession...and return the proceedings made out 'in continuation" with the comissioners - a substitute for the indorsement on the original papers by officials in oru practice. September of the same year there was a report by Charles Parent, Arbana (Arbanne) DeMouy, Dubroca, and Louis Carriere, who had been called on for evidence.

St. Francis Street east of Royal, like Dauphin and even Conti Streets, was represented only by a lane to the river. In 1811 the free mulatta Mary Jeanne was living with her children in a little house at what is now the NE corner of St. Francis and Royal Streets. This was next south of another place of Simon Andre which crossed on St. Michael Street. John Forbes & Co. desired the Mary Jeanne place, as it extended 26 toises eastwardly, and was pounded on the south by the lane going to the river. So they exchanged with her, giving her a place twelve toises front, somewhere on the south side of Church Street, in the rear of the town. There they obligated themselves to build her a house 26 by 18 (French) feet "like the house Peter Lorandine (Pierre Laurendine), with a double chimney of bricks", and they paid her $40 cash besides. Thus these merchants got an outlet to the river from their main house. North of Forbes, on the west side of Royal, the residents are not so easy to make out, except that the site of the northwest corner of Royal and St. Michael was the residence of Arbanne (DeMouy) by 1802.

St. Michael is a Spanish name but one of the surlosities of Mobile is that it is not in the surviving recoras applied to that street, says Hamilton. It did not extend east of Royal, and west to our St. Joseph it is called St. Jago at first, and later St. Francis; while west of St. Joseph it was in 1811 known as Orbanne Street, from the residence of "Misieu" "Orbanne" DeMouy at the NW corner corner of Royal. Hugo Krebs came next north of Andre (or Andry) on Royal (with the title confirmed in 1842 to his heirs), and beyond him was George Tucker, the English carpenter of Panton, Leslie & Co. In 1804 James Innerarity was granted what is now the SE corner of Royal and St. Louis Streets, bounded on the north by that unopened street.

The first known sale of land ascertained by the new line to be within the United States was that of C.U. DeMouy..for $250 (October 23, 1800) to John Brewer of 20 by 40 arpens between lands of said Brewer and Dubroca. C.U. DeMouy was the ancestor of the Mobile family of that name.

Across Mobile Bay a Spanish map shows settlements above the old French Village (Aldea), but none at modern Howard's; and about Montrose have been found silver coins and antiquities more likely of this than DeSoto's time. J. B. Lorandine had six or seven arpens with house and kitchen on it, at Red Bluff, about the site of the British summer camp of Croftown; and Lt. Ferriet was to buy it in 1805 for $120. This neighborhood near Rock Creek in later times was the site of kilns. Isabelle Narbonne, the widow Campbell, obtained a tract of 20 arpens front at the Bluff in order to put her slaves at making brick and tile. And we have already seen the judicial proceedings by which Forbes & Co. purchased the Troulliet yard there (in 1811).

This ends the writing and recording of the family history of the descendants and connections of the Chevalier de Juzan. This family history includes many notable people, who were the makers of the history of the Gulf Coast Territory under the five flags flown over the country now known as the State of Alabama...a family history to be pround of, which is not only a gift to prosterity but a monument to its people and to the South!

Hilaire Krebs helped acquire land for Pascagoula, state

By Joanna Anderson Correspondent

Hilaire Krebs Jr., who built the antebellum home at the western end of Columbus Drive in Pascagoula, had an important place in our area's early history.

Betty Oswald, in her book, "Thought You Should Know Revisited," does an excellent job of laying out the history of how the French land claims led to the shaping of Pascagoula in the early 1800s.

"The owner of Claim Section No. 6 (Hilaire Krebs) chose to build his home overlooking Lake Yazoo, which protected him from the open water," she wrote. "During World War I, the home was used as hospital for International Shipyard workers and living quarters for the doctors."

Section No. 6 is described in the official records as a tract bounded north and west by Lake Yazoo, south by the beach, east by the shipyard property, and the marsh on the west.

"It is not so difficult to understand that a portion of this Claim Section should be known as 'Krebsville,' remembering that many early settlers in this area were named Krebs," Oswald wrote.

Other claims were held by Mary L. Dupont, Valentine Delmas, and Rene, Antonio, Augustine and Francisco Krebs.

Records at the Pascagoula Public Library Local Genealogy and History Department show that Hilaire Krebs married his second cousin, Mary Louise Krebs. The joining of these two important Krebs lines brought together, financial resources each had inherited from their Krebs ancestors.

The 1850 census showed that they owned land and farmed it. Hilaire was appointed by the state of Mississippi as a land agent, a position he used to acquire more land for himself and the government.

An anecdotal story in Nollie Hickman's "Mississippi Harvest: Lumbering in the Longleaf Pine Belts, 1840-1915," gives insight into the vision and ingenuity of Krebs, the land agent.

Due to the slow sales of federal lands and pressure from the states, Congress had passed legislation in 1850 granting land to the states to encourage reclamation of overflowed areas.

"The Swampland Act was one of the most important land measures ever enacted by Congress, for through it a substantial portion of the national domain passed to the states," wrote Hickman. "The act provided for transfer to the states of all lands that had been rendered unfit for cultivation because of overflows."

In northern Harrison and in Marion, Hancock, Perry, Jackson, Greene, and Covington counties, much of the superior timberland was claimed by the state in this fashion.

"Hilaire Krebs, one of the state's land agents, selected thousands of acres of forest lands in Jackson County," Hickman wrote. "He judged as swampland all lands over which a boat could pass. It was said of Krebs that he drove a work animal hitched to a canoe across thousands of acres of high, dry pinelands, which he later claimed for the state."

His locations were disallowed by the federal government, but not until the state had sold large tracts. The sales were later confirmed after litigation.

In 1889, he and Marie Louise celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in the Catholic Church.

A newspaper article described the event: "While the aged but still vigorous pair walked up the aisle to the altar, a beautiful march pealed forth from the organ under the accomplished touch of Miss Alba Pol."

The article goes on to say that attending were their 11 children and 53 grandchildren. The 1850 census listed their children at that time as Matilda, 11; Aristide, 9; Malvina, 7; Arthur, 5; Alfred, 3, and Hubert, 1.

Pas journalist remembered as progressive thinker

By BRAD CROCKER
Mississippi Press Staff

PASCAGOULA — The late Albin J. Krebs was proof that the pen is mightier than the sword, and he had battle scars to prove it.

In the Oct. 27, 1950 issue of the University of Mississippi's campus newspaper, Krebs, a Pascagoula native and then editor of The Daily Mississippian, wrote an editorial demanding the integration of the university's law and graduate schools because such courses were not offered at that time to the state's historically black colleges.

He was labeled a radical and was booed at his 1951 commencement and threatened for his views 11 years before James Meredith graced the doors of Ole Miss as the university's first black undergraduate student.

"When given the full educational opportunities he deserves as a citizen of the state and nation, the Negro will raise his own standards," Krebs editorialized.

Krebs was 73 when he died May 31, 2002, in Key West, Fla., where in 1989 he had retired after a lengthy and distinguished career with The New York Times.

Anne Mansfield speaks with Stuart Bullion, Chairman of the Department of Journalism at The University of Mississippi, during a reception honoring Mansfield's brother, Albin Krebs, at The Longfellow House.

On Wednesday, more than 50 people gathered at The Longfellow House in Pascagoula where family and university officials announced a more than $186,000 endowment Krebs requested in his will to be used for a UM journalism scholarship fund and to honor his legacy and goodwill.

> — Anne Mansfield, Albin Krebs' sister

"This gift is further evidence of his eternal optimism for change and for recognition of the crucial role that young people play in the future of our state," said Circuit Judge Robert Krebs of Pascagoula, his nephew.

The university paper called him "easily (the hall of Fame's) most controversial character."

"Even in light of the estrangement that existed between him and the university for so many years, it never diminished his love for it and the people of this state."

Ole Miss Chancellor Robert Khayat, a Moss Point native, called Krebs "an extraordinary person who courageously challenged the status quo."

Krebs' gift "is going to have a dramatic impact on journalism in this state," Khayat added. "His gift will enable journalists to continue his remarkable legacy."

Albin Krebs' sister, Anne Mansfield of Pascagoula, said her brother's love for journalism began in Pascagoula when he served as editor of the school paper, The Panther Pen, and then later in the news department with The Chronicle Star, now The Mississippi Press, before moving on to larger markets.

"He was way ahead of his time," Mansfield recalled. "He said he always printed the truth. And no matter who he worked for, if he couldn't print the truth, forget it."

She said he took the fallout for his stance on race relations "like a man" and continued to do the right thing his whole life.

"He was a good all-around person, that's all there was to it," she said.

Maurice Dantin was the university's student president and a fraternity brother of Krebs' and fellow member of the UM Hall of Fame.

Dantin called Krebs' 1951 editorial "a shocker back then, but he was a visionary. He didn't hesitate to say what he meant. Not many people were brave enough to do that, but he did."

Krebs was "an independent thinker with a lot of guts" who saw the inevitable direction race relations were taking, Dantin added.

Krebs began his full-time career in journalism in 1954 at The Times-Picayune in New Orleans. After a six-year stint with the United Press International in New York, he became associate editor of Newsweek magazine. He also worked at the New York Herald Tribune.

Perhaps his first big story was the 1956 sinking of the ocean liner Andrea Doria. He then covered civil rights strife in the 1960s in the South.

He served as a U.S. Air Force officer for three years after college, then earned his master's degree from Columbia School of Journalism and won a Pulitzer traveling fellowship.

At The New York Times, Krebs was chief advance obituary writer. He met national and world leaders, celebrities, artists, authors and other famous people. In 1986, he told The Mississippi Press about one of his most memorable subjects, President Lyndon B. Johnson, which ran for pages and contained 68,000 words in the Times.

> "I want to say to my fellow Southerners, fellow Americans: Abandon many of the outdated, bigoted ideas they were born with and which they cling to simply and foolishly because Granddaddy did it that way."
> — Albin J. Krebs

Others included Eudora Welty, Gene Autry, Truman Ca-pote, Sir Alec Guiness, George Burns and many more.

"Albin Krebs was everything we hope Ole Miss journalism students and graduates will be," said Stuart Bullion, journalism department chair. "I am moved knowing his name will stand as a personal example for them."

Mansfield said her brother was always inquisitive, courageous and caring of other people. She said whenever friends from Pascagoula visited New York, "he always showed them a wonderful time. He was quite the gentleman."

In 1986, when the UM journalism department hosted an alumni reunion, Krebs declined to attend, recalling the treatment and threats he received for his stance. Despite those memories, Krebs remained a loyal supporter of the journalism department, Bullion said.

"In 1988, he and former department chair Will Norton endowed a scholarship fund in Krebs' name to benefit students from Jackson County."

That scholarship has helped 50 Jackson County residents pursue their dreams as professional journalists.

"In his work as a journalist, he fully understood the significant role played by writers in our society," Khayat said.

Krebs' words in 1951 were daggers during that time, but he said if he provoked just one person to think more openly, he had done his job.

"I want to say to my fellow Southerners, fellow Americans: Abandon many of the outdated, bigoted ideas they were born with and which they cling to simply and foolishly because Granddaddy did it that way," Krebs wrote. "If wanting to see this is being radical, I confess to being just that.

"If we are ever to face life intelligently and constructively, we must realize that in many cases, we should not propose to simply follow tradition, but to create it."

RE: Evelina Krebs (b. 1820)
m. Thomas Hawkins (b. 1800)

Dear Mrs. Krebs:

Last March your name was given to me at the Pascagoula Library as a genealogist familiar with the Krebs family. I am a descendant of Thomas and Evelina Krebs through their son, Charles R. Hawkins, my paternal great grand father.

I am interested in:
1) a published Krebs family history, if ones exists
2) obtaining a copy of Four Centuries on the Pascagoula
3) information about--
Thomas Hawkins-marriage and death dates, life facts
Evelina Krebs Hawkins-death date, life facts Charles R. Hawkins-proof of marriage to Carrie Sticker death date
Emanuel Alexander Hawkins-son of Charles born 2-21-1872 in Pascagoula-proof of birth

I have copied pages from Four Centuries on the Pascagoula, 1870 census, and war records for Charles and his brothers, Dave and Thomas. I shall be pleased to have you call me collect some evening to discuss these matters and will remit charges for information that you are able to provide.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Norma Kitzman

Francis B. Latady Nov. 19-1966
To Richard Latady.
Mentions
Anne Hawkins daughter of Richard Hawkins

Dear Mrs. Kitzman -
I don't think I can help much with the Hawkins
I looked through my "Krebs" -
1. Did you see the "Krebs family" in Four Cent.
2. 4 Cent. ont of print. You might get your Library to borrow it from ours
3. Have no dates except Four Cent.
Did you read L. J. Frederics Diary about Tweggs Rifles 1861
I did find a Copy of a Letter Francis B. Latady wrote to Richard Latady on Nov. 19, 1966
He mentioned Anne Hawkins daughter of
Richard Hawkins
I got this letter from - Regina C. Papier Rt. 1 Box 292
Social Circle, Ga. 30279
She is a Krebs decendant and has done a lot of research.

More than two Hundred years age, there arrived from France, a Fleet sent by the Duchess de Chaumont for the colinization of Louisiana, and destined for her concession at Pascagoula, Miss. -

Madam Duchess de Chaumont was lady - in - waiting to Princess Henrietta at the Court of Louis xlv, at Fontainsbleu palace. She was the daughter of Comte General Gramont of the French Army, and Lady Elizabeth Hamilton of England, and a renouned beauty at the Court of Charles the Second.

Madam de Chamont married Le Chevalier de Chaumont, who was Duke de Crequin, Chevalier de St. Louis et de la Legion d'hormeur of France-

In 1711 the Concession of Pascagoula to Madam de Chaumont was made under the Corporation "The Western Co." and was registered by Parliament in Paris on the 7th of Sept. 1711. -

In 1718 Admiral de la Pointe (Brother of Madam de la Chaumont) was commissioned by the Frence Government to build a Fort on Lake Catahoula (now Krebs Lake) to protect the consession of Pascagoula to Madam de Chaumont.

In Jan. 1721, The Frigate "Charles" (a war vessel) under commandat Joseph de la Pointe and flying the "Fleur de Lys" dropped anchor in the Bay of Mobile at Fort Louis de la Mobile - Her passengers includ[illegible] Duche[illegible] Chaumont her daughter Baroness de la Prade (or Prode) Count Capt [illegible] de Bellille - Sieur Gregriede Guillory and his wife Jeanne de Gui[illegible] and the Dubos, Senac, Petats, Vivias and others.

I[illegible]l Admiral de la Pointe returned to France and on account of ill heal[illegible]h resigned his commission, but he returned to settle in Pascagoula. Admiral Dupont was appointed to succeed him.

Baron Hugue Von Krebs arrived shortly after-he was from Neumagen, on the Moselle, Germany. He was an officer in the Army and came to Pascagoula from Canada in 1722. - He married Marie de la Pointe the Admirals daughter. They had seven children.....etc.

Chapter XV.

EDUCATION

That Jackson County has kept pace with the educa-ional progress in the state for more than a century, an be gleaned from the following chapter upon this ubject.

Early in 1820, public spirited citizens of this ection saw the necessity of schools, and the resultant dvantages that would accrue therefrom. They exerted very energy, were liberal in subscriptions, encouraged he promotion of educational institutions, and were not emiss in any duty toward the fulfillment of the desired nd - more knowledge.

That their soul ambitions have been realized, is erified by the fact that Jackson County's Schools now ank with the best, and it will elate you to read of the adway that has been made.

SCHOOLS OF YESTERDAY

The first school was built by Valentine Delmas, a ost progressive citizen, at the settlement on Pascagoula iver. He came from New Orleans in 1800, erected a school n 1820 - just north of the old Frederick de St. Feral ome (later erected in 1829), and hired the first teach-r, Frederick de St. Feral, at a salary of $600 per year.
ll children were invited to attend, and were made welome without pay. Mr. Feral was well qualified, having eceived his education in France. He was also a civil ngineer and laid out the greater part of Old Scranton ith the aid of Valentine Delmas (See Chap. 1, Formation).

When, some years later, Frederick went to New rleans, his wife, the eldest daughter of Valentine Delmas, illed his position in the school.

After her husband's death in 1840, Mrs. Frederick, eft with five children, taught a private school in her ome. To her children she gave the rudiments of their ducation, and in time, her eldest daughter, Josephine, aught until her marriage to Mr. Donovan, when she conucted a private school in her home. This lasted until he building of the old Scranton Academy, where she was ne of the first teachers. (1)

1) Charles Delmas, and Miss Bella Delmas, Pascagoula, Miss.

Early in 1850, a committee of the Grant, Krebs, and Delmas families, and all others of the Pascagoula district who were financially able, organized a school, located on a tract of land in Grant's Lane. Capt. John Grant paid for the erection of a teacherâ' home, a school building, and a church, chiefly for the education of his eleven grandchildren. These grounds extended from where Oliver Cole's home now stands, on Grant Street, to the corner lot now owned by T. R. Swartwout, on which the church building stood. Captain Grant was a Baptist, but gave this building for religious worship for no certain denomination. Sunday school and day school were also held here; the latter building stood near the site of the home now owned by Ed. Mayo, on Grant Street.

The committee advertised for teachers, among the first of whom was a Mr. Kidwell from Virginia, who boarded with the H. Krebs family. He came in 1852 and remained four years, his first pupils being from the Grant, Krebs, and Delmas families. Other pupils, who came from East side, Bayou Cassotte, and other districts, were from the families of Southern, Ladnier, Johnson, and Deas. The second teacher, a Mr. Wheeler, remained four years, and was succeeded by Mrs. Mars of Mobile, Alabama, who was teaching when the war started in 1860.

After the War between the States, Mary Louise Grant, who finished her education in Mobile, taught in this school, continuing for some years. Rachel B. Grant, educated in New Orleans, followed Mary Louise Grant. The exact date or reason for discontinuance of this school is not known, but the buildings were torn down and the lumber used - new and first class - for homes. (1)

Mrs. Jennie Batiste conducted a private school in the old Batiste Home on Batiste Bayou and Pascagoula Bay Front for several years. Among the pupils who attended, about 1871, were Del and Lou Greiner, and Mary and Lena Hall. Mrs. Batiste discontinued her classes to become the first teacher at the Beach School, but as soon as the four months session was over, she re-opened the private school in her home.(2)

In 1873, C. H. Alley provided a private teacher, Miss Arlene McKay, of Moss Point, for his three children, Lizzie, Jennie, Robert, and two nieces,

Five Generations Mourn Passing Of Mrs. Moore

Mrs. Corrine Krebs Moore, 90, died Sunday at her residence on S. Pascagoula street where she made her home with her son Rex Moore and daughter Miss Eva Moore.

Mrs. Moore had been confined to her home for several years from the effects of a broken hip and to her bed for the past year following an attack of flu.

A native and lifelong resident of Pascagoula, she is believed to have been the oldest living native of the city. The daughter of H. M. Krebs and Louise Raby Krebs, she was born June 17, 1861.

In 1878 she married William Council Moore of Pascagoula and they were the parents of 11 children, seven of whom survive. All live within the city.

Survivors are two daughters, Mrs. Edna Moore Krebs and Miss Eva Moore; five sons, W. C. Moore, H. B., F. W., Ernest D., and Rex A.; 32 grandchildren; 38 great grandchildren and one great-great granddaughter.

At Easter time a picture was taken of Mrs. Moore and four generations of her descendants, all girls.

Rosary was said by Msgr. P. J. Carey at Fails Chapel Sunday evening and funeral services were held at Our Lady of Victories church Monday with requiem mass by Father Carey. Interment was in Machpelah cemetery.

Pall bearers, all of whom were grandsons, were F. Bernard Torries, H. B. Moore, Jr., J. A. Moore, G. F. Moore, E. M. Kohls and Francis Krebs.

Out-of-town relatives attending were Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Chamblis and Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Goodman, of Mobile; Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Goff, Augusta, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Krebs, Childersburg, Ala.; C. B. Krebs, Bogalusa; Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Torricelli, Biloxi; Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Walker, New Orleans, and Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Delmas, Hattiesburg.

what I have heard described as "the ancestral home." And lately he has been aware of an urge to sing. Like all mocking birds he seems to know that he has to learn first. All this fall as I sat at my window I could hear an undertone of music. I could never see the bird except when he flew in an out of his leafy hiding place, but I knew he was there and marked his progress when the thrills became more rounded the notes sweeter though always low. He thought he was improving too, and one day essayed a loud trill. It went sour. I couldn't see the bird but I'll bet his tail was handing down. Was he ashamed. It was an hour or two before he got courage to renew his practice, this time very, very low. I suppose he will be in full fettle for the spring courting but he's subdued now.

Jeff, Growing up in Pascagoula, I always was told the Krebs gin was the first. But I guess it was too good a secret. I am going to copy your request for more information on to our research gurus at the Pascagoula library. I know they can help you. Thanks for the feedback. Where are you stationed and what was Leita's husband's (your grandfather's) name? Joanne

Joanne:

My deceased grandmother is "rolling over in her grave". When I was 12 years old in 1974 she indicated strongly that "Eli Whitney DID NOT INVENT THE COTTON GIN!" She said that her [grandfather]? Krebs invented the cotton gin. She went on to state that "all of this information can be found at the Pascagoula Library". Well, I knew my grandmother would never lie and she said her prayers by rosary every morning and night. I just never investigated this fact. I appreciate you writing about this and would like more information on this subject. BTW, my grandmother's name is Leita Krebs. She was born in 1899.

Thanks

EILAND

Miss Myrtle Frances Eiland, age 88, of Pascagoula, Miss., died Sunday, Sept. 10, 2006 in the Plaza Nursing Center, where 28 years ago she became the first resident. Born in Pascagoula, Aug. 22, 1918 to the late Walter David and Phillipa Alice "Ankey" Krebs Eiland, she was a life long resident of Pascagoula. She was a member of Our Lady of Victories Catholic Church.

Among her survivors are cousins, Isabelle Millette, William Gardner, Mary Gardner, and Joe Gardner. She is also survived by many friends who loved her very much, especially Kathryn Webb of Pascagoula.

Pallbearers will be Bill Gardner, Joe Gardner, Bill Millette, Bernard Millette, Joe Millette, and Mike Krebs. Joe Webb will serve as an honorary pallbearer.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p.m., Tuesday, Sept. 12, 2006 from the chapel of O'Bryant-O'Keefe Funeral Home with Father Michael Kelleher officiating.

The family will receive friends from 2 to 3 p.m. at the funeral home. Interment will follow at Machpelah Cemetery.

Those unable to attend services are invited to register online at www.obryanto-keefe.com

Services are under the direction of O'Bryant-O'Keefe Funeral Home of Pascagoula.

EUNICE G. KROEGER

Eunice G. Kroeger, died July 17, 2006 after a short illness. Eunice was born January 4, 1919 in Pascagoula, MS (daughter of John Augustus Green, Sr. and Mary Isabelle Krebs). Eunice graduated from Our Lady of Victories High School in 1937, and then worked several years for the utility company in Pascagoula.

She married Dale A. Kroeger on May 15, 1942 in Pascagoula. In 1946 Eunice accompanied her husband Dale when he worked in Philadelphia, PA, Bremen, Germany (1949-52), London, England (1952-56), Portland, OR (1953-1964), and Madison, NJ (1964-1981). In 1964, Eunice moved to Madison, NJ when Dale was promoted to Sr. Vice President of Operations in the American Bureau of Shipping. She was active in the Women's Propeller Club. In 1981 they moved to Camas, WA.

Surviving are her daughters, Judy K. Corbett (Kroeger) of Seattle, Maya J. Collins (Kroeger) of Atlanta, GA; son, Michael A. Kroeger of Camas, WA; and nine grandchildren. Eunice's husband, Dale, preceded her in death.

Viewing will be Sat., July 22, 2006 from 10-Noon at Brown's Funeral Home in Camas. The funeral service will follow at 2:00pm, Saturday, July 22, 2006 with Chaplain Dick Edmundson officiating.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggest memorials be sent to the Ray Hickey Hospice House, 2112 Mill Plain Blvd., PO Box 1600, Vancouver, WA. To send condolences or to sign the online guestbook, please visit: www.brownsfh.com. Brown's Funeral Home in Camas has been entrusted with arrangements.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rambert of Montgomery, Alabama, spent the past week end in Pascagoula where they visited at the home of Mrs. Floyd Daniel. Mr. Rambert is a nephew of Mrs. Daniel.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe V. Krebs was christened last Sunday, February 26, at Our Lady of Victories Catholic Church, Rev. Father F. J. Carey performing the ceremony. The young man was named Billy Ray Krebs. Guy V. Krebs, Jr., represented Billy Ray as godfather, and Miss Edna Krebs was godmother. Following the christening, those present, together with Miss Matilde Delmas, went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Krebs, where they were served ice cream and cake.

Mrs. H. D. Cudabac was in Biloxi last Monday at the home of Mrs. J. W. Griffin, who died early in the morning of that day.

Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Nau returned to their home in Pascagoula last Friday morning, after spending a three-weeks' honeymoon trip to Washington, D. C., and points in North Carolina and the Eastern States. Rev. and Mrs. Nau were married in New Orleans at St. John's Lutheran Church on Monday evening, February 8, at seven-thirty. Mrs. Nau is the former Miss Johanna Leonora Hasenkampf, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Hasenkampf, of New Orleans. The many friends of Rev. Mr. Nau are pleased to see him and his wife in Pascagoula, and wish them continued happiness in their marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Herring, Mrs. H. C. Herring and Miss Hazie Herring were in Biloxi last Sunday and visited in the home of Mrs. J. W. Griffith, who was seriously ill at the time, and who passed away in

A car for Christmas

Robert and Sallie Davis of Seminary are pictured above with a new Buick that he won on Christmas Eve, 1948. Their daughter and son-in-law, Lyndall and Mildred Coulter drove Robert to Winona later that afternoon to pick up the prize, which was brought home in the wee hours of Christmas morning. This photo was taken over the Christmas holidays in the front yard of their son-in-law and daughter's home, Edmund and Dorothy Krebs of Pascagoula.

Train kills Pas man

OCEAN SPRINGS — J. E. Krebs of Pascagoula was killed here Wednesday when a truck he was driving was struck by an L&N freight train.

Krebs, 56, a contractor for many years in the Pascagoula area, was taken to Howard Memorial Hospital in Biloxi following the 4:33 p.m. accident at the Church Street crossing.

Police said there were no witnesses to the accident. Mr. Krebs was alone and was pinned beneath the truck which was demolished. Time of death was 6:42 p.m.

Krebs was on his way home from work at Villa Maria Apartments here where he was maintenance superintendent.

A native and lifelong resident of Pascagoula, Krebs was a member of Our Lady of Victories Church and served on the Parish Council.

A Navy veteran of World War II, Krebs was a member of Elks Lodge 1120, Knights of Columbus and the Gulf Coast Snapper Banks Association.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Rita Mae Krebs of Pascagoula; a daughter, Mrs. Gene (Diane) Yandell of Gulfport; his stepmother, Mrs. Ray Krebs of Pascagoula; four brothers, Victor Ray Krebs, Chickasaw, Ala., August Krebs, Robert H. Krebs, and Franklin Krebs, all of Pascagoula; three sisters, Mrs. Victoria Green, Pascagoula, Mrs. Goldie Wood, Ocean Springs, and Mrs. Hazel Bentley, Ankara, Turkey; nieces, nephews and other relatives.

Friends may call at the O'Bryant-O'Keefe Funeral Home Friday from 6 until 10 p.m. Elks Memorial Service will be held at 8:55 p.m. and Rosary will be recited at 9 p.m.

Funeral services are scheduled for 10:30 a.m. Saturday from the O'Bryant-O'Keefe Chapel and at 11 a.m. at Our Lady of Victories Church with interment in Krebs Cemetery. A Requiem Mass will be said at 10 a.m. Monday at Our Lady of Victories Church.

The Land Of Valentine Theme Of Annual Ball

Pas-Point Bureau

J. E. Krebs of Pascagoula reigned as King Joy XXXII and Miss Martha Rhodes Turner of Moss Point as Queen Joy XXXII at the 32nd annual coronation ball of the Young Men's Business Club of Moss Point.

The Land of Valentine was the theme of the ball held at the Elks lodge in Pascagoula Friday evening.

The new king of Joy is a general contractor. A veteran of World War II, he holds membership in the Elks and Knights of Columbus and was selected as king of the Knights of Columbus ball in 1960.

Miss Turner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack F. Turner of Moss Point. She was valedictorian of the 1965 senior class of Moss Point High School and graduated from Sullins College in Bristol, Va., in 1967 as valedictorian of her class. Presently a senior at the University of Mississippi, Miss Turner is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma social sorority, mortar board, senior women's honor socieity, Sigma Delta Pi, Spanish honorary, and Phi Kappa Phi, scholastic honorary.

Miss Turner's father is a former king of Joy and her maternal grandmother is a former archduchess. Her mother and her uncles, Tom Lennep of Pascagoula and Edwin Lennep Jr. of Libya, Africa, also served as court members.

For her coronation the queen chose an ensemble depicting the Napoleonic era. The gown of silk satin embroidered with brilliant jewels featured a portrait neckline banded in gold paillettes and rhinestones. The focal point of the gown was a sunburst at the waistline created of a large ruby surrounded by rhinestones. Appliques of the Napoleonic bee design of rhinestones, crystal beads and rubies were placed down the sides of the sheath skirt. The bee design was repeated near the hem outlined by two bands of gold encrusted laurel leaf motiffs.

The queen's mantle, a replica of that worn by empress Josephine, fell from a gold lace collar traced in jewels of gold, silver and red. Banded in ermine the mantel featured the Napoleonic bee design formed of rhinestones and hand-cut beads interspersed with scrolls and teardrops extending the entire length of the train.

Mrs. Ellis Gardner of Pascagoula served as archduciness to the queen. She was escorted by archduke Dr. G. R. Hilbun of Moss Point.

Members of the court introduced by E. A. Khayat, master of ceremonies, were:

Duchesses, Mrs. A. L. Welsh, Mrs. Gary Smith, Mrs. Lum Cumbest, Mrs. Thomas Hegwood Jr., Mrs. A. L. Daffin Jr., Mrs. David Smith, Mrs. Jack Breland, Mrs. C. R. Slaughter Jr., Miss Sharon Stagg, Miss Martha McIlwain and Miss Kathy Bodden.

Dukes of the court were E. S. "Ned" Nelson, Paul Palmer, Robert Nichols, T. M. Von Sprecken Jr., Dr. C. D. Whigham Jr., Andrew J. Keenan, Douglas Fontaine, Terry Adams, J. M. Epting Jr., Gayden Harper, Jr., and Hubby E. Nelson.

Trainbearers to the queen were Miss Leslie Colville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Colville of Moss Point, and Miss Kathy Herring, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Herring Jr. of Pascagoula.

The crownbearers to their majesties were Steven Hockaday, son of Dr and Mrs. Perry J. Hockaday of Pascagoula, and Eric Denmark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Denmark of Moss Point.

Following the coronation of the 1969 king and queen by the 1968 monarchs, Miss Vicki Ramsay of Pascagoula and James F. Harvey of Moss Point, dancing was enjoyed to the music of the Roy Choice orchestra of Mobile.

The king and queen entertained members of the court and invited guests at a royal breakfast held at the Knights of Columbus home following the ball.

REIGN AT YMBC BALL — J. E. Krebs of Pascagoula and Miss Martha Rhodes Turner of Moss Point were crowned the King and Queen of Joy at one of Jackson County's largest carnival celebrations, held Friday night at the Elks Lodge. Young Men's Business Club of Moss Point sponsors the annual event which honors citizens of the county for their contribution to their communities. Miss Turner, a senior at Ole Miss., is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack F. Turner of Moss Point. Mr. Krebs, a lifelong resident of Pascagoula, is a descendant of one of its oldest families.

Pete Avara, paratrooper, left February 1, and after a week at Camp Shelby, went to Camp Fannin, Texas. He will finish his basic training soon.

Neil Bacot, navy, left February 1, for Great Lakes Training Center. Neil finished his boot training in April and is now training in radio work.

Tommy Hegwood, army, left February 1, and after a week at Camp Shelby, went to Camp Wheeler, Georgia. Tommy completed his boot training on May 26.

Oliver Krebs, navy, left April 6, for Jackson, Mississippi. From Jackson he went to Great Lakes Naval Training Center. He will finish his basic training May 29.

Howard Smith, navy, left March 14. Howard was stationed at Millington, Tennessee. Still there after his first furlough the first week of May, he is on his way in twenty weeks of radio study.

Richard Tatum, navy, left February 28, for Great Lakes Naval Training Center. He completed his boot training in April and is now in the Signal Corps.

Lester Taylor, merchant marine, left March 26, and was stationed at St. Petersburg, Florida. He finished his boot training April 27. He is now taking a 13-week specialized course.

Patriotic Program Offers Colorful Pageantry

The May Festival, one of the largest and most colorful exhibitions of school work the Pascagoula Schools have ever put on, took place Friday night, May 11, at eight o'clock.

Clad in white and wearing patriotic paper caps, the elementary school pupils from the fourth, fifth, and sixth grades of all schools marched to the grand stands while the high school band played the processional, "On the Grand Concourse," and "The Booster." The high school girls' chorus and representatives of the speech department followed. Mr. T. R. Wells acted as director of the program.

Each school presented its vocal numbers to an appreciative audience, but the most impressive numbers on the program were those in which all the students from all schools sang in unison. The young voices ringing out patriotic songs on the night air made an inspiring effect. The dramatic reading, concerned with a Russian scene, and the declamation on the subject "Dunkirk"—readings concerned with two of the great allies of the United States in the present war—fitted admirably into the patriotic theme of the festival.

The physical education department of the high school was represented by a parade of boys and girls carrying tennis rackets, bows and arrows, or other equipment used in the various activities that are a part of the department's work.

Rain threatened to mar the evening, but fortunately waited to pour down until after all the young participants were at home and in bed.

Glee Club Sponsors Musical Tea Given On May 3

A musical tea with Miss Gene Eason of the department of music of P.H.S. as hostess afforded a delightful afternoon to friends and relatives of Miss Eason's class on Thursday, May 3, in the school auditorium.

In the receiving line with Miss Eason were Mesdames Farnsworth and J. V. Ainsworth and Misses Katie Thompson and Kathryn Maxwell.

Students who took part in the musical program were D'Vonne Cudabac, Jeanne Whatley, Bonnie Sue Byrd, Mary Theresa Guillotte, Bonnie Chapman, Sarah Shemper, Merley Jones, Jr., Georgia Lee Souther, Billie Jean Williams, Gloria McKenzie, Rita Joyce Krebs, Norma Iverson, Emily Green, and the Girls' Chorus. Ushers were Zula Mae Crane, Frances Cudabac, Mary Alice Ditsworth, Bonadel Lander, and Jessie Ellen Krebs.

At the conclusion of the musical program, the hostess, accompanied by her guests went into the cafeteria where punch and cake were served by Katherine Wright, Mary Evelyn Eubanks, Cassie Lee Hagan, and Katie Belle Styron.

The table from which the punch was served was beautifully arranged with an enormous piece of ice serving as a punch bowl, which was centered in ferns, gardenias, and Easter lilies.

GRADUATING CLASS OF 1945 IS LARGEST IN HISTORY OF SCHOOL

The seniors of the 1945 class at P.H.S. were graduated May 28 as the largest class ever to leave the school The fifty-eight graduates conducted the exercises which were different from any other ever held in Pascagoula High in that the emphasis usually placed on class night was shifted to graduation. The students made the graduation speeches that formerly were given by outsiders.

The class made its processional march while the school orchestra played "The Triumphal March" from "Aida" by Verdi. After the class had taken their seats the Reverend J. L. Brantley of the Watts Memorial Baptist Church delivered the Invocation.

Ruth May, valedictorian of the class and mistress of ceremonies spoke on "The Light of the World." Henry Torjusen, salutatorian, make a talk on the subject, "The Guiding Light," in which he stressed the educational development of each individual and compared a Nazi youth with an American one.

The senior high chorus sang "America the Beautiful!"; then Oliver Ladnier talked on the topic, "What Hath God Wrought?"

Olen Heflin, president of the class, delivered a speech entitled "Speak the Speech I Pray You."

After Olen's talk, Harold Oliver discussed the American Constitution. His speech was "A Man Is A Man for A' That."

The chorus sang "Onward Ye Peoples" (Finlandia) by Sibelius.

Under the next heading, "Peace on Earth," Genevieve Moore spoke on "A Rendezvous With Destiny." Genevieve quoted these noble words:

"Here dead we lie because we did not choose
To live and shame the land from which we sprung.
Life, to be sure, is nothing much to lose;
But young men think it is, and we were young."

The chorus then sang "The Recessional" as arranged by Dekoven.

Mr. Gill, principal, presented the class to Mr. Wells, superintendent. Mr. Wells in turn presented the diplomas to the class.

Barbara Renfroe delivered the acceptance speech, "The Graduate's Creed."

Mr. Wells presented the different awards for scholarship. The Reverend Mr. Brantley said the benediction.

The exercises closed with the audience and graduates singing to the accompaniment of the orchestra, "The Star-Spangled Banner."

V-E Day Observed By Students Of P. H. S.

V-E Day was observed at Pascagoula High School by a religious service which was attended by both the senior and the junior high school students.

Sixty pupils of the Central Elementary School under the direction of Miss Kathryn Maxwell sang "My United States" and "I Hear America Singing."

Dr. J. C. Crane delivered the address. He read Psalm 46, the passage in the Bible which was read at the funeral of the late President Roosevelt, and Psalm 136. He then spoke of the fact that this day was one of the happiest in the history of the nation but said that it was not a day to be celebrated by rowdy hilarity. Rather it was a day in which to give thanks for the many things which have blessed us and in which to pray for the leaders of all nations that they may be able to carry on the war in the Pacific to a quick conclusion and that they may be able to secure the peace of the world for all time. Dr. Crane concluded his remarks with the quoting of Rudyard Kipling's "Recessional."

The audience, composed of about twelve hundred students and teachers, then sang "God Bless America" and were dismissed by Olen Heflin, president of the senior class, who presided over the meeting and introduced the speaker.

Nine students, selected from the junior and senior classes, held a forum on May 2 at the regular luncheon of the Pascagoula Rotary Club. The students discussed the problems of the youth of Pascagoula after the war is over.

The forum was interesting and entertaining to the Rotary members because the opinions expressed were clear and frank. The discussion reached its peak when the students came to the question, "Is juvenile delinquency the result of the parents' being too strick or of their being too lenient?" Henry Torjusen brought in a good thought when he said, "If your parents say you may not do something, you will do that thing or break your neck trying. But if a parent says you may do this thing but that he

Seniors Of '45 Give Plaque To School

A bronze plaque bearing the names of all P.H.S. boys and girls who made the supreme sacrifice in the service of their country will be the gift of the seniors of '45 to the school.

The class met in the little theatre to discuss the matter. Since bronze is unavailable at this time, the class was unable to buy the gift now but will leave the funds for a post-war purchase of the plaque.

Four boys whose names will appear in gold on the plaque are: Joseph Shephard, Douglas Hague, Stova Firth, and Alton Watts. If God wills, others will be added to this list; the class prays that only the four will be there.

DEATH MR. HELAIRE KREBS.

Died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Alice Barrazin, in Scranton, Miss., on September 7, 1900, Mr. Helaire Krebs, in the eighty-first year of his age.

The deceased was the son of Helaire Krebs and Irene Berinchause, and born May 18, 1819, at Pascagoula, Miss., and married at the same place on April 20, 1839, Miss Marie Louis Krebs.

There were twelve children born of this very happy marriage, nine of whom are living. Also as a result of this union there were sixty-four grand children and twenty-two great grand children.

Mr. Krebs was educated in the private schools of his native town, and by private tutors at home.

The funeral took place from the Catholic church Saturday morning, proceeding to the cemetery at Pascagoula, where his remains were laid to rest, Rev. Father Hipple officiated.

He was a devoted and consistent member of the Catholic church, and led a useful and exemplary life. His exalted virtues and noble traits of character adorned his long life and sheds honor upon his many descendants, to whom we extend our sympathy.

His piety assures us that he has earned the Christian's Blood Bought reward, and awaits a glad re-union with his loved ones in that Bright Beyond, where we trust we will all meet again. Requiescat in pace.

Talk of the Town

A dubious anniversary

It was exactly 57 years ago today that 24-year-old W. Guy Krebs Jr. of Pascagoula was captured by the Germans during the Battle of the Bulge.

Dan Davis

He served almost four months in a prisoner-of-war camp before being freed on Good Friday in 1945. When he was captured, he was a healthy 175 pounds. Upon his release, he was down to about 120 pounds because the Germans didn't have enough food to feed their own soldiers, much less their prisoners.

"We practically starved," he recalled. "I don't have any regrets, but I wouldn't want to go through it again."

Krebs, 81, recently was elected commander of the Department of Mississippi American Ex-Prisoners of War at the organization's annual convention in Jackson. His wife, Mimi, was appointed adjutant.

The Krebses are life members of the state organization and members of the Magnolia Chapter in Gulfport.

Krebs said there are about 325 ex prisoners of war still living in Mississippi and an estimated 27,500 nationwide.

Krebs recalled when he returned to Pascagoula after the war, he went to the rationing board in the old Palace Pharmacy building to get some sugar. He was told that his parents had already received their allotment.

"I came down and ran into Dr. McIlwain who asked if he could do anything for me. I told him about the sugar and he carried me into his office and gave me a prescription for five pounds of sugar."

Krebs family towns in Germany explored in new 32-page book

At one time so many people named Krebs lived in today's Pascagoula that a large area was called Krebsville. The progenitor of this large family, which claims many thousands of descendants in South Mississippi and throughout the country, was Hugo Ernestus Krebs, who came to present-day Jackson County from his home in Neumagen, Germany in the 1730s.

Regina Hines

A farmer, surgeon, slave-owner and inventor of the cotton gin — these and other details of his life here are known. He had at least 14 children by two wives. He first married Marie Josephe Simon La Pointe, daughter of Joseph Simon La Pointe, who owned a vast plantation. The vestige of that plantation is known as the Old Spanish Fort. His second wife was Marie Ann Chauvin de Joyeuse.

While the genealogy of the descendants of Hugo Ernestus Krebs has been traced, little is known of the lives of his ancestors. In September 1998, Krebs' sixth great-granddaughter, Jaqueline Sue Morris of Tucson, Ariz., traveled to Germany and conducted historical and genealogical research on the Krebs family and related lines.

Her a 32-page monograph, "Made Glorious Summer. The Family of My Father Hugo Ernestus Krebs of Neumagen, Germany," is being offered for sale to benefit the Jackson County Historical Society.

Beautifully illustrated with photos, drawings and copies of documents obtained in Germany, Morris' book provides historical background on the three towns where Krebs' ancestors lived and information about the families of his brothers and sisters and his parents' families.

Hugo Ernestus Krebs, born in 1714 in Neumagen, was one of the nine children of Johann Krebs and Anna Charitas Fritsch. His mother was born in Trittenheim and her mother, Catharina Winter, was born in nearby Leiwen.

The author documents the facts presented and has done extensive research that she generously passes on to other Krebs' descendants. With the town histories and information from the German church, genealogical and civil records, Krebs descendants can carry through the research on their branch of this large family through records available in libraries and archives, including the Krebs family files in the Pascagoula Public Library.

Copies of the book can be purchased for $20, which includes tax, at the Old Spanish Fort Museum, 10 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Wednesday through Sunday, and Sarah Polk Art, Antiques & Gifts, 619 Delmas Ave., Pascagoula.

Mail orders may be sent to the Jackson County Historical Society, 4602 Fort St., Pascagoula, MS 39567.

JEFFERSON-HEMINGS

For two centuries, rumors have been surfacing that President Thomas Jefferson had a sexual relationship with a slave, Sally Hemings. In recent years, a DNA study showed a genetic link between Sally's youngest son, Eston and a Jefferson male. Many theories have been given to support both sides of the issue.

The September 2001 number (Volume 89, No. 3) of the National Genealogical Society Quarterly, which reached members last week, is devoted to this controversial subject.

Articles written by several genealogical and historical scholars, explore various facets of the Jefferson-Hemings question.

The NGSQ, edited by Elizabeth Shown Mills, assisted by Gary Mills, may be read at several local libraries.

ADOPTION REGISTRY

People seeking lost parents, children or siblings often write to this column for help. Joyce Temple Barnett of Brandon, Miss., sees a need for a system to help these people and is starting a Mississippi Adoption Reunion Registry.

Without charge, she and other volunteers will help look up records that may lead to contact between parties affected by adoption who want to be reunited.

The registry will focus on Mississippi adoptees and their parents only. For more details, write Barnett at 617 North Harbor Drive, Brandon, MS 39047 for an application. Call or e-mail her at (601) 829-3078, or Joycebarnett@aol.com.

Send all correspondence to this column to "Branches & Twigs," The Mississippi Press, P.O. Box 849, Pascagoula, MS 39568, or e-mail, brtw20@ametro.net

James Penny and William Shaw. Value $1,592. John Plunket named his two brothers James and William Plunket as his heirs. Probate 94, No. 10S, bundle 3, July 17,1815.

PREVOST, JOHN. One document in French. The will of John Prevost dated July 28, 1815 leaving his separate property to Marianna Trahan, his wife. Provate 97, No. I O.S. bundle 3, filed July 28, 1815.

PREVOST, MARIANNA. Ond document, the will in French of Marianna Trahan. She is wife of John Prevost and wills her separate property to him. Dated July 28, 1815. Prob. 98, No. I O.S., bundle 3, filed July 28, 1815.

REINKE (REINECKE), FREDERICK. Frederick Reinecke made his will July 1, 1814 naming Mr. C. C. Staes of New Orleans administrator of his estate "to act in case of death for the best interest of my three sons: John Fredrick, George William and Franklin Lewis Reinecke". Petition of Rebecca Reinecke dated April 7, 1815 states her husband died in East Baton Rouge Parish, leaving property at Mrs. Duffins, Mr. Griffin, Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Converse and request an inventory be made. James Tysset and Patrice Leonard are witnesses. Felix de Armas and Joseph Berry, appraisers. It appears that the full name of the deceased is John Frederick and perhaps New Orleans was his home. Rebecca is appointed tutor on April 20, 1815 then on May 16, 1815 she relinquishes the tutorship of children forever and her right to the curatorship of the estate left by her husband. On May 16, 1815 Mr. Staes is named curator. He continues as such until July 17, 1827 when he asked to be released (See Prob. 118). Probate 82, No. I.O.S., Bdle. 3, filed Apr. 7, 1815.

REINECKE, REBECA. No. 118. Mrs. Rebecca Reinecke died in Baton Rouge about 8th November, 1815. Mr. C. C. Staes in a letter to the judge states that he has the three orphaned children of the Reineckes at his home in New Orleans. That he is an old friend of Mr. Reinecke and took them at his request. Mr. Staes has hopes of uniting the children with Mr. Reineckes' family in Europe. Her personal estate sold for $226.71 as ordered by Judge Tessier. (See Prob. 82) Probate 118, No. I O.S., bdl. 4, filed Nov. 10, 1815.

SCOTT, ELIZABETH. On 27th day of April 1815 Amos Thames, one of the justices of the peace, accompanied by Thomas Young and Daniel Smith went to residence of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, Sandy Creek in East Baton Rouge Parish. She died in March 1815 leaving 8 children. They took an inventory valued at $21.50. Children are: 1) Martha, 2) Mary, 3(Thornton, 4) Fleming, 5) Eveline, 6) Eliza, 7) Nancy, 8) Pricilla, 9) Rospsamon (Rosamund) of Probate 99 perhaps?) No Lucretia, however, in above list of 9 names. Prob. 85, No. I. O.S. bdl. 4, filed April 27, 1815.

SEE, ALEXANDER. Probate 104. On October 14, 1815 Judge Charles Tessier, after usual advertisement, offers estate of deceased. Alexander See died shortly before 29th day of September at plantation of Philip Hickey. He was a weaver. George Waggaman Esq. and Geo. Mather, appraisers. Adam Winthrop and JOseph Berry witnesses. The record ends with a petition jointly signed by Dona Maria Juana Guillory and her husband Don Agustin Moro, wherein they state to the Court that they have agreed to make the partition solicited by the wife, and that inasmuch as their properties are located in the District of Mobile, they beg the Court to issue an order for the Commander of said District, Don Pedro Favrot, instructing him to make the intended partition in accordance with the law and in view of the documents which they will present separately.

The Court, after having studied the case, issued and forwarded the order as petitioned by Dona Juana Guillory and her husband Don Agustin Moro, and, since these proceedings have ended, ordered Don Luis Liotau, the Judicial Appraiser, to make an itemized statement of their cost, to be paid by both parties equally.

Don Luis Lioteu complied with the Court order, and presented the aforementioned statement which amounted to 118 reales.

PROCEEDINGS INSTITUTED BY DONA MARIA JUANA GUILLORY, FOR THE PURPOSE OF OBTAINING THE PARTITION OF THE PROPERTIES SHE OWNS JOINTLY WITH HER HUSBAND AUGUSTIN MORO, FROM WHOM SHE HAS BEEN TEMPORARILY SEPARATED BY DECREE FROM THE ECCLESIASTICAL TRIBUNAL IN THE DIVORCE SUIT INSTITUTED AGAINST HER SAID HUSBAND.

The record begins with a petition filed by Dona Maria Juana Guillory, wherein she requests the Court to order that she be furnished with a certified copy of the decree of separation issued by the Ecclesiastical Tribunal composed by Father Antonio de Sedella, auxiliary ecclesiastical judge of Louisiana, in the divorce suit she instituted against her husband Augustin Moro.

The Court granted the above petition, and Don Estevan de Quinones, Notary Public, issued the requested certified copy, which was delivered to the petitioner.

Dona Maria Juana Guillory then petitioned the Court alleging that as evidenced by the certified copy presented, she is temporarily separated from her husband; wherefore, she begs the Court to order that a partition of their properties, which consist of negro slaves and cattle located in a piece of land known as Lago de San Juan de Pascagulas, belonging to the King and to which they have no title, be made, and that petitioner's husband be restrained from leaving the city until the requested partition has been performed.

The Court ordered as petitioned by Dona Maria Juana Guillory.

AMOUNT OF INSURANCE

Mr. Joseph G. Krebs,
431 Porter Ave.,
Pascagoula, Miss.

March 30, 1929.

You are hereby notified that the Supreme Lodge of Liberty Life Assurance Society at its meeting on March 29th and 30th acted favorably upon the proposal submitted to it by the Board of Directors and voted to convert the Society into an old line stock life insurance company. The enclosed clipping from the January-February-March issue of The Record explains this proposal in detail and also contains a copy of the Alabama law under which the conversion will be made.

The name by which the Society is now known does not properly describe an old line life insurance company and the Supreme Lodge changed the name to Liberty National Life Insurance Company. The Company will be a continuation of the Society and the rights of the present members will not be affected by the change. The Company will continue to issue the Perfection Endowment certificate and the positions of those members holding this form of certificate will not be disturbed in any way.

Under the Alabama law the right to subscribe to the capital stock is reserved exclusively to the members for a period of ninety days, each member being entitled to subscribe to that proportion of the capital stock which his or her insurance bears to the total amount of insurance in force. Under the Resolution of the Supreme Lodge a sufficient amount of capital stock was authorized to provide for one share of stock for each $500.00 insurance in force.

The amount of your insurance is shown above and this regulates the amount of stock set aside exclusively for you. For example: If you hold $1000.00 insurance you are entitled to two shares of stock; if you hold $2500.00 insurance you are entitled to five shares of stock. The par value of each share is $5.00, but as the law requires that a surplus be paid in, the stock is to be sold for $7.50 per share, thus creating a surplus of fifty per centum of the capital. The capital and surplus will go into the treasury of the Company and there will be no promotion expense.

Any member wishing to exercise this option should detach the Stock Purchase Warrant appearing below, fill it in and return it to the Society with remittance for the amount of his allotment at the rate of $7.50 per share. This must be done prior to July 1st, 1929. All checks are to be made payable to Southern Bank and Trust Company, Trustee, and payments will be held by the Bank until the conversion has been completed.

It is the wish of the Supreme Lodge that in so far as possible the stock may be owned by the present members of the Society. Any member who fails to exercise this exclusive right within ninety days will forfeit all right to purchase stock, and the Board of Directors will sell such stock at the price named above. Whether or not any member subscribes to the stock of the Company will in no way affect his rights under his certificates of insurance.

Fraternally yours,

Attest:

President.

Secretary.

LARSEN

Ernest Harold Larsen Sr., 89, of Pascagoula, Miss., passed away at his home, surrounded by his family on Sunday, Sept. 21, 2003. He was the youngest son of the late Arnt Joseph and Melvina Marie Krebs Larsen.

He was a lifelong resident of Pascagoula preceded in death by his brother, Percy Larsen, and sisters, Hilda Owens, Gladys Slade, Manilla Dannelly, Madge Corbett, Eunice Brown, Odessa Williams and Aline Rolls.

Larsen was a 1935 graduate of Pascagoula High School. As captain of the 1933 and 1934 Razzle-Dazzle Pascagoula Panther football team, he guided them to successive undefeated seasons, which resulted in an invitation to play in the inaugural Toy Bowl game in New Orleans in 1934. He was selected as the game's most valuable player. During his junior and senior years, he was a first team selection on the All-State football squad. He was chosen as captain both years. Ernest was honored as first team halfback on the All-Southern team during his senior year. These outstanding accomplishments earned him a full football scholarship to Louisiana State University.

He retired from Ingalls Shipbuilding after 39 years of service to enjoy the things dearest to him — his family, his church, fishing, woodworking and gardening. As a member of Our Lady of Victories Parish, he served as an Eucharistic minister for many years. Ernest was a member of the Knights of Columbus, Council #1605. He was an active member of the Parents Association of Singing River Industries in Pascagoula.

He is survived by his beloved wife of 68 years, Pauline Bosarge Larsen. He is also survived by their nine children, Beverly (Jim) Fuss, Ellen (A.J.) Pusey, Ernie (Cae) Larsen, Polly Grubbs, Betty (Charles) Talley, Gaye Branch, Kenny (Carolyn) Larsen, Ricci (Dee) Larsen, and Corky Larsen; 26 grandchildren; 25 great-grandchildren; also special caretakers, Cornel Mosely, Virginia Isom and Marie Logan.

Visitation will be from 6 to 9 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 23, at the O'Bryant-O'Keefe Funeral Home in Pascagoula. Rosary will be at 8 p.m. The funeral Mass will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday, Sept. 24, at OLV Church. Pallbearers will be his son, Corky, and his 14 grandsons.

Interment will follow at Jackson County Memorial Park.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations are made to Our Lady of Victories Parish Building Fund.

"We're bird watchers that have found a new bird." — Walker Roberts, history buff, of Tampa, Florida

A look at Pas history

■ Ship models have researchers asking questions

By TODD TWILLEY
Mississippi Press Staff

GAUTIER — An ignored part of Pascagoula's boat building history was explored here this weekend, but a mystery still remains Walker Roberts, of Tampa, has been studying ships for 30 years. This weekend, he and a colleague, Russell Barnes were at the home of Tiny Portas in Gautier taking measurements of 24 Pascagoula Schooner half-models.

"We're bird watchers that have found a new bird," Roberts said.

Barnes, of Biloxi, who has a master's degree in history, specializes in Coastal labor.

The half-models they were examining represent a unique time in history, when schooners were not built based on blueprints or any hand drawn plans. Instead, ship designers would carve boards that represented the hull of the ship. Since the ships were symmetrical, the result was the model of half of a ship.

The Pascagoula Schooner, Barnes said, has often been a type of schooner overlooked by experts in the field. The chosen study has been the Biloxi Schooner.

The Pascagoula Schooners were built at six Pascagoula shipyards: Krebs, Poitevin, Flechas, D'Angelo, Ferdinand Walker and Arnold Walker.

Many of the Pascagoula Schooners constructed by the S. E. Krebs and Son Shipyard were for the Starfish and Oyster Company in Mobile.

Krebs' granddaughter, Tiny Portas, has many of her grandfather's half-models, and has researched them to find out which models went with each ship.

"We spent 11 hours at one sitting in Atlanta," Portas said of her research.

The process is excruciating and time consuming, she said, with no cross referencing, renamed ships and only the ship's identification number to go by.

Barnes said the Pascagoula ships were far fewer in number than their counterparts elsewhere on the Coast, but the Pascagoula Schooners were constructed up until the 1950s.

The last Biloxi Schooner was built in 1929, according to Barnes.

That, Barnes said, is where the mystery comes.

"We don't yet know why they were putting sails on them up until the 1950s," Barnes said.

BURTON "MAC" McGINTY and his wife Leona spend more time together now that the days of working for a living are over.

McGintys served county with dignity and pride

By ANN PECK
Mississippi Press Staff

Burton Edward McGinty's involvement in community work in Pascagoula and Jackson County is so well known that it is easy to forget that he was successful in the workplace, too.

He had wide support should he have chosen to run for District 3 supervisor when J.C. May chose not to seek re-election.

Leona Krebs McGinty, Pascagoula's city clerk for 21 years, is equally well known, more for achievements in her career field than in her out-of-office hours although she too has been active in the community.

Their marriage has thrived for 42 years and now that both are retired they have time to enjoy doing more things together than was possible during their working years. They have traveled extensively in the past but now they can go whenever ... and whenever ... the whim moves ... holiday in one of their favorite places, Branson, Mo., where they can indulge their love of country and western music.

McGinty is best known, in Pascagoula and east Jackson County, that is, as Mac. In Ocean Springs and west county areas he is Burton.

"If the caller asks for Burton, I know it is someone from Ocean Springs," he said.

McGinty was born in Sybrell, Va., but the family moved after his father's sawmill burned down and he grew up in Ocean Springs.

He went into the Merchant Marine right after graduating from Ocean Springs High School in 1942. His first duty was on an ocean-going tugboat in the Army Transportation Corps and he followed the Allies from Africa to Italy to France.

When his tugboat was off Sardinia it hit a mine and sank off Cagliari in October 1944. He and another Ocean Springs man, Jimmy Guice, were among the 14 members of the 27-man crew who survived.

McGinty was hospitalized a short time in a military hospital in Cagliari for treatment of head lacerations and a back injury.

After returning to the States, he was assigned to duty in the Pacific war theater. He was on Guam when the Japanese surrendered.

He met Leona Krebs in 1948 when she was working in the shipyard secretarial pool. They were married the next year and they celebrated their 42nd wedding anniversary Nov. 18.

McGinty joined Texas Construction in 1952 as yard superintendent on construction of the U.S. 90 drawbridge over the East Pascagoula. He went to Kennedy Engine Company in 1955 as a master mechanic and worked up to sales manager and credit manager, the positions he held until he retired April 1.

In the 1950s, he joined the National Guard unit that was formed in Pascagoula by Maj. Karl Wiesenburg and Second Lt. Barney Mathis. Fellow members of the unit included the late (Judge) Robert T. Mills, now-Chancery Judge Robert Oswald and now-State Sen. Claude Bilbo. He remained with the Guard for 16 years including the eight months it was in federal service in 1960 during the Berlin crisis.

That 11 months was the only time he was on leave from the Pascagoula Police Auxiliary he and C.C. "Bubba" Dupont organized in 1957 at the request of Chief of Police Walter Lee Pol. ... was the unit's first and only ... in which capacity he con... to head what now is known ... police reserve.

... persons in law en... ...nt today chose their ... ...ds after being members of the Pascagoula police auxiliary/reserve.

McGinty's pleasure in the accomplishments of former members of the unit is evident and justified.

Five of the six men holding captain's rank in the Pascagoula Police Department were in the unit. Former police majors R.H. "Robbie" Maxwell and Robert McIlrath were in the group before they joined the PPD. Maxwell now is on U.S. Sen. Trent Lott's staff and McIlrath is in charge of security for Pascagoula schools.

Also, McGinty notes, both of Gautier's police chiefs — Bill Thicksten, the first one and Allen Johnson, the second and present one — were members of his unit.

He also is proud of what his police reservists do for the city and its police department and of what the community, particularly the business community, has done to show its support of the reserve.

"We haven't had to make a fund drive in 20 years," McGinty said. "We have good support from the community."

McGinty was May's appointee to the county fair board 21 years ago and May says he would appoint him again if he had the chance.

"I don't know of anyone who could have done a better job," May said. "He's the grounds man looking after the rides and, as head of the police reserves, he sees to security. I don't know how many hours he spends there every day all week long making sure things run smooth."

McGinty has been president of what is now known as the Jackson County Blue Ribbon Fair Association for two years.

He is co-chairman of the Pascagoula Housing Authority to which he was appointed by McGinty has been president of what is now known as the Jackson County Blue Ribbon Fair Association for two years.

He is co-chairman of the Pascagoula Housing Authority to which he was appointed by then-Mayor "Tippy" O'Bryant in 1982 and he has been a member of the Pascagoula Port Commission since his appointment by Gov. Bill Allain seven years ago.

WEDDING DAY — Burton "Mac" McGinty and wife Leona Krebs are shown on their wedding day Nov. 18, 1949.

McGinty, like the McGintys' close friends and frequent traveling companions, the late Dr. Nicholas DiSanti and Mrs. DiSanti, has been active in working on behalf of the mentally retarded. He was a Jackson County youth group's choice as Man of the Year one year for his work with the retarded.

He is a life member of the local American Legion post and Elks' lodge and was on the Young Executives Board of First National Bank of the South at one time.

He is president of American Bonded and Storage Co. which built and owns the big warehouse on Krebs Avenue between Frederic and Magnolia street in Pascagoula.

The Bo-Hop Stirrup Club of which he is a founding member would be a story in itself. It is a group of 10 men (the only woman whose presence is permitted in the club room is the building's owner, Ellen Cole) whose guests at the weekly meeting are prominent in politics, the professions or business. The guest may be roasted or toasted but he is always grilled.

It was at a meeting of the Bo-Hop club that he announced that he would not run for May's supervisor office.

"It was understood that when J.C., retired I would run," he said. "Leona didn't want me to run. J.C. did."

Obviously, Leona won.

Mrs. McGinty was born in Pascagoula, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo F. Krebs, and she has lived here all her life. She is proud her heritage as a member of Pascagoula's oldest family.

She was salutatorian of her Our Lady of Victories High School Class and started her working life as a member of the secretarial pool at Ingalls where she was employed three years and where she met "Mac."

She worked for the City of Pascagoula from 1948 until her retirement July 1, 1986. During that time she worked up from being a clerk working elections under City Clerk V.P. DeJean to becoming the city clerk who, to many, was the quintessential city clerk.

She worked as a clerk in city hall until she was appointed a deputy city clerk in 1953 working with Mrs. Marion Wilson, mother of former city recreation director Pat Wilson.

"In 1962, I was appointed deputy city clerk to Vincent Ros, one of the finest men I ever knew," she said. "In 1965 when the new form of governme... (council-manager) was adopte... I was appointed by that counc... as city clerk and remained cit... clerk through to retirement.

"I was the first female cit... clerk in Pascagoula history an... served the longest time of an... clerk."

During her time as city cler... she was in charge of city ele... tions, voter registratio... personnel, finance, accountin... clerk to the city council and a... offices inside city hall.

Now, she said, there is a... individual to head each d... partment.

"I can't conceive not bein... concerned with finances as ci... clerk," she commented.

Our Opinion
A reporter's legacy

The job of a journalist, said American newspaper legend H.L. Mencken, is to "comfort the afflicted and afflict the comfortable."

Albin Krebs shook the complacent and consoled the downtrodden from his days at Ole Miss, throughout his newspaper life. That's what made him one of the foremost reporters ever produced by Mississippi.

No one is more deserving to have a scholarship in his honor, aimed at helping young journalists at his alma mater.

Reporters are also expected to be fearless in pursuit of truth. So it was with Krebs, whose courage knew no bounds.

While a student at Ole Miss, more than a decade before James Meredith sought to become the first African-American to enroll, Krebs, then a reporter for The Daily Mississippian, called for the desegregation of the university's law school and graduate programs.

It was always said that he was a journalist ahead of his time, and his Oxford days were evidence of that. Like other courageous southern newspapermen of the time, who saw segregation and discrimination for the evils they were, Krebs endured the brickbats of the bigoted, and continued to take strong stands.

Krebs was as much a part of the courageous journalists of our region — Ralph McGill in Atlanta, Hodding Carter Jr. in Greenville, John Seigenthaler in Nashville and Ira Harkey in Pascagoula, and others — who understood that racial division and bigotry shackled the South, keeping it from its full potential, economically, socially and politically.

He began his career at this newspaper, when it was known as The Chronicle Star. He then went on to further distinguish himself at our sister paper, the New Orleans Times-Picayune, as well as for United Press International and at the New York Times.

At the Times, Krebs covered some of the world's major stories — the tragedy of the cruise ship Andrea Doria in 1956 and tremors of the civil rights movement.

Later, as the paper's chief advance obituary writer, he met some of the world's prominent figures, presidents and poets, writers and entertainers, including Lyndon Johnson, Eudora Welty and Truman Capote.

With his work, Krebs set the industry standard in the difficult art of obituary writing, a craft requiring accuracy with an elegant touch.

Hopefully, students at Ole Miss who benefit from Krebs' $186,000 endowment will learn of his commitment and compassion.

The words of Krebs' sister, Anne Mansfield of Pascagoula, provide a lesson for journalists of every age.

"He was way ahead of his time," she said. "He said he always printed the truth. And no matter who he worked for, if he couldn't print the truth, forget it."

But beyond the printed word, as Mansfield said, Krebs took the criticism. "Like a man," Mansfield said, even after being booed at his 1951 Ole Miss graduation for his courageous civil rights stand.

For Krebs, that required the courage to forgive. The endowment at Ole Miss is evidence of boundless forgiveness and boundless love for a university and a state that in the face of hard truth turned their back on him.

Albin Krebs' life teaches a lesson more powerful than any classroom lecture or textbook can offer.

Pascagoula School District honors 'best of the best'

■ 24 students earn perfect scores on state tests

By DEBBIE ANGLIN
Mississippi Press Staff

PASCAGOULA — Tuesday night, the Pascagoula School Board recognized 24 students who earned perfect scores on the State Subject Area Tests.

Superintendent Hank Bounds announced that Trent Lott Middle School had the highest scale scores on the tests, ranking first among all other middle schools or high schools in the state. The district also ranked second on the Biology I test, fifth in U.S. history, 10th on the Algebra I test and 34th in English.

Students honored for their perfect scores for Algebra I were Brittany Johnson and Brandon Simpson of Gautier High; Sandi Brushaber, Aaron Chu and John Moore from Pascagoula High School; Evan Tyler and Amy Johnston from Colmer Middle School; Sara Hanson from Gautier Middle; and Jessica Bosarge, Marquale Fields, Audrey Hughes, Jamee Jones, Caroline McCormick, Drew Overby and Francisco Valasquez from Trent Lott Middle.

In Biology I, Hanna Skewes of GHS and Donovan McMurray of PHS were recognized for their perfect scores. GHS students Jordan Guy, Chris Miller, Adam Pearson and Genna Steadman as well as PHS students Jacob Foster, Justin Lovorn and Erin Smith were recognized for their perfect scores on the U.S. history test.

"Tonight we are recognizing the best of the best," Bounds said. "When you have the best test scores, it always seems the best and brightest students rise to the top. I can't think of a better way to start the school year than celebrating success from the previous year and can't think of a better way to challenge those students who are going to be taking the tests in upcoming days."

Bounds commended not only the students for their efforts, but the teachers and the parents for their involvement and encouragement in their children's lives. Each of the school board members also praised the students for their hard work.

"It's important that you step in and be the example because role models are important to your peers and to your community," said Mike Concannon, board president.

Bounds also updated the board on the progress being made to borrow $8.5 million for capital improvements on the district's facilities. In addition to looking at the traditional loans, he is also exploring the possibility of doing a combination of a traditional note and capital appreciation.

"It's like a zero coupon bond. The interest accrues like a traditional bond, but you only pay interest once a year," he said. "The down side is that you pay a little higher interest rate, but the upside is that you gain more capital."

Bounds said he hopes to present a note of resolution at the Sept. 9 board meeting which will include the general terms of the bond, the form of the note, and the purchase agreement.

"I feel confident that we will be able to get more money than we originally thought because we are doing something in the state that really hasn't been done before except by Jackson Public Schools," he said.

The school board also approved the revised drug screening of athletes and now includes students participating co-curricular activities such as band and choir. The policy states that random testing will be conducted weekly throughout the school year and students selected will be done by lottery drawing from all students enrolled in interscholastic athletic and/or co-curricular programs.

Up to 10 percent of the students will be selected for testing throughout the year. If a student tests positive and a first violation is declared, the student will be ineligible to participate in the sport or co-curricular activity for a minimum of 21 days. During this time, the student must be enrolled in a Drug Assistance Education program at the parents' expense.

At the end of the period, the student must be declared physically safe in order to resume participation by a licensed physician at the parents' expense.

If a student successfully returns from a first violation, he will be retested at the district's expense at least three times within the calendar year. A second violation will result in the student being suspended from participation in his sport or activity for one calendar year.

If a student turns himself in for drug/alcohol usage, it will not be considered a violation. But the student will be ineligible to participate in the sport or activity until he has enrolled in the Drug Assistance Education Program and must be declared physically safe to return to participate by a licensed physician.

If a student refused to take the drug test after being randomly, it will be considered a violation. No student will be penalized academically for testing positive for illegal drug use.

Marching to Krebs' different drumbeat

I was ashamed this past week when I discovered I knew nothing about Pascagoula native Albin J. Krebs' legacy as a newspaperman.

During my teenage years in Pascagoula, I dreamed of becoming a rock star, not the social reformer Mr. Krebs obviously had his sights on while a young man here in the late 1940s.

As editor of the Ole Miss newspaper his senior year, Krebs stood against racial injustice and demanded equality. He put that in print 11 years before the National Guard was called in during James Meredith's historic enrollment.

That took guts and more bravery that many of us only dream of having. I feel an ulcer coming on if I misspell someone's name or tack on an extra zero on a monetary figure.

I pride myself on having a pretty firm grasp on Mississippi's history, but Krebs' actions and illustrious career was news to me, and that was upsetting because he did so much for so many, which is why we journalists do what we do.

Brad Crocker

Krebs' editorial resulted in crosses being burned outside his dormitory and other threats from his fellow students, including catcalls and boos as he received his diploma.

Rocky Byrd, an Ole Miss football player from Pascagoula, was among those who rallied around Krebs and forced bigots to rethink their possible retaliations.

But Albin Krebs stayed defiant in a time in Mississippi, and the Old South, when such views could land you in the morgue. He stuck to his guns and we're all better off because he did.

His family's stories about him inspired me to take pride in being from Pascagoula but also to remember how important my job is.

After reality smacked me around in the California rock world, I eventually attended college and got a degree from USM in English, not journalism, because I wanted to be a music critic.

The other aspect of Albin Krebs' career involved his role as an editor at The New York Times, where he met with many presidents, entertainers, artists, celebrities, world leaders and so many more people in the news from the mid-20th Century until his retirement in 1989.

His life included eating red beans and rice with Louis Armstrong and his wife and talking guns with President Harry S. Truman, to mention only a few instances.

In short, Krebs covered the people who helped make America great, entertaining and controversial, much like the way in which he was viewed at Ole Miss.

And by doing that, he became, in his own way, one of those historic people as well because he was truly a worldly man.

I revere Albin Krebs and envy him at the same time because I wanted to be part of the same world he lived in.

His sister, Anne Mansfield, said Albin worked his way through college. After his wife and son died during his stint at the Times, he would work holidays for people who had families.

His flair for writing was second-to-none. He could get to the guts of a story and present it in a fashion that many journalists aspire to having.

When you couple Krebs' social work, which continued throughout his lifetime, with his panache and love for telling the life stories of so many important people, you can't help but envy the man.

I wish I could have met Mr. Krebs before his death last year. I'll settle for the next best thing — his work — and I recommend anyone looking for a good and worthy read do the same.

His nephew, Circuit Judge Bob Krebs, said Albin never lost his sense of place and was proud to be from Pascagoula and maintained the principles he learned here all his life.

I did want to change the world when I was younger, but became complacent with covering my hometown.

But now, with Albin Krebs and other local news pioneers like Ira Harkey to look up to, I may get back around to it after all.

4. "Negroes Who Didn't Know Their Place": Early Attempts at Integration

In October 1950, the editor of the Mississippian endorsed racial integration. Though two hundred Negroes attended previously all-white southern colleges and universities, Ole Miss remained completely white. Defying the state's rigid policy of segregation in higher education, Albin Krebs declared, "We believe that qualified Negroes should be allowed to enter the School of Law and any other professional schools." Pointing to recent events in other southern states, Krebs predicted that Negroes would eventually apply to Ole Miss, and, although Mississippi might be the last state to have its segregation practices in higher education challenged, Krebs believed that the U.S. Supreme Court would order the admission of Negroes. The "professional schools will have to open their doors to qualified applicants of that race," concluded the editor, because the Supreme Court had "ruled that in the field of education, the pigment of a man's skin must have nothing to do with the measurement of his ability." The Jackson Daily News proclaimed Krebs's editorial "the first open statement advocating admission of Negroes to the University of Mississippi."[1]

For Krebs, the end of segregation in graduate programs provided "the only answer to our age-old problem of 'the Negro.' " He invoked the "principles of justice for all, of fair play, of dignity of the individual," as well as the Constitution and Christian values. More practically, he argued that better education would enable blacks to elevate themselves and thereby help the entire state progress.[2]

Anticipating criticism, Krebs denied that his proposal had anything to do with racial segregation. "That's another question," he suggested, "but we think it poses no real problem here. Segregation is simply a matter of choice. Southerners will continue to pick their own associates, no doubt until the end of time." Fully expecting that the " 'professional Southerner,' who mourns the death of [Senator Theodore G.] Bilbo and believes in an Aryan philosophy of race, will rant and shout and scream" against the admission of Negroes, Krebs dismissed their objections and pointed out that "a democratic majority of the people in this country want justice and a better democracy extended everywhere, and their will will be done. And rightly so."[3]

Krebs's heretical stance derived from many complicated sources that included his family background, his religion, his personal racial experiences, his general editorial policy, and his sexuality. Raised a Roman Catholic in the predominantly Protestant coastal town of Pascagoula, Krebs may have been particularly alert to religious prejudice. Once a friend admitted that he did not expect Krebs to understand the religious themes in a movie because Krebs was not a Christian but a Catholic. More often indirect and subtle, the anti-Catholic attitudes sensitized Krebs to the feelings of other minorities and prepared him to defend the oppressed.[4]

One of Krebs's editorials defended a religious minority at Ole Miss. A professor had badgered a student who arrived late to class with a series of questions: "Your initials are S. A., aren't they? What's the 'S' for, Samuel? . . . How about the 'A'? What does it stand for? Abraham? . . . I notice you came in late today. Who are you, anyway, the lost child of Jerusalem?" Krebs blasted the remarks as a "stupid, vicious attack." Although the student apparently made no objection, Krebs protested the "bigoted remarks" and "anti-Semitic jibes." The professor was, according to Krebs, "obviously too stupid and narrow-minded to be teaching in a state university."[5]

A racial incident after his freshman year made quite an impression on Krebs. During the summer, he and a couple of friends journeyed by bus to New York City. On their return trip, an older man boarded and proceeded toward the back of the bus where custom dictated that Negroes should ride. When the bus driver told him he could not sit back there with the "niggers," the dignified man simply replied, "I belong back here." Even though the man could have passed for white and sat in the front of the bus, he chose to sit with his fellow Negroes in the rear. The cruelty embarrassed Krebs. Privileged by his skin color, he had witnessed the meanness of segregation and the indignity of discrimination.[6]

Initially uninvolved in fraternities, Krebs joined the staff of the Mississippian in his first semester, and it became a major part of his life. As editor he declared a bold editorial policy: "We intend to wield that sword and wield it often. We intend to use it to cut down anything that stands in the way of progress or freedom of thought and expression." He expected that "this sword, this voice, will be used to criticize, to cut into and expose to view good and bad, despite the fact that some will suffer for it." Disparaging the "lily-livered editor who has a spine like that of a jelly-fish," Krebs promised not to straddle fences or hug the middle of the road.[7]

Before calling for integration, Krebs wrote nonconformist editorials on related racial issues, though without much controversy. Standing for First Amendment rights of free expression, for example, he criticized the University of California student bookstore for banning Little Black Sambo because it caricatured Negroes. Krebs could not imagine "anyone forming hate patterns by reading" the childhood classic. He also lauded Dr. Ralph Bunche for winning the Nobel Peace Prize and declared, "We Americans should feel a great deal of pride in the knowledge that Dr. Bunche is one of us." Claiming the selection committee "could not have chosen a more deserving man," he noted that Bunche "rose from very modest circumstances, against almost insurmountable odds. He is the son of a barber. He is also the grandson of a slave."[8]

At a time when the state and the nation were in the throes of an intense campaign against disloyal Americans, Krebs editorialized against loyalty oaths and attempts to control communists. He denounced the McCarran Internal Security Act because it "in effect made lawful the very storm-trooper tactics we fought against in World War II. . . . [and] forbids Americans to exercise some of their basic rights." A required loyalty oath for state employees struck Krebs as innocuous, but he claimed that "free men ought not to be forced to say they are loyal." Krebs concluded, "We've become so war-hysterical, so Red-scared, that we're hunting witches and burning innocent people in the process."[9] Even in the home of ardent anticommunists Senator James Eastland and Representative John Rankin, Krebs's pointed pronouncements provoked little critical reaction.

Although the young Krebs did not discuss his opinions much even with his parents, he did find support for his dissenting views. During his high school years, he worked as a stringer for the weekly Pascagoula Chronicle, where Easton King and Ira Harkey mentored him. In the 1950s Harkey gained a reputation as a liberal on racial matters; in 1963 he would win a Pulitzer Prize for his editorials. Krebs found their progressive outlook compatible with his own emerging ideas.[10]

Krebs's unorthodox views may also have been affected by his uncertainty about his own sexuality. Although as an adult Krebs became openly homosexual, his commentaries in college demonstrated his inability or unwillingness to recognize or accept his sexual orientation and his resulting discomfort. For a student journalist of 1950, he wrote inordinately about women and sex. His newspaper humor, for example, usually involved sexually suggestive, but aggressively heterosexual, comments. Women's breasts seemed especially to fascinate Krebs.[11]

The writer's preoccupation with sex proved that he had, as he admitted, "given the matter a lot of thought." His compulsive commentary revealed his intention to appear thoroughly masculine, to avoid drawing attention to his sexuality, and to hide his own ambivalence. Ole Miss in the early 1950s did not tolerate homosexuality. In the spring of 1950, when Krebs became editor of the newspaper, university discipline forced three homosexual students and one faculty member to leave the university. Even if he had wanted to, Krebs could not have publicly discussed his homosexuality, but his own sexual repression may have made him sensitive to the oppression of excluded or persecuted groups, particularly black Americans.[12]

His startling editorial on integration in the fall of 1950, like his other uses of the editorial sword, presented a reasoned, even cautious position. He did not expect any reaction to comments on well-known current events. For more than a decade the NAACP had waged a legal battle against segregation in higher education, particularly in graduate and professional programs. In its legal challenges, the NAACP argued that states had not fulfilled the "separate but equal" requirements of Plessy v. Ferguson. In June 1950, four months before Krebs's editorial, the Supreme Court further explicated the Plessy standard in two NAACP cases. Holding that a separate law school in Houston was not equal to the University of Texas law school, the Court directed the University of Texas to admit Heman Marion Sweatt, the black applicant. On the same day, it held that segregating a black graduate student within the University of Oklahoma—at cafeteria tables, in classrooms, and in the library—violated the Fourteenth Amendment's mandate of equal protection of the law for all citizens. In the two cases, the Court did not overrule Plessy's separate-but-equal principle but made the standard nearly impossible to achieve.[13]

The court decisions did not escape the attention of southerners. In 1948 the Mississippian surveyed students about admitting Negro graduate and professional students to Ole Miss. Though one law student conceded that the Supreme Court would probably compel the university to accept Negroes, most students insisted on segregation. Opinions ranged from a curt "Hell no!" to a more dispassionate "No, but equal opportunity should be offered to the Negroes." One senior from Duck Hill demanded, "Keep them separated," while another replied, "Hell no! I'm a confirmed Rebel." A more restrained law student opposed admitting blacks because "it would be the beginning toward a deplorable end."[14]

Mississippi newspapers also followed the Supreme Court. In addition to carrying news stories, the Oxford and Tupelo newspapers, for example, commented on the 1950 decisions. Like other editors, Albin Krebs followed the developing story. The Mississippian repeated a report from the Jackson Daily News that originally ran in the Jackson Advocate, a conservative black weekly newspaper: a Negro would soon apply to the university's law school. Frustrated by repeatedly failing the state bar exam, blacks wanted to go to the Ole Miss law school to gain automatic admission to the bar.[15] The subject of Krebs's editorial, therefore, did not surprise his readers.

The day following Krebs's October 27 editorial, the state's newspapers reacted vehemently with front-page stories. In the evening of the day Krebs's editorial appeared, Chancellor J. D. Williams issued a brief statement that Krebs "does not represent the University. He cannot speak for the university, and he does not. State law requires segregation, and that's our position." Except for his cool and measured recognition of state policy, the chancellor did his best to avoid taking a position on racial segregation.[16] Once again, Williams hoped the controversy would, if left alone, quickly disappear. But it did not.

Three days later, on a Monday evening, a crowd demonstrated outside Krebs's dormitory. A few dozen students sang, "We'll hang Albin Krebs from a sour apple tree," and shouted, "We want Krebs." Hearing the disturbance, other students poured out of the dorms. Chanting "Hotty Toddy," the Ole Miss cheer, about forty students signed a petition to remove Krebs from office. Someone stuck in the lawn between two dorms a five-foot-tall cross with an oil-soaked sheet wrapped around it. Set afire, it blazed in the night, and when the fire subsided a student threw a can of gasoline on it, and flames shot twenty feet upwards. In the light of the burning cross, one student read Krebs's editorial to the crowd. When Krebs walked from the Mississippian office toward his dorm, a football player from Pascagoula told him to go to his room where he and his friends would protect him. Fearing physical danger, Krebs complied. One observer considered the event more of a pep rally than a serious protest, and a demonstrator reportedly told Krebs, "We want to burn a cross. . . . We're just having some fun." In the wake of the cross-burning, Krebs hoped people in other parts of the nation "will not seize on this as an opportunity to cry: 'There has been another cross-burning in Mississippi,' and point a finger at us."[17]

Newspapers reported that two thousand students had demonstrated, and the editor got calls of support from other parts of the nation. In another statement about the "unfortunate incident" prompted by Krebs's "unfortunate" editorial, Chancellor Williams maintained that the "students were exercising the same prerogative in voicing their opinion as Mr. Krebs was in writing the editorial." Williams refused to be drawn into the effort to remove the editor because it was "the province of the students, and not of the University administration." Upon investigation, the administration learned that the demonstration involved only about two hundred students and was "nothing more than a 'bubbling over of animal spirits,' and that this was a chance to have fun." According to one report, the hilarity "stemmed from a lack of something else to do."[18]

Student reaction continued throughout the next week. The participation of some of his new fraternity brothers in the protests particularly hurt Krebs. Even more troubling, his roommate, who worked on the newspaper, moved out.

Students made occasional derogatory comments directly to Krebs, but most voiced their opposition in letters to the editor. Elmore D. Greaves Jr. committed to Negro inferiority and racial inequality, denied that the Negro was capable of "sustaining modern civilization and culture." He also dismissed Krebs's appeals to Christianity and reminded him of nineteenth-century Christian defenses of slavery. Greaves called on the South to "defend her civilization —preferably by reason, but if necessary by force." One student denied any contradiction in being a Christian and believing in racial segregation. Another called the editorial "a masterpiece of stupidity." Opposed to "tearing down of any social barriers" between the races, Robert Hedges, a sophomore from Choctaw County, contended, "Anyone who tells you that allowing Negroes to enter our schools is not a step toward the mixture of our races is lying or very shortsighted indeed." Racial purity required racial segregation, even at Ole Miss.[19]

Endorsements of Krebs's position came from Ole Miss and other schools. Student newspapers at Arkansas, Miami (Florida), Auburn, and North Carolina endorsed Krebs. At Ole Miss one student applauded Krebs's courage. Though a loyal southerner, she thought "fighting for a lost cause" was pointless. Another local student warned Krebs that he would probably elicit "indignant howls" from the "sewer sheets" like the Jackson newspapers, but he hailed Krebs for his courage to take an unpopular stand in the land of archsegregationists like Bilbo and Rankin. Declaring that "ALL men are equal, whether they be blue, black, white, yellow, or orange," Krebs's defender called on white Mississippians to educate Negroes instead of exploiting them. The strongest public defense of Krebs came from the Delta Democrat Times, where Hodding Carter liked Krebs's courage and urged him to persist in spite of the assaults. Although Carter doubted Krebs's stand would have any effect on desegregating the university, he appreciated the young editor's advocacy of Christian values and democratic principles.[20]

Krebs also came in for caustic criticism from outside Oxford by defenders of white supremacy. An alumnus from Newton called him "a low down, nigger-lovin', small town hick" and declared he should be run out of the state. A Jackson man referred to Krebs and liberals in general as "a contemptible and bastard kind of cultural and psychological paederasts and petunias . . . little intellectual snobs and poseurs." Another segregationist decreed, "Segregation must be maintained, no matter what the Supreme Court says. If it is necessary to die on our feet, man, woman, and child, then we must die!" He hoped that Ole Miss had not become "a gelding institution where we send our children to have them castrated of their racial virility." A Memphis man argued that Krebs's position would lead to "miscegenation and intermixture of the races."

From nearby Sardis, one man disregarded the state's large Negro population in declaring that "99.9 per cent of all Mississippians" disagreed with Krebs's editorial. He explained why Krebs's statement was particularly noxious: "I like to think of Ole Miss as the last line of defense for the Confederate States of America—the last stronghold of Southern sentiments and our way of life."[21]

Representative John Rankin, whom Ira Harkey called "perhaps the vilest hater ever to disgrace the halls of Congress," charged in a speech to the Tupelo Rotary Club, "That was a Communist editorial in the University newspaper," and "the Communists are trying to ruin the South by forcing equality with the Negro." Krebs could not avoid Rankin's attack. "I am honored to be placed in the same category as professor Albert Einstein, whom Rankin also once called a Communist because he would not agree with him," said Krebs. "I'd like to see Mr. Rankin reconcile my religion with Communism." With legal representation by Karl Wiesenburg, Krebs threatened a libel suit unless Rankin apologized; later Rankin settled the matter with a letter of apology and payment of one dollar. Many Mississippians, however, agreed with Rankin.[22]

While one alumnus complimented Chancellor Williams for denying Krebs publicity by paying him as little attention as possible, L. B. Porter from Union charged the chancellor with "gross negligence of your official position" for allowing the "unequivocal catastrophe" of Krebs's editorial. He advocated some form of censorship of the student newspaper to prevent such a "deplorable" event. Another correspondent urged Williams to "KICK Krebs out." Charles Hills, a political columnist for the Jackson Clarion-Ledger, chided Williams's wavering in the equivocal middle. Also from Jackson, a supporter of Ole Miss criticized Williams's "policy of silence and indifference. If you don't know how to defend the sacred principle of segregation," he warned Williams, "then you have no business being the chancellor of a Southern University."[23]

Despite the pleas for action, J. D. Williams hoped the rumpus would go away. Honoring the Mississippian's long tradition of editorial independence, he did not attempt to muzzle the paper because he believed that any administrative interference would be undesirable, even if the students did on occasion use their freedom unwisely. He continued to maintain that Krebs did not speak for the university, whose policy was racial segregation. Though Williams thought that Krebs reveled in the attention, he refused to reprimand him. He also dismissed worries about the cross-burning as the result of a student "lark," but he did regret the publicity given the event.[24] The chancellor simply waited and allowed the students to deal with their editor.

Krebs said little to his critics, but in the next issue of the Mississippian, he apologized. Intending to speak only for himself, Krebs regretted that some readers misinterpreted "we" to mean he thought he spoke for everyone at Ole

Miss. Also "unfortunate," according to the editor, was the negative publicity for the university. Out of respect for other views, he published many letters, both supportive and critical, but he did not retract his call for admitting Negroes. With the November 3 issue, he announced that further discussion "only adds fuel to the fire" and that the staff had "decided to end the discussion."[25]

The controversy refused to die so easily. Three days after Krebs's second editorial, students presented to the student body president a petition calling for the editor's ouster. With chants of "Get rid of Krebs," the peaceful demonstration evolved into an old-fashioned pep rally. At a meeting the next evening, the student senate's executive council considered the petition from forty students and decided to turn the matter over to the full senate, which decided the next evening to hold a special meeting the next week to consider the petition.[26]

On November 8, the senators received the executive council's recommendation to drop the case against Krebs. Before voting, however, the senators debated freedom of the press, the editor's responsibilities, censorship, and the reaction to Krebs's editorial. Maurice Dantin, student government president, tried to separate Krebs's views from his rights as an editor, and he reported that the executive council thought Krebs was within his rights. "It is a question of whether we want censorship even of a student newspaper," declared Dantin. While others spoke in support of Krebs's rights and against censorship, one student urged the senate to act against the editor to satisfy offended Mississippians. "It is not a question of freedom of the press," opined another. "The students own the paper. If Krebs can't follow the policy of the student body, he should not be allowed to continue as editor." Tom Roberts further argued that his fellow students had to oppose integration because students at other southern schools had allowed desegregation to occur by not mounting stiff opposition to the admission of blacks. Finally the senate voted 43–21 to ignore the petition to remove Krebs and to approve a resolution endorsing freedom of the press and recommending "that this case be considered closed."[27]

The chancellor and the student senate got their wish, as the brouhaha soon subsided. An armed attack on President Harry S Truman, the awarding of the Nobel Prize in literature to William Faulkner, and congressional elections helped overshadow the controversy, but it abated largely because of a lack of interest among segregationists. Although Krebs's editorial had been "foolish" and "in bad taste," the Jackson Daily News considered it merely "untimely" and not particularly threatening; no Negro had seriously sought admission to a white school, so his position was irrelevant. Referring to the whole affair as "that mess at Ole Miss," the capital's evening paper dismissed Krebs's opinion even though it had been "violative of Mississippi's fundamental policy—segregation in education."[28] Segregation seemed secure.

Krebs finished his term as editor without further incident, yet the controversial editorial continued to have ramifications. At his graduation in the spring of 1951, none of Krebs's family attended, partly due to financial limitations but also probably because of embarrassment at his notoriety. When he received his diploma, many booed and hissed. When in full uniform he received his army commission, he heard only silence. Within weeks of his graduation, Krebs traveled to Atlanta to speak to the first national convention of the NAACP to meet in the South. Aaron Henry, the Clarksdale pharmacist and longtime leader of the state NAACP, had invited him to speak. Sharing the dais with Thurgood Marshall, Roy Wilkins, and other dignitaries, Krebs told of his experiences. Afterward, he met many people, including a light-skinned Negro from Atlanta who introduced himself and his parents: he was, Krebs learned a decade later, Harry Murphy.[29]

The question broached by Krebs's editorial and discussed by the former editor at the NAACP convention—integration of the university—had confronted chancellors since the NAACP began its legal campaign in the 1930s. J. D. Williams and his two predecessors had conformed to the state's segregation policy, avoided integration, and escaped publicity or controversy. In 1939, even after the Supreme Court had ruled in State of Missouri ex rel. Gaines v. Canada (1938) that states with limited educational facilities must admit blacks as well as whites, Chancellor A. B. Butts believed integration was "not a question that will immediately confront us." If and when it did arise, Butts had a simple answer: "No negro will enter the University of Mississippi." He believed that the state would accommodate any black applicant while maintaining segregation in higher education; it would probably make some "special provision" to offer more courses at Alcorn A&M College, the state's only black college. The chancellor, of course, kept the IHL board fully informed of all matters relating to integration, and he knew his position had the trustees' support. On one occasion, expressing his approval of Butts's stance, W. C. Wells, the chairman of the board, agreed that Negroes "will not be admitted. We will litigate 'until the cows come home.'" More ominously, he told Butts that, even if the courts did order a Negro enrolled, "I would feel sorry about what would happen to them in 24 hours after they got there."[30]

With Chancellor Butts on active army duty during World War II, Acting Chancellor Alfred Hume continued the policy of segregation, which he personally endorsed. Confessing great affection and sympathy for his "good many friends among the colored people," Hume wanted better education for Negroes, but not at the University of Mississippi. Negroes, according to Hume, had special needs already being provided at the separate Alcorn A&M College, and he could not foresee any reason for change.[31]

9. "On the Brink of Disaster": Defending States' Rights, Anticommunism, and Segregation

"I know that communism is being taught by some professors at Ole Miss, and I believe the same is true for Mississippi State [College] and other state institutions," charged Representative Hamer McKenzie of Benton County in January 1950. His allegations came at the height of a national furor over communist subversion. Branding the unnamed professors as fellow travelers, the twenty-six-year-old veteran and law student advocated a special committee to investigate the colleges and universities and to "take a broom and sweep our own backsteps while we are calling on the government to purge our enemies in Washington."[1]

During the national red scare, anticommunists often focused on public schools where, they believed, academics could instill subversive values. Legislators and school boards used loyalty oaths to weed out "subversive" teachers and banned the teaching of "un-American" ideas. In the South, the hunt for subversives coincided with the start of the civil rights movement, and for whites threats to the racial status quo overlapped and reinforced the fear of communists. Charges of communism were used to discredit potential challenges to white supremacy. Conservatives also saw communism as just one step beyond the welfare state created by New Deal liberalism.[2] Segregationists often blurred distinctions among communists, subversives, and integrationists.

McKenzie's charges drew quick responses. The president of Mississippi State College replied, "I don't believe we have any Communists at all." Ole Miss's J. D. Williams defended his faculty: "I know them individually and cannot believe there is a single Communist among them." During a two-hour closed legislative session, McKenzie replied that the colleges were "infested with communist fellow travelers and socialists" and accused five Ole Miss professors of "molding the minds of Mississippi students along socialistic lines." The accused included Jim Silver.[3]

The university and its friends in the legislature and the press decried the "witch hunt." Hodding Carter chastised the "irresponsible" McKenzie for thinking anyone with "a political or economic stand somewhere to the left of the Stock Exchange" was a Red. Before a Delta civic group, Dean Robert Farley called the charges "groundless and without fact." One professor said, "They are accusing some professors of molding students' minds when I can't even teach some of them enough to pass a course." Mississippian editor Albin Krebs declared, "A country becomes a police state when its citizens, be they college professors or ditchdiggers, are forced by the state government to knuckle under to what a few politicians call 'the proper attitude.' "[4]

Support for McKenzie quickly faded. The Jackson Daily News suggested that the legislators "promptly drop that subject and waste no time on an investigation." McKenzie then backed off and denied accusing anyone of being a communist. The legislature did, however, adopt the Subversive Activities Act that required a loyalty oath for state employees. As of July 1, every university employee had to sign a statement affirming that he or she was not a subversive.[5]

As the chancellor recognized, the allegations in 1950 were not the first, nor would they be the last, about Ole Miss. Though rumors circulated about Alfred Schnur, Will Campbell, Jim Silver, and others, the university had generally avoided upheavals tied explicitly to the larger Red Scare. The state's anticommunist hysteria trailed that of the nation as a whole and peaked after it. When Brown intensified racial fears, several prominent alumni, a few recent graduates, and a couple of former employees, many with Citizens' Council ties, began to orchestrate complaints about Ole Miss.

In June 1955 the Madison Citizens' Council sponsored the first meeting of five gubernatorial candidates. Before they spoke, the gathering heard from the cosmopolitan, intellectual, and reserved William J. Simmons. Though a political novice and an inexperienced public speaker better suited as a behind-the-scenes political operator, he rose rapidly to become the executive director of the Citizens' Council movement. In Madison the thirty-eight-year-old mustachioed son of a prominent businessman alleged that Ole Miss and Millsaps College, a Methodist school in Jackson, had liberals sabotaging the state's defense of segregation. He accused them of indoctrinating public school teachers, who then spread integrationist ideas. Newspapers picked up Simmons's comments, but the heads of the institutions rebuffed the charges. "We are not in the propaganda business," J. D. Williams declared. "We don't exercise thought control." He denied any leftist orientation at Ole Miss. Although none of the gubernatorial candidates followed up on Simmons's accusations, the questions continued to roil under the surface.[6]

Later in June, in a letter to the university, Robert B. Patterson of the Citizens' Council repeated recent charges. Criticizing the chancellor's "beguiling charm" and "completely dishonest" reply to Simmons, Patterson objected to "anti-segregation professors from the North." Specifically he protested the use of an education textbook that presented ideas "adverse to the best interests of white people in Mississippi" and two labor union pamphlets distributed at a Retired Pascagoula journalist, former Ocean Springs rector

From Staff Reports

A retired journalist with The New York Times, and former rector of an Ocean Springs church have died.

Pascagoula native Albin Krebs, 73, former New York Times writer and Pulitzer prize winner, died Friday in Key West Fla., of throat cancer.

Krebs wrote a series of articles for The Times-Picayune in New Orleans which led to the Pulitzer and then earned a master's degree at Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism.

He joined United Press International, before becoming an associate editor at Newsweek. He also spent four years at the New York Herald Tribune, which is now closed, before joining The New York Times in 1966.

He originated and wrote the "Notes on People" column and was chief advance obituary writer and editor when he retired

Among his survivors is his nephew local Pascagoula attorney, Robert Krebs.

"Albin Krebs enjoyed life and lived it to its fullest, while at the same time taking stands on issues of public importance and understanding the consequences of his acts," Krebs said.

While an editor for "The Mississippian" at The University of Mississippi in 1952, Albin Krebs made one of those stands. He wrote a series of editorials supporting the admission of black students to the university.

Ten years later, as a reporter at Newsweek magazine, Krebs reported on the admission of James Meredith, the first black student allowed to enroll in Ole Miss. Although estranged from the university for a number of years, in recent years Ole Miss has established the "Albin Krebs Journalism Scholarship."

The Rev. Alfred Mead, 75, who served as rector of St. John's Episcopal Church from 1979-1993, died Sunday at USA Medical Center in Mobile.

"Father Mead had the most magnificent world view of the way things should be," said Peggy Butera of Ocean Springs. "He had a definite feeling for Third World people and he brought missionaries into our church that we needed to know.

KREBS HONORED

Special to The Mississippi Press

Photo shows Pascagoula native Albin Krebs, taken in 1950 when he was editor of The Mississippian at the University of Mississippi. Today UM officials and Krebs' family will gather in Pascagoula for a major gifts announcement relating to the UM Journalism Department. A reception to honor Krebs' contributions to his alma mater and the journalism field will also be held, beginning at 5:30 p.m. at Longfellow House.

WHO AM I? — This unidentified photo is believed by local genealogists to be a member of the Krebs family. The Jackson County Genealogy Society would appreciate anyone with information about the person in the photo contacting the society by calling Tommy Wixon at 762-7777.

Robert P. Krebs
Board member

Robert Krebs named to historical society board of directors

JACKSON, Miss. — Pascagoula attorney Robert P. Krebs has been named to the Board of Directors of the Mississippi Historical Society for a three year term, 1992-95.

Elbert R. Hilliard, secretary-treasurer of the society, said Krebs' election was confirmed at the society's business meeting in Natchez in late February.

Krebs is the second Jackson Countian to serve on the board in recent years. Mrs. Hermes Gautier of Pascagoula was elected in 1953 and William Dunn of Ocean Springs served from 1979 to 1982 and from 1990 until his death last year.

Krebs is a former chairman of the Pascagoula Historic Preservation Commission, which he still serves, and is a board member of the Jackson County Historical Society.

A graduate of the University of Mississippi, he has practiced law in Pascagoula since 1974.

The Pascagoula Historic Preservation Commission is hosting the 1993 annual meeting of the Mississippi Historical Society.

With endowment scholarship

Ole Miss to honor former Pas resident

By DEREK JOHNSON
Mississippi Press Staff

The University of Mississippi Department of Journalism is honoring one of its native sons with a $10,000 endowment scholarship in his name.

Albin Krebs is a former resident of Pascagoula and a graduate of Ole Miss. Krebs works in New York as the chief advance obituary writer for The New York Times, a job which requires him to meet some of the world's most famous and powerful people.

In his job, Krebs has interviewed people such as former President Lyndon Baines Johnson, British entertainer Noel Coward and jazz great Louis Armstrong, publishing the results of these interviews after the celebrity's death. Because of the confidential nature of the interviews, celebrities often reveal more of themselves to Krebs than they have to any other writer.

According to the chairman of the Ole Miss journalism department, Dr. Wil Norton, Krebs' style of writing is fascinating. Dr. Norton also said Krebs has "a wonderful talent for storytelling."

It is this pride in the accomplishments of one of its alumni that prompted the university to start the endowment fund.

"The fund has to collect $10,000 before the endowment, which will draw off the interest in the fund, can be activated," Dr. Norton said. "Right now we have about $5,000 and are still collecting funds from Mississippi newspapers, personal friends of Albin and other alumni of the college."

The endowment will be awarded annually to a student from Jackson County with good academic standing who is pursuing a career in journalism. According to Dr. Norton, the endowment should be ready for spring 1991.

Albin Krebs

Recently Krebs visited his alma mater and Dr. Norton feels comfortable that the former editor of The Daily Mississippian was pleased with what he saw.

"Albin did not have a pleasant senior year back in 1951," Dr. Norton said. "He wrote an editorial urging the university to allow blacks into the graduate school program, a thing unheard of before."

Because of the editorial, Krebs faced ridicule and the threat of mob violence throughout his senior year, including during his graduation ceremonies where he was booed.

However, Dr. Norton feels Krebs knows the events of that year are now behind the college and that he has the staff and faculty's respect.

"When he was visiting us I felt that he knew he was welcome," Dr. Norton said. "I think he had a sort of warm feeling inside because he was coming back as a friend of the university."

Dr. Norton said that contributions are still being accepted for the endowment. To make contributions, send checks to Department of Journalism, Farley Hall, University of Mississippi, University MS 38677.

Albin Krebs, noted journalist, dies at 73

THE SUN HERALD

A Pascagoula native who specialized in writing obituaries of prominent people for The New York Times also left legacies in his home state.

Albin Krebs, 73, died of throat cancer Friday in Key West, Fla., where he retired after 23 years with The New York Times. Writer Truman Capote and cowboy actor Gene Autry were among Krebs' famous subjects.

The Times ran an obituary on Krebs on Tuesday.

Krebs first gained fame at the University of Mississippi in 1952, while he was editor of the student newspaper, The Mississippian. Krebs, who was white, wrote a series of editorials advocating the admission of black students. Shortly afterward, a cross was burned outside his window, and friends protected him from those who did not share his views, said his nephew, Pascagoula lawyer Robert Krebs.

In 1962, Krebs reported for Newsweek magazine on the admission of James Meredith, the first black student allowed to enroll in Ole Miss. Several years later, Ole Miss established a journalism scholarship in Krebs' name.

"He really impressed on me the importance of being willing to take a stand, based on reason and logic, regardless of the consequences," said Robert Krebs. "He was my confidante."

Early in his career, Krebs received a Pulitzer travelling fellowship for studies in Europe following a series of articles for The Times-Picayune in New Orleans.

Krebs also worked for United Press International and The New York Herald Tribune until that newspaper closed after a strike in 1966. Krebs, after joining The New York Times, wrote Notes on People, a longtime column about public personalities.

"He lived in such an interesting time, and knew so many interesting people personally, such as William Faulkner, who had a tremendous influence on his life," said Robert Krebs, who developed a close relationship with his uncle in the 1970s.

"It was my honor to be with him the night he died," Robert Krebs said. "It grieved him greatly that he didn't feel well enough to take me out to dinner. He loved life."

Krebs' obituary appears on this page.

Albin J. Krebs

❑ PASCAGOULA — Albin Joseph Krebs, 73, died in Key West, Florida, on May 31, 2002.

Mr. Krebs was born in Pascagoula on March 5, 1929. A descendent of one of the pioneering families of Pascagoula, Mr. Krebs was preceded in death by his parents, Clarence Preston Krebs and Agnes Ory Krebs, his brothers, Preston C. Krebs, Edmund Ory Krebs Sr., and Stephen Wise Krebs and his sister Marie Krebs Lea. Mr. Krebs was also preceded in death by his wife Kathleen and his child, who both died in child birth while he served as a fighter pilot with the United States Air Force in the Korean War.

Mr. Krebs is survived by his sisters, Marjorie Krebs Holley, Anne Krebs Mansfield, numerous nieces and nephews and his close friend, confidant and nephew, Robert "Bob" P. Krebs.

Mr. Krebs retired from The New York Times in 1989 to live in Key West, Florida. He was editor of the student newspaper at the University of Mississippi and immediately after his graduation in 1951 he spent four years as an Air Force officer serving in Korea and Japan.

After a brief but productive time on the staff of the Sunday magazine of The (New Orleans) Times-Picayune, during which he wrote a series of articles that led to a Pulitzer, he earned a Master's Degree at the Columbia University Graduation School of Journalism, finishing second in his class out of 90 students.

Joining the United Press Wire Service a month before his graduation in 1956, he was quickly introduced to covering the really big stories when the Italian liner "Andrea Doria" sank off Nantucket.

He was at UPI six years, then became an associate editor at Newsweek. At Newsweek, he also wrote about the tumultuous integration of his alma mater, Ole Miss, 12 years after. As student editor, he had advocated the entry of blacks there. That advocacy caused a long estrangement for him from Ole Miss, but in recent years the University of Mississippi has instituted an "Albin Krebs Journalism Scholarship."

Mr. Krebs spent nearly four years at the now defunct New York Herald Tribune, joining The New York Times in 1966. There he was a night re-write man, general assignment reporter, television correspondent, and he originated and wrote the "Notes on People" column. He was chief advance obituary writer and editor when he retired.

Albin Krebs contributed to the Reader's Digest, The Saturday Evening Post, Good Housekeeping, Coronet, Pageant and in Key West The Solares Hill.

Mr. Krebs was cremated and his ashes strewn at sea.

Hunger, Cold, Among Hardships Of German Prison Camp, Says Sgt. Krebs

W. Guy Krebs is home again —Jackson county's first returned prisoner of war.

"And it's like being born again," he said Thursday.

Held prisoner by the Germans for 103 days, he and his fellow prisoners received no communications from the outside world and were able to keep track of the general progress of the war only through news summaries relayed by a news commentator from New York, who was also in the camp, from scraps of overheard broadcasts and bits of information gleaned wherever possible. In fact, until his release Sgt. Krebs said he had received no word from home since November.

Forty pounds thinner, shaky on his legs from mlqutrition but wild with joy, he and the 1100 other Americans incarecrated at Siegenhain were released by American forces late in March.

He, with his whole outfit, was captured in the Ardennes Bulge late in December. Marched through the snow 80 miles with no food except what they managed to snatch from gardens along the roadside, the men were loaded on a train, 50 to each small German box car, where they remained for five days, including Christmas.

Packed in Box Cars

"Horses had previously been transported in the cars and the Germans hadn't bothered to clean up before they stuffed us into the cars." Sgt. Krebs said. "We had to sit on each other and took turns sleeping on the floor at night with the other half of the men stretched out across us. The only ventilation we had was a small window crisscrossed with barbed wire and we were not fed—but once, which was shortly before midnight Christmas when we were given a small loaf of bread for each six men and a small can of German corned beef for each seven men."

Arriving at Bad Orb, the food situation improved little except that the men were fed daily. At breakfast they had a third of a canteen cup of "part tea and mostly water," and at lunch a half of a cup of soup made from some unletermined kind of greens. At night a small loaf of German black bread was divided among five men and there was a small pat of hnseasoned margarine.

Later moved to Ziegenhain, the food was even more scarce and instead of the 17 sticks of wood provided each day to heat the buildings which were about 30 by 100 feet there was no fuel at all despite the fact that it was snowing outside.

"On days when it was a little bit warm we'd get up out of the narrow beds, on each of which two men slept, and sit around talking about food and recipes but if it was cold we'd have to stay in bed all day to keep warm," he said.

All Thoughts of Food

And the girl at home who has fondly envisioned her prisoner-sweetheart sitting around with dreams of her is due for a jolt.

"None mentioned, or thought about, anything but food," Sgt. Krebs said.

Our Opinion
A reporter's legacy

The job of a journalist, said American newspaper legend H.L. Mencken, is to "comfort the afflicted and afflict the comfortable."

Albin Krebs shook the complacent and consoled the downtrodden from his days at Ole Miss, throughout his newspaper life. That's what made him one of the foremost reporters ever produced by Mississippi.

No one is more deserving to have a scholarship in his honor, aimed at helping young journalists at his alma mater.

Reporters are also expected to be fearless in pursuit of truth. So it was with Krebs, whose courage knew no bounds.

While a student at Ole Miss, more than a decade before James Meredith sought to become the first African-American to enroll, Krebs, then a reporter for The Daily Mississippian, called for the desegregation of the university's law school and graduate programs.

It was always said that he was a journalist ahead of his time, and his Oxford days were evidence of that. Like other courageous southern newspapermen of the time, who saw segregation and discrimination for the evils they were, Krebs endured the brickbats of the bigoted, and continued to take strong stands.

Krebs was as much a part of the courageous journalists of our region — Ralph McGill in Atlanta, Hodding Carter Jr. in Greenville, John Seigenthaler in Nashville and Ira Harkey in Pascagoula, and others — who understood that racial division and bigotry shackled the South, keeping it from its full potential, economically, socially and politically.

He began his career at this newspaper, when it was known as The Chronicle Star. He then went on to further distinguish himself at our sister paper, the New Orleans Times-Picayune, as well as for United Press International and at the New York Times.

At the Times, Krebs covered some of the world's major stories — the tragedy of the cruise ship Andrea Doria in 1956 and tremors of the civil rights movement.

Later, as the paper's chief advance obituary writer, he met some of the world's prominent figures, presidents and poets, writers and entertainers, including Lyndon Johnson, Eudora Welty and Truman Capote.

With his work, Krebs set the industry standard in the difficult art of obituary writing, a craft requiring accuracy with an elegant touch.

Hopefully, students at Ole Miss who benefit from Krebs' $186,000 endowment will learn of his commitment and compassion.

The words of Krebs' sister, Anne Mansfield of Pascagoula, provide a lesson for journalists of every age.

"He was way ahead of his time," she said. "He said he always printed the truth. And no matter who he worked for, if he couldn't print the truth, forget it."

But beyond the printed word, as Mansfield said, Krebs took the criticism. "Like a man," Mansfield said, even after being booed at his 1951 Ole Miss graduation for his courageous civil rights stand.

For Krebs, that required the courage to forgive. The endowment at Ole Miss is evidence of boundless forgiveness and boundless love for a university and a state that in the face of hard truth turned their back on him.

Albin Krebs' life teaches a lesson more powerful than any classroom lecture or textbook can offer.

The job of a journalist, said American newspaper legend H.L. Mencken, is to "comfort the afflicted and afflict the comfortable."

Albin Krebs shook the complacent and consoled the downtrodden from his days at Ole Miss, throughout his newspaper life. That's what made him one of the foremost reporters ever produced by Mississippi.

No one is more deserving to have a scholarship in his honor, aimed at helping young journalists at his alma mater.

Reporters are also expected to be fearless in pursuit of truth. So it was with Krebs, whose courage knew no bounds.

While a student at Ole Miss, more than a decade before James Meredith sought to become the first African-American to enroll, Krebs, then a reporter for The Daily Mississippian, called for the desegregation of the university's law school and graduate programs.

It was always said that he was a journalist ahead of his time, and his Oxford days were evidence of that. Like other courageous southern newspapermen of the time, who saw segregation and discrimination for the evils they were, Krebs endured the brickbats of the bigoted, and continued to take strong stands.

Krebs was as much a part of the courageous journalists of our region — Ralph McGill in Atlanta, Hodding Carter Jr. in Greenville, John Seigenthaler in Nashville and Ira Harkey in Pascagoula, and others — who understood that racial division and bigotry shackled the South, keeping it from its full potential, economically, socially and politically.

He began his career at this newspaper, when it was known as The Chronicle Star. He then went on to further distinguish himself at our sister paper, the New Orleans Times-Picayune, as well as for United Press International and at the New York Times.

At the Times, Krebs covered some of the world's major stories — the tragedy of the cruise ship Andrea Doria in 1956 and tremors of the civil rights movement.

Later, as the paper's chief advance obituary writer, he met some of the world's prominent figures, presidents and poets, writers and entertainers, including Lyndon Johnson, Eudora Welty and Truman Capote.

With his work, Krebs set the industry standard in the difficult art of obituary writing, a craft requiring accuracy with an elegant touch.

Hopefully, students at Ole Miss who benefit from Krebs' $186,000 endowment will learn of his commitment and compassion.

The words of Krebs' sister, Anne Mansfield of Pascagoula, provide a lesson for journalists of every age.

"He was way ahead of his time," she said. "He said he always printed the truth. And no matter who he worked for, if he couldn't print the truth, forget it."

But beyond the printed word, as Mansfield said, Krebs took the criticism. "Like a man," Mansfield said, even after being booed at his 1951 Ole Miss graduation for his courageous civil rights stand.

For Krebs, that required the courage to forgive. The endowment at Ole Miss is evidence of boundless forgiveness and boundless love for a university and a state that in the face of hard truth turned their back on him.

Albin Krebs' life teaches a lesson more powerful than any classroom lecture or textbook can offer.

The Land Of Valentine Theme Of Annual Ball

Pas-Point Bureau

J. E. Krebs of Pascagoula reigned as King Joy XXXII and Miss Martha Rhodes Turner of Moss Point as Queen Joy XXXII at the 32nd annual coronation ball of the Young Men's Business Club of Moss Point.

The Land of Valentine was the theme of the ball held at the Elks lodge in Pascagoula Friday evening.

The new king of Joy is a general contractor. A veteran of World War II, he holds membership in the Elks and Knights of Columbus and was selected as king of the Knights of Columbus ball in 1960.

Miss Turner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack F. Turner of Moss Point. She was valedictorian of the 1965 senior class of Moss Point High School and graduated from Sullins College in Bristol, Va., in 1967 as valedictorian of her class. Presently a senior at the University of Mississippi, Miss Turner is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma social sorority, mortar board, senior women's honor society, Sigma Delta Pi, Spanish honorary, and Phi Kappa Phi, scholastic honorary.

Miss Turner's father is a former king of Joy and her maternal grandmother is a former archduchess. Her mother and her uncles, Tom Lennep of Pascagoula and Edwin Lennep Jr. of Libya, Africa, also served as court members.

For her coronation the queen chose an ensemble depicting the Napoleonic era. The gown of silk satin embroidered with brilliant jewels featured a portrait neckline banded in gold paillettes and rhinestones. The focal point of the gown was a sunburst at the waistline created of a large ruby surrounded by rhinestones. Appliques of the Napoleonic bee design of rhinestones, crystal beads and rubies were placed down the sides of the sheath skirt. The bee design was repeated near the hem outlined by two bands of gold encrusted laurel leaf motifs.

The queen's mantle, a replica of that worn by empress Josephine, fell from a gold lace collar traced in jewels of gold, silver and red. Banded in ermine the mantel featured the Napoleonic bee design formed of rhinestones and hand-cut beads interspersed with scrolls and teardrops extending the entire length of the train.

Mrs. Ellis Gardner of Pascagoula served as archduchess to the queen. She was escorted by archduke Dr. G. R. Hilbun of Moss Point.

Members of the court introduced by E. A. Khayat, master of ceremonies, were:

Duchesses, Mrs. A. L. Welsh, Mrs. Gary Smith, Mrs Lum Cumbest, Mrs. Thomas Hegwood Jr., Mrs. A. L. Daffin Jr., Mrs. David Smith, Mrs. Jack Breland, Mrs. C. R. Slaughter Jr., Miss Sharon Stagg, Miss Martha McIlwain and Miss Kathy Bodden.

Dukes of the court were E. S. "Ned" Nelson, Paul Palmer, Robert Nichols, T. M. Von Sprecken Jr., Dr. C. D. Whigham Jr., Andrew J. Keenan, Douglas Fontaine, Terry Adams, J. M. Epting Jr., Gayden Harper, Jr., and Hubby E. Nelson.

Trainbearers to the queen were Miss Leslie Colville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Colville of Moss Point, and Miss Kathy Herring, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Herring Jr. of Pascagoula.

The crownbearers to their majesties were Steven Hockaday, son of Dr and Mrs. Perry J. Hockaday of Pascagoula, and Eric Denmark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Denmark of Moss Point.

Following the coronation of the 1969 king and queen by the 1968 monarchs, Miss Vicki Ramsay of Pascagoula and James F. Harvey of Moss Point, dancing was enjoyed to the music of the Roy Choice orchestra of Mobile.

The king and queen entertained members of the court and invited guests at a royal breakfast held at the Knights of Columbus home following the ball.

Joe E. Brown served as chairman of the ball and Jack Beatty was director of art work.

Martha Turner

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Krebs celebrated their Silver Wedding anniversary Saturday evening. Their one daughter, Diane, a senior at Mississippi Southern, was Queen of the K. C. Carnival ball also Saturday night, so it was a memorable occasion for everyone.

Albin Krebs recalls 1951:

Editor wrote for integration with Southern grace, got boos and catcalls at Ole Miss graduation

By JUDY JOHNSON
Coastlines Editor

The one member of the local group of Ole Miss alumni who will not attend the reunion of Mississippian/Daily Mississippian editors and staffers is Albin Krebs, who in 1951 became Pascagoula's first Mississippian editor.

"There were a lot of things that were fun," he said, "but there were a lot of things that weren't fun. I don't want to stir up any bad feelings, so I think I'll pass."

Krebs had to endure catcalls and boos when he stood to receive his diploma at commencement exercises, and was the target of mob violence during his senior year.

The cause was an editorial urging the campus to accept the inevitability of integration with a measure of Southern grace.

"I was torn about returning to the campus for the reunion," Krebs said recently in a phone interview from New York.

Krebs is a senior writer and editor with the New York Times.

"There are so many old friends I'd like to see, but I don't want to cause anyone, including myself, any embarrassment," he said. "The same thing might happen that happened the last time I visited the campus. I wouldn't want that."

Krebs was last on the campus of Ole Miss in the fall of 1953, two years after he had graduated. He had returned for homecoming weekend, taking time off from his duties in the U.S. Air Force.

"I was standing on the campus, just outside one of the main campus buildings, I forget which one, when I realized this man across the street was yelling at me," he said.

The campus comptroller, Chuck Trotter, was shrieking epithets at Krebs, trying to stir up passers-by to do the same.

"There I was, in a uniform of the United States Armed Forces, and this man was screaming at me, saying really awful things," Krebs said. "I thought after two years, maybe it would have all quieted down. Apparently, I was wrong."

In 1951, during his senior year and his tenure as Mississippian editor, Krebs wrote what he calls "a very unpopular editorial."

"I simply predicted the changes that I saw coming," he said. "Anyone who cared to look could see integration was going to become a fact. I said that we should be graceful and accept the change; that it was the right and just thing to do."

After the editorial, he was threatened, spat upon and yelled at. His roommate moved out, and he couldn't find anyone else to share a room with him.

Krebs says the most frightening thing of all was the near-riot staged one evening in front of his dormitory, when "a bunch of hot-headed punks burned a cross on the lawn in front of Sam Hall.

"My room was on the second floor of the dorm, at the front of Sam Hall, and I was walking back to my room one evening," Krebs recalled. "I saw a crowd gathered out front, and I wondered what was going on.

"I nosed over into the crowd, to try to find out what everyone was celebrating. When I realized that it was all about me, I started to get a little shaky.

"I slipped out of the crowd and went up to my room. My roommate, who moved out soon after, had turned out all the lights in our room, and was sitting there in the dark.

"I looked out the window, and the crowd starting yelling things, like 'Okay, let's get 'im,' and then the mob started surging toward the entranceways. I didn't know what was going to happen next."

What happened next was Rocky Byrd.

Then a junior at Ole Miss, Byrd was also from Pascagoula. He was a star of the Rebel football team, and Rocky hadn't liked what he had seen developing that afternoon.

"Rocky saved my life," Krebs said. "It's that simple. He had seen what might happen, and he had gone to the football team and organized the players to come defend me.

"Now, a few weeks before I wrote the integration editorial, I had written one that said athletes shouldn't get all the perks they get on campus. You know, special dorms, special classes, special food.

"So, I wasn't the most popular person in the world with the football players. But out of a sense of sportsmanship and fair play, and out of a sense of loyalty to Rocky, they stood in the doorways of Sam Hall and kept that mob from coming in to get me.

"It was the most wonderful display of sportsmanship I've ever seen. And it's something I'll never forget — one Pascagoula guy coming to the aid of another."

The rest of the year was pretty much downhill, too, Krebs said. The worst moment came when he stood to receive his diploma during commencement exercises.

"Things were shouted from the audience, and there were boos and hisses," he said. "I'll never forget that.

"I'd like to attend the reunion, but I wouldn't want to go and be disruptive. I want everyone to have a good time, and they might not be able to with me around to remind them of things. I don't want any unpleasantness, for me or for them."

Krebs also remembers plenty of good times during his year as editor of the Mississippian, especially the campus's first beauty contest, which he calls "one of the great things about my editorship of the Mississippian."

"The newspaper decided to sponsor the first Miss Ole Miss contest, a preliminary to the Miss Mississippi and Miss America pageants," he said. "One of my high school classmates, Katherine Wright (now Mrs. Bill Hunt), was in the contest. It was the first beauty pageant she had ever entered in her life, and she won.

"Not only that, she went on to win the state title, and to become first alternate to Miss America that year. And she was our state's first Miss Hospitality, too.

"That first pageant was a Pascagoula thing all the way, and it was really fun."

ALBIN KREBS, before he shipped out for Korea, after finishing his days at Ole Miss.

ALBIN KREBS today is a senior writer and editor for The New York Times.

Krebs has put his training to good use, rising through the ranks at the Times to his present post, which may be unique in American journalism.

"I'm the chief advance obituary writer for the Times," he said. "That means I write obituary notices of very important people, prior to their deaths, and keep them on file for when they will be needed.

"It's a unique position to be in. Often they tell me things that are strictly for publication only after they're gone."

His subjects are among the most important people in American society. "Unless you're worth at least two columns in the Times, I probably won't do your obituary," he said.

One of the most detailed obituaries he has written was for former President Lyndon Baines Johnson. It took up four pages in the newspaper, and consisted of 68,000 words. "We're talking book length," Krebs said. "I interviewed LBJ for that one."

He has also done obituaries of Noel Coward and Louis Armstrong, and dozens of other notables from all walks of life. "I have several in the can that I can't mention," he said. "I call them my clients, and I treat them with great respect."

Krebs also hands out assignments in his specialty and serves as an editor in other areas of the paper. "Primarily, I guide the newspaper's program of advance obituaries," he said.

He's also sanguine about his own importance. "When I die, I'll probably rate only a couple of paragraphs, so I won't be responsible for my own obituary," he said. "I'm not important enough."

Nicholas of Cusa (Kū'za) German, Nickolaus Van Cusa; Latinized, Nicolaus; original name, Nickolas Chrypffs (or Cryfts) or KREBS. b. at Kues (Cusa), nearTrier, Germany (1400 Or 1401) d. at Todi, Italy, Aug. 11, 1464. German Churchman and scholer. At the troubled council of Basil (1431 - 49) he worked earnestly Ber unity of the Christan Church, and promoted reform of the Calendar. Pope Eugene IV bestowed the red hat of a Cardinal upon him in 1448, and in 1450 he was named bishop of Brixen (Bressanone) Italy. Eminenlty a diplomat, he was appointed in Monasteries and sees, convoking synods, labering to restore discipline and doctrine, trying to compose the Hussite schism, promoting a Crusade against the Turks, mediating for peace between the Roman and Byzantine Churches. He was active in exposing the False or Isidorian Decretals. Before Copernicus he preceived that the earth moves around the sun, and his philosophy was humanistic, with pantheistic tendencies that anticipated Giordano Bruno. He wrote mathemical and philosopohical treaties; his chief work was De docta ignorantia

St. Helena, finally found his way across the sea to East Pascagoula. There Louis died in 1840, having met and married Marie Emelie of the historic Delmas family eleven years before and having left five children to carry on his name.

From the very moment of his birth his destiny was dramatic for he was born on the river Rhone in 1794 at Lyons, France, on the very day it was besieged by the Republicans in the French Revolution.

His parents were Royalists and his father was in the army. Both the one-hour-old infant and his mother were hurriedly hidden by friends in a coal mine which belonged to the Frederics. There they were forced to remain in furtive safety for two years, before they were found by the father who had been forced to exile himself.

Louis himself was taken from school at 16 and put into Napoleon's vast army where he quickly became a Corporal and was decorated with this medal of the Legion of Honor at 18.

He and a small group were scouting in the mountains when a patrol of Russians far outnumbering them were observed approaching. Louis shouted to his men "Let us not be captured like cowards. Charge!" Their boldness completely threw the Russians off balance, who scattered and abandoned a valuable cannon. For this act of bravery Napoleon personally decorated Louis Frederic in the presence of his regiment.

After the fall of Napoleon the 26-year-old jobless ex-soldier sailed for America, arriving on the same day the first steamboat was launched by Robert Fulton.

From New York, by way of Gainsboro, Alabama, and various jobs and adventures, he finally arrived at Pascagoula where he has gone down in local history as its first postmaster. Those were the primitive days of postal service when the mail was brought to Pascagoula in row boats which met the steamboats that operated on regular mail schedule between New Orleans and Mobile but which could not come close to land in the shallow channel.

was there his daughter, Marie, became the wife of the Hon. Marion Gaines of Austin, Texas. It is now the home of Mrs. Nina Hood Boykin, a daughter of the late O. J. Hood.

It may be mentioned that the old Krebs house, northwest Conti and Hamilton streets, lately removed, was occupied in 1865 by Louis D. Krebs; in 1866, by Mrs. M. Krebs; in 1878, by L. D. Krebs, and in 1886, by Miss Florida B. Krebs, by whom, in 1901, it was sold to the Mobile Library Association.

A few stray ends may now be knotted up and the woek will be as complete as the material at command permits it to be. There is a note about Chevalier de Belle Isle, whose lovely daughter Sieur Francis or Francois Krebs married. The chevalier arrived in these parts June 4, 1721, on the good ship Fortefaix from France, along with DeGuillorie and DeJosieuse, whose names play some part in this narrative, and Dubas, Senac, Petat and Vivia, whose names do not. The archives in Paris record a grant under the charter of the Western Company September 7, 1717, to Count M.A. de Belle Isle, chevalier at the court of Louis of France and general of the marine in Louisiana (in 1730). Belle Isle appears to have come over to occupy his grant and grow up with the country.

The Baron dropped his title and the "von" into the ocean as he came over, and became known as Sieur Francis Krebs. He married a daughter of Joseph Simon de la Pointe and Jeanne Puluot of Canada; he had a son, Hugo, and one daughter, Marie Josephine Krebs.

Francis Krebs married Marie Louise de Belle Isle, daughter of Moreau Augustine de Belle Isle and Marie Louise de Guilorie de Isle a Guillory, his wife.

Pierre Krebs married Aline Peteet, of Pascagoula, and it is said that from that marriage are descended the Sandses and Rapiers of Mobile.

Hugo Krebs married Marie de Josieuse, of New Orleans.

Marie Josephine Krebs was married to Captain Antione Narbona, mentioned as belonging to the French Navy. Their daughter Ana (also spelled Anna) Narbona, became the wife of Sig. Don Enrique Grimarest, the most distinguished figure in the whole ghostly company; for in the Archives of the Indies at Seville is a copy of a letter signed by Don Bernardo de Galvez, the governor of Louisiana, proposing to the King of Spain that Don Enrique, Captain in the regiment of Navarre, be made governor of Mobile. The date of this document is May 26, 1781. There are in the same archives two other papers relating to Grimarest. One announces his promotion to be lieutenant-colonel for "distinguished merits contracted at the capture of Mobile, and the other is the royal license granted Grimarest to marry Dona Ana Narbona.

Hamilton's Colonial Mobile registers Grimarest's title as "Political and Military Governor of the Town of Mobile and its District." The town is sometimes called in the Spanish documents "Plaza de la Movila", says Hamilton. It appears that Grimarest began his governorship in 1783. It was in that year, on December 26, that he lost his wife Ana, and the burial took place in the public cemetery, possibly the one just west of Jackson Street.

A descendent of Hugo Krebs and Marie de Josieuse, but whether immediate or not is not stated, was Joseph Krebs, who, as related in the family records, married William Fisher's daughter, and it was Joseph Krebs' daughter, Corinne Krebs, who was married in great state, July 15, 1850, to Henry G. Humphries, in her father's house, Conti and Hamilton Streets.

largely in cotton planting. His son, Dr. W. N. Humphries, was a trustee for the Mississippi College for Women, and his son, Henry G., settled in Mobile in 1819.

Mr. Humphries built the handsome house now standing at the southwest corner of St. Louis and Conception streets, and it was there his daughter, Marie, became the wife of the Hon. Marion Gaines, of Austin, Texas. It is now the home of Mrs. Nina Hood Boykin, a daughter of the late O. J. Hood.

It may be mentioned tha t the old Krebs house, northwest Conti and Hamilton streets, lately removed, was occupied in 1865 by Louis D. Krebs; in 1866, by Mrs. M. Krebs; in 1878, by L. D. Krebs, and in 1886 by Miss Florida B. Krebs, by whom, in 1901, it was sold to the Mobile Library Association.

A few stray ends may now be knotted and the work will be as complete as the material at command permits it to be. There is a note about Chevalier de Belle Isle, whose daughter Sieur Francis or Francois Krebs married. The chevalier arrived in these parts June 4, 1721, on the good ship Portefaix from France, along with DeGuillorie and DeJosieuse, whose names play some part in this narrative, and Dubas, Senac, Petat and Vivia, whose names do not. The archives in Paris record a grant under the charter of the Western Company, September 7, 1717, to Count M. A. de Belle Isle, chevalier at the court of Louis of France and general of the marine in Louisiana (in 1730). Belle Isle appears to have come over to occupy his grant and grow up with the country.

[illegible] names of his children by the first and second marriages. However, since his death [illegible] has seemed to be [illegible] Miss Regina RAPIER had urged me to institute a search for it in public records, but it simply stayed on my cluttered agenda.

A few months ago, Mr. Hewitt L. FORSYTH, Editor of NEW ORLEANS GENESIS told me that a Dr. (academic, not M.D.) SANDOZ, a lady and a professor at one of our univeritys ties, had discovered the will; so, a search for Dr. SANDOZ was added to my list of 'things to do when---'. Then, out of a clear sky, a facsimile arrived from Miss RAPIER, in Spanish handwriting of the XVIII century.

Casually perusing this quaint document, it was impossible to miss the error in arithmetic when KREBS lists the children of his first marriage who were to receive 200 Pesos each; and to whom he had already given 150 each, leaving a balance of 100! This, then, required more than a translation; it required a thorough and meticulous study, which I undertook myself. This one document could be the subject of a dissertation.

By coincidence, when I had completed my rough draft Mrs. Dugue BENDERNAGEL (ile JARREAU) visited us, to see what I had on KREBS, because she, too, descends from Him. Mrs. B. Frank ESHLEMAN was there also; her daughter married my nephew, so some of her grandchildren also descend from KREBS. When I read aloud (see p. 1 of will following) that the youngest child of the first marriage, named Marie, had married a man named GARDINIJO, Mr BENDERNAGEL objected, saying that it was her ancestress, Margarite, who contracted that marriage; moreover, the man's name is GRADENIGO, not GARDINIJO!! Mrs. BENDERNAGEL went even further. She had with her the coat of arms of this venetian nobleman and proof of the said marriage.

This accidental but fortunate meeting made me re-evaluate the entire document. It is Interesting to note the last line which acknowledges two 'borradas' but there are no erasures or places where words were struck out. After two hundred years, nobody will ever know which part would have been invalidated, but I strongly suspect that the 'de Bai-' after the name of his oldest child, and the correction of the wife of GRADENIGO may have been them. Further more, when he tells how many Pesos he has given his children by the first marriage, he does note that Margarita is the wife of GRADENIGO and says nothing about Maria. Could this daughter have been Margarita Maria?

German. GARIC, the Notary, was a Frenchman, and had been a Royal French Notary until the Spanish took over. Here we have a very sick German, 62 years old, who had spent most of his adult life as a French subject, in a recently ceded Spanish province but a citizen of a recently captured British colony, trying to dictate a complicated will in Spanish. Can you not excuse the errors?

There are many other things worthy of note. KREBS spells his second wife's name as Marianne CHAUVIN, but you will see on the following baptismal records that she spelled her own name Marie Anne CHAUVAIN. He also calls her 'alias' Joyeuse. The use of the word 'alias' intrigues me, and I much prefer it to the French word 'dit' so often used. This supports the belief that many of the Louisiana colonists had not in fact received titles of nobility in a formal manner, but simply arrogated to themselves additional surnames, which, in many cases, were used instead of their real original surnames, which latter disappeared.

In closing, let me attach behind the will, which follows, the 1756 baptismal record from the St. Louis Cathedral of his son, Raphael, born that same year, which indicates the father stated his age correctly in the will. Here you have the interesting signatures of KREBS his second wife and as a witness another of my ancestors, MAXENT. It was destined that 118 years would pass before their descendents, my parents, would marry.

I also attach three consecutive baptismal records, all three ceremonies performed on the same day, September 16, 1776, just 5 days before his will. This bears out my belief that it was probably difficult, if not impossible, to practice the Roman religion in British West Florida from 1764 until GALVEZ retook the Floridas in 1780, four years after KREBS died.

Let it be known by this public testamentary writing, last and voluntary will, that I, HUGO ERNESTUS KREBS, a resident of (the province of) Mobile, but presently in this city, a native of Neumagen, Archbishopric of Treves, legitimate and natural son of the late Juan KREBS and of Anna Charite FRITZ, husband and wife; being infirm because of bodily illness; fearful of death, which is natural; hoping for divine clemency; with my free judgement, understanding and will, recollection and memory, and in possession of my faculties and senses, which is apparent to the undersigned witnesses and Notary (that I) undoubtedly am able to dispose of my goods and to order my last testament, of which, by this instrument, I give faith.

I firmly believe in the most holy mystery of the Most Blessed Trinity, Father, Son and Holy Spirit - three persons distinct but only one God; I confess our Holy Mother, the Roman Catholic Church, in which I humbly believe, although an unworthy son, in the belief of which (Church) I have lived, profess that I will continue to live and die, wishing to save my soul I prescribe my testament in the following form:

First, I order and commend my soul to God our Lord, who created it and redeemed it with the inestimable price of his Blood; imploring of His Divine Majesty that He take it with Him to His Glory, for which it was created. And I bequeath my body to the earth from which it was formed.

Item: I order that when it shall be the will of God our Lord to take me from this life my body shall be interred in the hallowed ground of this city, and I leave my funeral arrangements to the disposition of those named in this testament.

Item: I declare that I have contracted two matrimonies according to the rites of the Holy Mother Church. The first with Maria Simon LAPOINTE, deceased, from which marriage I had and still have (the following) legitimate and natural children:

Joseph de Bai, aged 33
Pedro, aged 30
Francisco, aged 32
Augustin, aged 29
Maria Joseph Narbona, aged 28
Margarita, aged 27*

and another named Maria GARDINIJO, aged 26*

*The spelling is GRADENIGO, and he was the husband of Margarita; see "Foreword".

Krebs 1271

of the said marriage as heirs of their mother, and by agreement reached before the Justice of Mobile , consented to give to each one of my said first children 200 Pesos. I have given to:

Francisco 150 Pesos; to
Joseph the same amount; to
Augustin the same; to
Pedro another 150 Pesos;

so that these do not have to receive on account of their mother but another 100 Pesos each, which amounts shall be paid out of my succession.

I also declare that no accounting has been made of the portion which belongs to Maria Josepha NARBONA, she having been given nothing.

I also declare that I have paid to Margarita, wife of GARDINIJO, the portion above-mentioned (to the sons) and an additional 100 Pesos should be accounted for out of the corpus of my estate at my death.

Item. I declare that the second marriage which I contracted with Marianna CHAUVIN was, as the first one, contracted under the laws and customs of Paris; and that Dona Marianna CHAUVIN brought as her dowry 100 Pesos in conformity with our marriage contract, and that afterwards I received 240 Pesos which she received as her inheritance from her mother, totalling the sum of 340 Pesos in accordance with the terms of the said marriage contract, of all of which one-third belongs to the community. Consequently, my said wife shall not take but 226 Pesos, 5 1/2 Reales before the partition. She will also have to take 300 Pesos which are assured for the Vicar and 100 Pesos for the principle; all of which is contained in said marriage contract.

The balance of my goods shall be divided in two equal parts, one for my said wife and the other for my children; my wife acting as trustee, pending the final partition, for the children of my first marriage. Besides that which belongs to my present wife, she will also have to take 900 Pesos accrued during this marriage of the half which belongs to me out of the first inventory and these present accounts. The balance shall be divided in two equal halves, one for all my children and the other for my wife. And to the part that belongs to my children shall be added the 900 Pesos that shall be procured out of the corpus of my estate. Then the total shall be divided among all my children of the first and second marriages and partitioned among them in equal parts; thus discharging my conscience and in compliance with the laws under which we have contracted matrimony and to which we have subscribed.

And moreover, I hereby revoke and annul any and all wills and codicils that I may have heretofore made, by word of mouth or in any other manner; so that faith may be had in this (will) which I now sign.

that a Mobilian and his wife were visiting relatives in France, and there the husband died. Under the French law the deceased had to be buried there, as the body could not be taken out of the country for a certain number of years. The widow sailed for home not long after her bereavement, taking passage on a wine vessel. On the arrival of the vessel, Mr. Pastel, the importer of the cargo, delivered to the undertaker a cask of wine that the undertaker had ordered shipped for him. A few days thereafter the burial of the deceased gentleman took place with all due ceremony, and his grave is in the Old Cemetery to this day. Not until after the death of the widow did the story come out that the remains had been secretly brought from France, pickled in a cask of good French wine.

THOS. S. JAMES, ARCHITECT

An interesting character in the old day was Thomas S. James, who left monuments to himself all about the city in the handsome public and private edifices erected by him. In a short history of the Government Street Presbyterian church the late Alfred R. Murray wrote of the construction, saying, "plans and estimates by Thomas S. James, who was a resident of Mobile for many years and was the architect of several other prominent buildings, among which is Barton Academy."

Thos. S. James

Mr James was architect of the Southern Market; also of the branch bank on the northwest corner of Royal and St. Francis streets; of the Odd Fellows Hall, now the house of Adam Glass & Company, Inc.; the stately residences of James Battle and Dr. George H. Ketchum, on Government street, of Judge John Bragg, on Spring Hill avenue, of C. K. Foote, northeast St. Louis and Conception.

Mr. James' activities were not limited to this locality. He did much work for New Orleans, Jackson, Natchez and in the plantation region; and about half his time was spent away from home, attending to this business.

THE KREBS FAMILY

Since I wrote about the Old Library, in an article printed July 1, 1928, the owners of the ancient and picturesque relic have seen fit to pull it down, and allow a big bill-board to be erected in its place, thus depriving my article of its interesting basis. It is of no use to print now a long story of a building that has completely vanished from the eyes of man, but I cannot afford to lose, and hardly can my readers afford

Henry G. Humphries was a successful cotton man here before the war. He was a member of the secession convention in Montgomery, from Mobile county in 1861; provost marshal at Mobile, 1862-3; and enrolling officer, 1864-5. He had a long lineage, beginning with Sir John Humphries, a native of Dorsetshire, England, who was a member of the illustrious house of Bohun. Sir John's wife was Lady Lucy, daughter of Baron Clinton, eleventh earl of Lincoln. Sir John was deputy-governor of Massachusetts. A descendent, John J. Humphries, moved to Columbus, Mississippi, and there engaged largely in cotton planting. His son, Dr. W. N. Humphries, was a trustee for the Mississippi College for Women, and his son, Henry G., settled in Mobile in 1819.

Mr. Humphries built the handsome house now standing at the southwest corner of St. Louis and Conception streets, and it was there his daughter, Marie, became the wife of the Hon. Marion Gaines of Austin, Texas. It is now the home of Mrs. Nina Hood Boykin, a daughter of the late O. J. Hood.

It may be mentioned that the old Krebs house, northwest Conti and Hamilton streets, lately removed, was occupied in 1865 by Louis D. Krebs; in 1866, by Mrs. M. Krebs; in 1878, by L. D. Krebs, and in 1886, by Miss Florida B. Krebs, by whom, in 1901, it was sold to the Mobile Library Association. (See vignette, head of this article).

A few stray ends may now be knotted up and the work will be as complete as the material at command permits it to be. There is a note about Chevalier de Belle Isle, whose lovely daughter Sieur Francis or Francois Krebs married. The chevalier arrived in these parts June 4, 1721, on the good ship Portefaix from France, along with DeGuillorie and DeJosieuse, whose names play some part in this narrative, and Dubas, Senac, Petat and Vivia, whose names do not. The archives in Paris record a grant under the charter of the Western Company September 7, 1717, to Count M. A. de Belle Isle, chevalier at the court of Louis of France and general of the marine in Louisiana (in 1730). Belle Isle appears to have come over to occupy his grant and grow up with the country. * * * *

In 1711 the concession of Pascagoula, to Madame de Chaumont, was made under the corporation - " The Western Company" , and was registered by parliament, in Paris, on the 7th of September, 1717.

In 1718 Colonel Joseph de la Pointe was commissioned by the French government to build a fort on Lake x Catahoula (now Krebs Lake), to protect the concession of Pascagoula to Madame de Chaumont.

In 1697 Joseph de la Pointe, accompied La Savole and De Iberville, explorers and founders of the Mississippi French Colonial Company of Louisiana.

In January 1721, the frigate Charles (a war vessal), under commandate Joseph de la Pointe, and flying the Fleur de Lys, dropped anchor in the Bay of Mobile, at Fort Louis de la Mobile. Her Passengers included Madame, Duchess de Chaumont; her daughter, Baroness de la Prode; Count Captain Seunard de Bellille; Sieur Gregrie de Guillory and his wife, Jeanne de Guillory; and the Dubas', Senacs, Petats and Vivias.

In the year of 1721 at Fort Louis de la Mobile, there arrived, the ships La Volga, Balone, La Girande, La Neride, La Portefaix. La Africaine (a war vessel), for ,adame de Chaumont.

December 1721, Madame de Chaumont returned to France.

Miss Herminia Earnest
2100 St. Charles Ave. Apt. 9A
New Orleans, La. 70130

Dear Miss Earnest:

In response to your letter, I checked our genealogical records and was able to learn a few facts about Sieur Joseph de la Pointe, Admiral of Pienville 's fleet. He arrived in the Bay of Biloxi in 1710. His wife was Madame la Marquise Marie Louise de Belle Isle. His mother-in-law was Madame la Duchesse de Chaumont. His daughter, Marie Louise (also called Marie Jeanne at another point in the D. A. R. records), married Baron Hugh (or Hugue) von Krebs of the House of Husse (from Neumagen on the Meale, Germany). (They had four children: two sons and two daughters.) I could find no reference to his parents or to other children.

We appreciate so much your donation of Carnival items plus the xerox copies of French colonial documents and their translations, and we are happy to be of assistance to you. If we can help you again, please do not hesitate to write.

Yours sincerely,

Mary L. LeBlanc

WILL OF JEAN BAPTISTE BOUDREAUX DE GRAVELINE
SEPTEMBER 16, 1750

This sixteenth day of September, one thousand seven hundred and fifty, before the Royal Notary of the Province of Louisiana, dwelling in New Orleans, and in presence of the undersigned witnesses, personally appeared John Baptiste BOUDREAUX of Graveline, generally residing at a place called La Belle Fontaine at Old Beloxy. He has declared and said that he has come here expressly to arrange and finally adjust his affairs, temporal as well as spiritual. He appeared to us this day at nine o'clock in the morning, in good health, and enjoying sound mind and memory. He is of a very advanced age, and fearing to be overtaken by death in (paper worn out) remote from all assistance, he would wish to put in order a sufficient portion of his worldly affairs, whilst he is of sound mind. He has said and declared to us that he was born in Montreal, Canada, and that he came to this colony with Mr. Iberville. He says that he believes that out of a hundred who came with him, he is the only living person. He states that he had carnal communication with a squaw of the Indian Nation (a daughter of a great chief) and had a son, who is about thirty years of age at the present time. It is this consideration which compels him to marry the said squaw (or Indian woman) in presence of our Mother, the Roman Catholic and Apostolic holy church, acting the part of a true Christian with the intention of doing good to his son (paper torn), named John BOUDREAUX. The severe language and bad conduct which his son has shown him puts him under the necessity of disinheriting him. The son attempted to take his life many times by putting his fist upon his father's throat, threatening to kill him, along with other threats, calling him an old "Buggar," and daily seeking his destruction. His whole aim is tending to his father's ruin, as he has been doing to the present time. He has rendered his father considerable injury, being vexed to see him yet on this earth to be able to enjoy and consume the little property which remains out of his holdings barely saved. He says that he has a god-son named John Baptiste Brasillier, son of Jean Baptiste Brasillier, assisting him in all his necessities and aiding him in everything, without whom he would undergo a miserable death. He has no other means than to stay with him, his god-son, for his unfortunate son never comes to his house but to pillage and threaten his life, compelling him this day (not wishing to place his unfortunate son in the hands of justice, as he could do) notwithstanding the want of formality, which might be required in regard to the disinheritance of the said John BEAUDREAUX. He wishes for this reason that the present instrument be, in this place, a declaration in justice (missing words) to the repugnance he feels in letting the said son perish, leaving moreover to God the Father Almighty to punish him according to his merits. If Divine Providence does not (words missing), his conscience beseeching the Lord to be pleased to convert him, without which he will despair of his coming to a good end; that as he has before made some gifts in writing, he declares them null and void, that it was an act of weakness on his part to sign deeds of gift. He desires that the present instrument only remain to be executed according to its form and tenor, not regarding from henceforth the said John BOUDREAUX, any more than his wife and their children, as but a degenerate race, having never merited any of the attentions which he paid to them. Their names up to the present day only tended to his total ruin by the frequent pillage they made of his house and from which they never profited. This was occasioned by their great dissipation, especially BEAUDREAUX's, who is confirmed in every vice, in all sorts of debauchery, which is well known, unfortunately, by the whole colony. Graveline begs also of his general legatee, in whose favor he bequeaths his property at his decease, to pray to God for the repose of his soul, which he leaves to His prudence and generosity. He knows his goodness, which is all he has said and repeated after several amendments, without wishing to increase or diminish anything, it being his last will and testament.

Lenormant, sheriff, witness, here dwelling, has read this paper and understood that it is BOUDREAUX's last will, without making any alteration in it.

He has signed it as well as BEAUDREAUX.

Chantalou, Lenormant and the undersigned Notary.

Renner, Notary

that a Mobilian and his wife were visiting relatives in France, and there the husband died. Under the French law the deceased had to be buried there, as the body could not be taken out of the country for a certain number of years. The widow sailed for home not long after her bereavement, taking passage on a wine vessel. On the arrival of the vessel, Mr. Pastel, the importer of the cargo, delivered to the undertaker a cask of wine that the undertaker had ordered shipped for him. A few days thereafter the burial of the deceased gentleman took place with all due ceremony, and his grave is in the Old Cemetery to this day. Not until after the death of the widow did the story come out that the remains had been secretly brought from France, pickled in a cask of good French wine.

THOS. S. JAMES, ARCHITECT

An interesting character in the old day was Thomas S. James, who left monuments to himself all about the city in the handsome public and private edifices erected by him. In a short history of the Government Street Presbyterian church the late Alfred R. Murray wrote of the construction, saying, "plans and estimates by Thomas S. James, who was a resident of Mobile for many years and was the architect of several other prominent buildings, among which is Barton Academy."

Thos. S. James

Mr James was architect of the Southern Market; also of the branch bank on the northwest corner of Royal and St. Francis streets; of the Odd Fellows Hall, now the house of Adam Glass & Company, Inc.; the stately residences of James Battle and Dr. George H. Ketchum, on Government street, of Judge John Bragg, on Spring Hill avenue, of C. K. Foote, northeast St. Louis and Conception.

Mr. James' activities were not limited to this locality. He did much work for New Orleans, Jackson, Natchez and in the plantation region; and about half his time was spent away from home, attending to this business.

THE KREBS FAMILY

Since I wrote about the Old Library, in an article printed July 1, 1928, the owners of the ancient and picturesque relic have seen fit to pull it down, and allow a big bill-board to be erected in its place, thus depriving my article of its interesting basis. It is of no use to print now a long story of a building that has completely vanished from the eyes of man, but I cannot afford to lose, and hardly can my readers afford town is sometimes called in the Spanish documents "Plaza de la Movila," says Hamilton. It appears that Grimarest began his governorship in 1783. It was in that year, on December 26, that he lost his wife, Ana, and the burial took place in the public cemetery, possibly the one just west of Jackson street.

A descendent of Hugo Krebs and Marie de Josieuse, but whether immediate or not is not stated, was Joseph Krebs, who, as related in the family records, married William Fisher's daughter,* and it was Joseph Krebs' daughter, Corinne Krebs, who was married in great state, July 15, 1850, to Henry G. Humphries, in her father's house, Conti and Hamilton streets.

Henry G. Humphries was a successful cotton man here before the war. He was a member of the secession convention in Montgomery, from Mobile county in 1861; provost marshal at Mobile, 1862-3; and enrolling officer, 1864-5. He had a long lineage, beginning with Sir John Humphries, a native of Dorsetshire, England, who was a member of the illustrious house of Bohun. Sir John's wife was Lady Lucy, daughter of Baron Clinton, eleventh earl of Lincoln. Sir John was deputy-governor of Massachusetts. A descendent, John J. Humphries, moved to Columbus, Mississippi, and there engaged largely in cotton planting. His son, Dr. W. N. Humphries, was a trustee for the Mississippi College for Women, and his son, Henry G., settled in Mobile in 1819.

Mr. Humphries built the handsome house now standing at the southwest corner of St. Louis and Conception streets, and it was there his daughter, Marie, became the wife of the Hon. Marion Gaines of Austin, Texas. It is now the home of Mrs. Nina Hood Boykin, a daughter of the late O. J. Hood.

It may be mentioned that the old Krebs house, northwest Conti and Hamilton streets, lately removed, was occupied in 1865 by Louis D. Krebs; in 1866, by Mrs. M. Krebs; in 1878, by L. D. Krebs, and in 1886, by Miss Florida B. Krebs, by whom, in 1901, it was sold to the Mobile Library Association. (See vignette, head of this article).

A few stray ends may now be knotted up and the work will be as complete as the material at command permits it to be. There is a note about Chevalier de Belle Isle, whose lovely daughter Sieur Francis or Francois Krebs married. The chevalier arrived in these parts June 4, 1721, on the good ship Portefaix from France, along with DeGuillorie and DeJosieuse, whose names play some part in this narrative, and Dubas, Senac, Petat and Vivia, whose names do not. The archives in Paris record a grant under the charter of the Western Company September 7, 1717, to Count M. A. de Belle Isle, chevalier at the court of Louis of France and general of the marine in Louisiana (in 1730). Belle Isle appears to have come over to occupy his grant and grow up with the country. * * * *

The translations were typed on loose-leaf notepaper and put in blac covers. In time these black note books were referred to, for want of a better name, as the "Black Books". People doing research in the Museum were often told to look in the row of "Black Books" to check whether or the information they needed could be found in them

It was in one of these "Black Books" the succession of Sieur LaPorte was found, showing the deposition by Dr. Krebs regarding the treatment o the said LaPorte.

Krebs 1348

The Baron dropped his title and the "von" into the ocean as he came over, and became known as Sieur Francis Krebs. He married a daughter of Joseph Simon de la Pointe and Jeanne Puluot of Canada; he had a son, Hugo, and one daughter, Marie Josephine Krebs.

Francis Krebs married Marie Louise de Belle Isle, daughter of Moreau Augustine de Belle Isle and Marie Louise de Guilorie de Isle a Guillory, his wife.

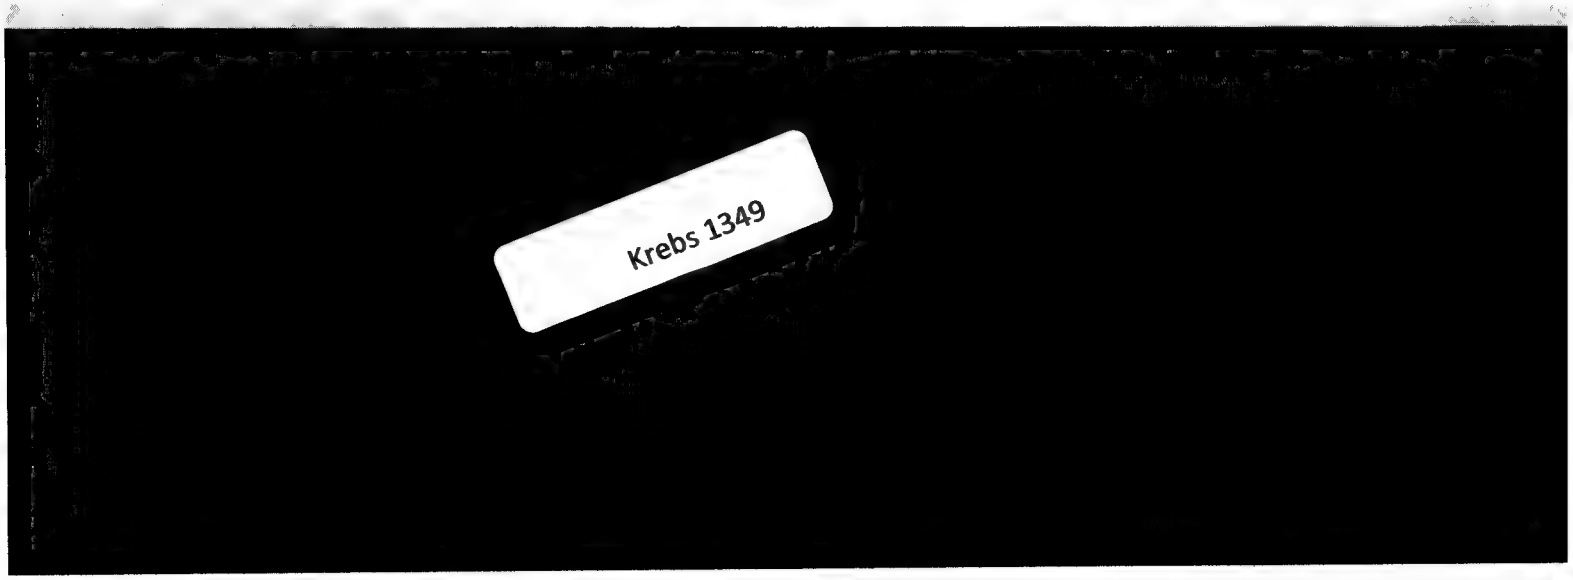
Pierre Krebs married Aline Peteet, of Pascagoula, and it is said that from that marriage are descended the Sandses and Rapiers of Mobile.

Hugo Krebs married Marie de Josieuse, of New Orleans.

Marie Josephine Krebs was married to Captain Antione Narbona, mentioned as belonging to the French Navy. Their daughter Ana (also spelled Anna) Narbona, became the wife of Sig. Don Enrique Grimarest, the most distinguished figure in the whole ghostly company; for in the Archives of the Indies at Seville is a copy of a letter signed by Don Bernardo de Galvez, the governor of Louisiana, proposing to the King of Spain that Don Enrique, Captain in the regiment of Navarre, be made governor of Mobile. The date of this document is May 26, 1781. There are in the same archives two other papers relating to Grimarest. One announces his promotion to be lieutenant-colonel for "distinguished merits contracted at the capture of Mobile, and the other is the royal license granted Grimarest to marry Dona Ana Narbona.

Hamilton's Colonial Mobile registers Grimarest's title as "Political and Military Governor of the Town of Mobile and its District." The town is sometimes called in the Spanish documents "Plaza de la Movila", says Hamilton. It appears that Grimarest began his governorship in 1783. It was in that year, on December 26, that he lost his wife Ana, and the burial took place in the public cemetery, possibly the one just west of Jackson Street.

A descendent of Hugo Krebs and Marie de Josieuse, but whether immediate or not is not stated, was Joseph Krebs, who, as related in the family records, married William Fisher's daughter, and it was Joseph Krebs' daughter, Corinne Krebs, who was married in great state, July 15, 1850, to Henry G. Humphries, in her father's house, Conti and Hamilton Streets.



[illegible] was deputy governor of Massachusetts. A descendent, John J. Humphries, moved to Columbus, Mississippi, and there engaged largely in cotton planting. His son, Dr. W. N. Humphries, was a trustee for the Mississippi College for Women, and his son, Henry G., settled in Mobile in 1819.

Mr. Humphries built the handsome house now standing at the southwest corner of St. Louis and Conception streets, and it was there his daughter, Marie, became the wife of the Hon. Marion Gaines, of Austin, Texas. It is now the home of Mrs. Nina Hood Boykin, a daughter of the late O. J. Hood.

It may be mentioned tha t the old Krebs house, northwest Conti and Hamilton streets, lately removed, was occupied in 1865 by Louis D. Krebs; in 1866, by Mrs. M. Krebs; in 1878, by L. D. Krebs, and in 1886 by Miss Florida B. Krebs, by whom, in 1901, it was sold to the Mobile Library Association.

A few stray ends may now be knotted and the work will be as complete as the material at command permits it to be. There is a note about Chevalier de Belle Isle, whose daughter Sieur Francis or Francois Krebs married. The chevalier arrived in these parts June 4, 1721, on the good ship Portefaix from France, along with DeGuillorie and DeJosieuse, whose names play some part in this narrative, and Dubas, Senac, Petat and Vivia, whose names do not. The archives in Paris record a grant under the charter of the Western Company, September 7, 1717, to Count M. A. de Belle Isle, chevalier at the court of Louis of France and general of the marine in Louisiana (in 1730). Belle Isle appears to have come over to occupy his grant and grow up with the country.

sent a fleet of five vessels with colonists and slaves for the colonization of the French Province of Louisiana, of which the Gulf Coast section of Mississippi was then a part. During the period of Spanish domination of this section, the fort was taken by the Spanish government and was occupied both as a fort and as a chateau by de Grinarest, a lieutenant of the royal armies of Apain, and who afterwards married a granddaughter of de la Pointe. It is presumed that here is where the fort received the name of Spanish Fort, although it had been built by the French.

At this time, the lake on the shores of which the fort had been erected, was called Lake Chatahoula. Upon the arrival from German of Baron Hugh von Krebs, who became possessed of the land surrounding the lake, the name of the lake was changed to Krebs Lake and has been known ever since. The exact date of Hugh Krebs arrival is not known to this writer. He was married to Marie Jeanne, a daughter of de la Pointe, and was the progenitor of the long line of Krebs that have lived and reared families in this section for those two hundred odd years. Many descendants of Baron von Krebs are still living here and all over the South.

Old historical narratives relate that Baron Krebs lived on these shores like a feudal lord. He had a splendid plantation, had slaves by the hundreds, raised cotton, rice, and indigo and other products for export, and was surrounded by every luxury that a country gentlement of that day and time could have.

It is said that Baron von Krebs and his wife moved from Pascagoula to Mobile and erected a dwelling there which is still standing, a quaint old building at the northwest corner of Conti and Hamilton Streets. It was in this old colonial home that General Andrew Jackson is said to have been entertained while stationed at Mobile, by Joseph Krebs, a descendant of Baron Krebs.

The Old Spanish Fort is a comfortable, hospitable looking home. Few changes have been made in its appearance all these years, and it stands as a testimonial of the thoroughness with which houses were erected in those days, and to the durability of the material of which it was constructed. Many houses that were built after it have rotted and fallen apart, but its old cement walls and hewn timber beams may be as enduring as the everlasting hills. Many generations of the Krebs family have lived within its walls, hallowed by the memory of a romantic past, and until very recently it was used as a residence by descendants of that hardy pioneer Baron whose name is perpetuated by Krebs Lake and the name of a business throughfare of this city, Krebs Avenue.

JOHANN KREBS (KRIEBS) of Neumagen on the Moselle, in the Archbishopric of Trier or Treves, then an independent principality whose Archbishop was an Elector of the German Emperor--now a part of the Rhineland-Palatinate in West Germany--but anciently a Roman Imperial seat, home of the Treveri, a Celtic people famed for raising of horses and mechanical inventions--a part of Lorraine after Charlemagne's Empire crumbled--and under French rule frequently from 1688 until Napoleon's fall and from after World War One until shortly before World War II.

- o O o -

In the name of God our Lord and of the Most Holy Virgin, his Blessed Mother, advocate of all sinners, conceived without stain or shadow of original sin from the first instant of her most pure and natural being:

Let it be known by this public testamentary writing, last and voluntary will, that I, Hugo Ernestus Krebs, a resident of (the province of Mobile but presently in this city, a native of Neumagen, Archbishopric of Treves, legitimate and natural son of the late Juan Krebs and of Anna Charite Fritz, husband and wife; being infirm because of bodily illness; fearful of death, which is natural; hoping for divine clemency; with my free judgement, understanding and will, recollection and memory, and in possession of my faculties and senses; which is apparent to the undersigned witnesses and Notary (that I) undoubtedly am able to dispose of my goods and to order my last testament, of which, by this instrument, I give faith.

I firmly believe in the most holy mystery of the Most Blessed Trinity, Father, Son and Holy Spirit - three persons distinct but only one God; I confess our Holy Mother, the Roman Catholic Church, in which I humbly believe, although an unworthy son, in the belief of which (Church) I have lived, profess that I will continue to live and die, wishing to save my soul I prescribe my testament in the following form:

First, I order and commend my soul to God our Lord, who created it and redeemed it with the inestimable price of his Blood; imploring of His Divine Majesty that He take it with Him to His Glory, for which it was created. And I bequeath my body to the earth from which it was formed.

Item: I order that when it shall be the will of God our Lord to take me from this life my body shall be interred in the hallowed ground of this city, and I leave my funeral arrangements to the disposition of those named in this testament.

Item: I declare that I have contracted two matrimonies according to the rites of the Holy Mother Church. The first with Maria Simon Lapointe, deceased, from which marriage I had and still have (the following) legitimate and natural children: ——— de Edad = "of age"

Joseph de Bai, aged 33
Pedro, aged 30
Francisco, aged 32
Augustin, aged 29
Maria Josepha Narbona, aged 28
Margarita, aged 27 *

and another named Maria Gardinijo, aged 26 *

* The spelling is Gradenigo, and he was the husband of Margarita; see "Foreword".

Bazilio, aged 12 years
Maria Roza, aged 10 years
Cecilia, aged 9 years

Item: I declare that before contracting the second marriage I had an inventory taken of all the goods that remained at the death of my first wife, including appreciation in value, which amounted to 9,000 Pounds, one-half of which belonged to me and the other half to my children of the said marriage as heirs of their mother, and by agreement reached before the Justice of Mobile I consented to give to each one of my said first children 200 Pesos. I have given to:

Francisco 150 Pesos; to
Joseph the same amount; to
Augustin the same; to
Pedro another 150 Pesos;

so that these do not have to receive on account of their mother but another 100 Pesos each, which amounts shall be paid out of my succession.

I also declare that no accounting has been made of the portion which belongs to Maria Josepha Narbona, she having been given nothing.

I also declare that I have paid to Margarita, wife of Cardinijo, the portion above mentioned (to the sons) and an additional 100 Pesos should be accounted for out of the corpus of my estate at my death.

Item: I declare that the second marriage which I contracted with Marianna Chauvin was, as the first one, contracted under the laws and customs of Paris; and that Dona Marianna Chauvin brought as her dowry 100 Pesos in conformity with our marriage contract, and that afterwards I received 240 Pesos which she received as her inheritance from her mother, totalling the sum of 340 Pesos in accordance with the terms of the said marriage contract, of all of which one-third belongs to the community. Consequently, my said wife shall not take but 226 Pesos, 5½ Reales before the partition. She will also have to take 300 Pesos which are assured for the Vicar and 100 Pesos for the principle; all of which is contained in said marriage contract.

The balance of my goods shall be divided in two equal parts, one for my said wife and the other for my children; my wife acting as trustee, pending the final partition, for the children of my first marriage. Besides that which belongs to my present wife, she will also have to take 900 Pesos accrued during this marriage of the half which belongs to me out of the first inventory and these present accounts. The balance shall be divided in two equal halves, the one for all my children and the other for my wife. And to the part that belongs to my children shall be added the 900 Pesos that shall be among them in equal parts; thus discharging my conscience and in compliance with the laws under which we have contracted matrimony and to which we have subscribed.

Item: To the extent that my children of my aforementioned second marriage are minors, under twenty-five years of age, and for this reason are incapable of administering their estates, or in the case of their death, I name and appoint as Curator M. Chastan, the Major, because of the confidence I have in him, and believing that he will take care of this charge and for this purpose I give to him all the power that I possess and which he may need under the Royal laws.

Item: In all matters that it may be necessary to administer this, my testament, I name and elect my wife, Mariana Chauvin, giving her all the power necessary and that may be required.

Item: I desire, and it is my wish, that all my debts be paid, not only those that are secured by public writings, but all others that are debts in conscience. And of the remaining of my goods, rights and actions which belong to me and can be enforced I name as my legitimate and universal heirs my aforementioned children of my first and second marriages so that they may have and inherit equally with the blessing of God, and mine.

This is my last will and testament, which I wish defended and executed. I hope for the mercy of God our Lord and that he will take me to himself. And moreover, I hereby revoke and annul any and all wills and codicils that I may have heretofore made, by word of mouth or in any other manner; so that faith may be had in this (will) which I now sign.

Signed in the City of New Orleans, where I am ill, this the twenty-first day of September, Seventeen Hundred and Seventy-six, the witnesses being Don Joseph-Adrien de la Plaza, Don Luis Lioteau and Don Antonio Reboul, inhabitants of this City, present, and I will sign this document which I understand and sign.

Sehr geehrte Miss Rapier!

Die Stadtverwaltung Trier hat Ihr Schreiben vom 16.1o.67 an uns zur Erledigung weitergeleitet. Wir haben festgestell Die Eltern Ihres Vorfahren, Johann Kriebs und Anna Charitas Fritsch, heirateten am 14.2.17o2 in Neumagen. Leider ist der Heiratseintrag ohne Elternangaben. Die Taufe des Johann Kriebs kann ohnehin nicht mehr festgestellt werden, da die frühesten Kirchenbücher von Neumagen 1688 beginnen. Anna Charitas Fritsch ist als Tochter der Eheleute Reiner Fritsch und Catharina .... am 24.3.1682 in Trittenheim /Mosel geboren. Aus der Ehe Johann Kriebs- Anna Charitas Fritsch gingen die nachstehenden Kinder hervor:

With reference family research Kriebs, Krebs-Neumagen.

Dear Miss Rapier:

The City Administrator of Trier forwarded to us your letter of October 16, 1967. We confirm the following. The parents of your ancestors Johann Kriebs and Anna Charitas Fritsch were married on the 14th of February, 1702 in Neumagen. Regret to advise that the marriage license made no mention of the parents of the couple. The christening of Johann Kriebs can therefore not be confirmed because the earliest church books from Neumagen only started in 1688.

Anna Charitas Fritsch was born on the 24th of March in 1682 in Trittenheim/Mosel as the daughter of Reiner Fritsch and Catharina. Out of the marriage from Johann Kriebs and Anna Charitas Fritsch the following children were born:

22nd Jan.,1703 Susanna
18th Mar.,1705 Gertrude
1st of May,1706 Johann Reinard
15th of May,1708 Johann Gerlach
18th of Oct.,1709 Catharina
15th of Mar.,1712 Anna Maria Catharina
15th of May,1714 Hugo Ernst
27th of Aug.,1716 Maria Anna
28th of Feb.,1721 Johann Peter

The father, Johann Kriebs, died on October 12, 1751 (without record of his age). The mother died on March 4, 1773.

Specifics about the upbringing, the education and military service of Hugo Ernst, as also the profession of his father, cannot be found out of the promotion list from the University in Trier or out of the church books from Neumagen. Perhaps we can assume that the godfather of Hugo Ernst, Mr. Hugo Ernst Braun, the Canonicus from Stift St. Paulin in Trier, looked after the upbringing and education of his godchild.

Best regards..

Fr. Luis de Quintanilla

Louis Augustin Krebs) (Hope you can fit that into the "tree"

I am making this a joint letter to you all in order to avoid having to repeat the information outlined herein a number of times.

Thanks to the current issue of the New Orleans Genesis, the archivist of the St. Louis Cathedral, and to a letter sent me some months ago by Mr. Francis Latady of Birmingham, I am able to state with certainty that the two children listed as Ynes Creps and Estefana Creps in the Baptismal Records in that issue are in fact Agnes Krebs, who married Pierre Sentz, and Emerante (or Amie) Krebs, who married Mariano Latady. This can be done because of the actual birth records which are given in the Spanish record of baptism. The two children were brought to New Orleans by their parents, Pedro Creps and Juana Durif, for baptism on the same day (about 1780--unfortunately the Xerox copy I have did not go back far enough for the date at the beginning of that day's baptisms) and the birth date of each child is given: Ynes was born Jan.12, 1778 and Estefana was born Jan. 15, 1780.

The latter date is important in establishing that Estefana was later known as Emerante, whom we know from all family records to have been Agnes Krebs' sister.

Mariano Latady, husband of Emerante Krebs, wrote down that very date, Jan. 15, 1780, as his wife's birth date, and Mr. Francis Latady, his great-grandson, wrote several months ago that he has that date written down in Mariano Latady's original handwriting.

Therefore, Emerante Krebs was the child of Pierre Krebs and Jeanne Durif, born 1-15-1780, and Agnes Krebs was the Ynes (Spanish for Agnes) born two years earlier, 1-12-1778, also the child of Pierre Krebs and Jeanne Durif.

Translated, the entry from Baptismal Book 1 (Entry 544) 1777-1786, reads as follows:

Item, the same day, I baptised solemnly Ynes, born the 12 of Jan. 1778 and Estefana, born the 15 of Jan. 1780, legitimate daughters of Pedro Creps and Juana Durif, his wife. Godparents of the first, Augustin Creps and Juana Durif, and of the second, Pedro Creps and Juana Creps. --

The next entry, #545, translated: Item, the same day I solemnly baptised Madalena, born the 26 of October 1779, legitimate daughter of Augustin Creps and Madalena Durif, his wife. Godparents, Pedro Creps and Juana Durif, -

Also of interest is the preceding item, #543: Item, the same day I solemnly baptised Jose Creps, born 15 September, 1779, legitimate son of Franco Creps and Elena Moro, his wife. Godparents were(Sr?)Moro and Enfrancia Lami.

That child of Francis Krebs and Helena Maurau de Belleisle must have died young, as Francis is known to have left Louis Augustin's children as his heirs.

And just before that, #542, names Hugo Creps (evidently Daniel Hugo) and Maria Anna Chauvin, as godparents for one of the Labat children.

Incidentally, the birth date for Agnes (Ynes) Krebs is verified closely by her tombstone record, for she died in 1848, and her age is given to be 71. I still have not found any Aline Petit, and unless Pierre Krebs married a second time before he died in 1837 and named her in his estate records, we will have to ascribe her to an erroneous tradition. Best wishes, and hope this will help complete the "tree." Sincerely your cousin,

Regina Kepler

KING

John King, b. 1764 in Craven County, N. C., was probably a Revolutionary Soldier; married in 1780 to Mary Smith, also of Craven County, they remained there until after their first son was born; then to South Carolina where the next three children were born; after 1804 they were for awhile in Alabama and were in Louisiana by 1826, purchasing land in St. Tammany Parish; the 1830 census for that parish lists John King and his three sons-in-law as inhabitants; in 1833 he deeded his property to his sons-in-law, John Alexander, Spias Dixon, and William Cooper, and moved to northwest Jackson County, Miss. In 1836, Cooper and Dixon sold their property, and moved near King in Jackson County.

KREBS

Early Settlers on the Pascagoula

Krebs 1368

For the first hundred years after the French came to the Mississippi Gulf Coast in 1699, the center of the white settlers in the Pascagoula area was the fort built by the French on Lake Catahoula in 1718. Of the leaders in the Pascagoula settlement, four names stand out, either as having land concessions, or as officials of the French government, or as permanent settlers: The Duchess de Chaumont, Joseph Simon de la Pointe, Jean Claude Dupont, and Hugo Ernestus (Renet) Krebs.

The Duchess of Chaumont had a land concession from Louis XIV which covered the Pascagoula area from the mouth of the river northward some eight miles, the headquarters of which was shown on a map of that time as on the west side of the river at what is now Martin's Bluff. It is doubtful that the Duchess ever visited her "plantations" and there is no evidence that it was ever a profitable holding to her.

Joseph Simon de la Pointe, reputedly an admiral in the French navy, was appointed by the French government about 1717 to build a fort on Lake Catahoula, now Krebs Lake, as a protection against possible Indian depredations. How well this fort was constructed is attested by the fact that over two hundred years later it is still being used as an historical museum. As to de la Pointe himself, Hamilton's Colonial Mobile says, "A land concession on Fish River, Nov. 12, 1715 to Joseph Simon de la Pointe, the father of Madame Krebs. His name occurs often in the church records as the father of Madame Krebs." After a year at the fort, ill health caused him to resign his commission and return to France, but he later returned to the colony to live. A map under date of 1732 shows "Habitation of Sieur de la Pointe" on Lake Catahoula.

Jean Claude Dupont, an officer in the French navy, was named to succeed de la Pointe as commander of the French outpost. In 1763 he is listed as one of the signers of the oath of allegiance to England when that country took over all the French colonies in America. In 1791 he and his wife are named as the grandparents of "Charles Renet Krebs, the legitimate son of Joseph Krebs and Maria Louisa Dupont."

Hugo Ernestus (Renet) Krebs, the first Krebs to come to Pascagoula, has been isolated and identified by his will written in Spanish in New Orleans in 1776. In this will he gives his correct name as Hugo Ernestus Krebs and states that he was from Neumagen on the Moselle, Germany, and that he left fourteen grown children. A Hugo Emestus Krebs is listed as one of the signers of the oath of allegiance mentioned above, evidently a misreading of Hugo Ernestus. The birth certificate of Charles Renet Krebs, found at St. Louis Cathedral in New Orleans, Hugo Renet Krebs and Maria Josepha de la Pointe are named as the paternal grandparents.

Records from the Krebs Cemetery

The Krebs cemetery at the old Fort was neglected for many years and as it stands, many of the oldest mausoleums are just piles of brick with no identifying markers. Tradition has it that the first grave made there was for Marie Josepha de la Pointe, Madame Krebs, but there is no marker to confirm this. The earliest date of record in the cemetery is 1764, the birth date of Maria Louise Krebs, written on the same marker with her daughter, Marie Josephine Delmas. In spite of the dearth of the earliest dates, there is a wealth of historical materials confirming family outlines.

Baptismal Certificate of Carlos Renet Krebs

On May 11, 1791, in the parish church of St. Louis in New Orleans Province of Louisiana, was baptized Carlos Renet Krebs, born on February 6 of last year, legitimate son of Josef Krebs and Ma ia Luisa Dupont, born in Mobile, living in Pascagoula.

LEWIS

The ancestor of the Lewis family of Jackson County, Edwin Lewis, emigrated from Charlottesville, Va., the home town of Merriwether Lewis, the noted explorer, in 1803, the former to Mississippi and the latter on the celebrated Lewis and Clarke expedition to the West Coast. No blood relationship between the two is known. A land claim to Edwin Lewis on the Tombigbee bears the date 1806 and one on the Pascagoula of 1811. In the turmoil incident to the West Florida Revolution of 1810, Edwin Lewis was very active in writing letters to Washington denouncing the raids made by Sterling Dupree, who had plundered and carried off much property from Pascagoula, especially despoiled was Lewis' father-in-law, John Baptiste Budreau. Later Lewis wrote denouncing Judge Toulmin for actual and fancied breaches of good conduct in his court proceeding. The similarity between the vitriolic language in these letters and those written some fifty years later by his son, Alfred E. Lewis, describing Civil War atrocities, is very striking.

Edwin Lewis married into one of the oldest families of the early French settlement, that of John Baptiste Budreau, and thus became a very integral part not only of the life but of the thought of the earliest settlers. The names of seven children of Edwin Lewis and Margaret Budreau are of record but little or nothing is known of their descendants except those of one son, Alfred E. Lewis, who has contributed much to the history of the Mississippi Gulf Coast.

On p. 57 — This has to do with the lady procuring her marriage record and details of what she brought to the marriage. Seems that when Pierre Krebs died, Joseph tried to take over everything.

On Doc. 54, in the plastic container, (on top), there is a red section. It says that "in reference to the burnt cabin, when the (Madame Joseph Krebs) returns from Pascagoula, they should build her another cabin similar to the old one or in the manner most reasonable."

I am not sure how much any of this can help, but I think my friend did his best — even with the impossible blackones. His charge is $25.00.

Stay well.

proximo pasado, el Sor. Sopulus Maestro de Escuela al Servicio de dho Sor. Josef Kresp, y un nombrado Barthelemy Marinero entraron en su Casa, un papel en la mano, diciendo ser un Decreto del Sor.
Governador de la Provincia, por el que le estava mandado de reconocer el Sor. Josef Kresp por Curador, y de entregarle los bienes de su difunto Marido, a la que respondi que ya no sabia leer, pero que se me diese la orden y que se la haria explicar; lo que se le rehuso, y se le dijo de disponerse à el Inventa-

1716-1717 – Around this time, "The Canadian, Jean Baptiste Baudreau dit Graveline, who had always been known for his activity, opened on the "black soil" of the Pascagoula River, a "habitation" where he began to raise cattle."

The French wife of Graveline, (?) Susanne of La Rochelle, died October 26, 1713 at their home on Dauphin Island. In 1710 he married her in France on one of the many trips across the Atlantic for food and utensils. With him on that trip was that "industrious entrepreneur" Joseph Simon dit La Pointe, the man who settled at what is now Pascagoula in 1718.

This new land for "Graveline" was on the west side of the Pascagoula River, from an area north of Martin's Bluff to Fountainbleau Beach. His home was built at the site of Martin's Bluff/Hickory Hills. Historic French Louisiana, Volume 2, excerpt 1730 – Hugo Ernestus Krebs came to French Louisiana.

1734 – On March 1, 1734, I, a Capuchin Priest, in my function as Curé at Fort Condé of Mobile and the Pascagoulas and dependences, after the publication of one bann of marriage at the parish Mass on 21 February, Septaugeslima Sunday, without any impediment, and gave dispensation of the two others, between Jean Baptiste Baudrau, Creole of Dauphin Island, son of Jean Baptiste Baudrau dit Graveline, Captain in the Militia, resident of the Pascagoulas, and Susanne, his parents, on one part, and Marie Catherine Vinconnau of La Rochelle, daughter of the deceased Louis Vinconnau, Master tailor of clothes, and Catherine Doucin, wife in second marriage to Joseph Simon dit la Pointe, resident of the Pascagoulas, have received their mutual consent and gave the nuptial blessing with the ordinary ceremonies of the Church at the home of Mr. La Pointe, in presence of the undersigned witnesses with me on the day and year as above.

1751 – Nov 7 - Death of Marie Josephe Simon Lapointe Krebs, the wife of Hugo Ernestus Krebs.
Her burial is recorded in the Mobile Diocese Burial Book.
"On 7 November 1751, I, a Capuchin priest, Cure of Mobile, have buried in the parish cemetery the body of Marie Josephe Lapointe, wife of Mr. Krebs, who died the same day as above, after having received the sacraments of the Church. In faith whereof I have signed, Father Pierre, Cure". Hugo and Marie were parents of seven children, Joseph, Pedro, Francisco, Augustin, Maria Josepha Narbona, Margarita and Maria Gradenigo. Quote from Hugo E. Krebs Will of September 21, 1776 in New Orleans:
"I declare that before contracting the second marriage I had an inventory taken of all the goods that remained at the death of my first wife, including appreciation in value, which amounted to 9,000 pounds, one half of which belonged to me and the other half to my children of that marriage as heirs of their mother, and by agreement reached before the Justice of Mobile I consented to give to each one of my said first children 200 pesos. I have given to Francisco 150 Pesos; to Joseph the same amount; to Augustin the same; to Pedro another 150 Pesos; that these do not have to receive on account of their mother but another 100 Pesos each, which amounts shall be paid out of my succession.

I also declare that no accounting has been made of the portion that belongs to Maria Josepha Narbona, she having been given nothing.

I also declare that I have paid to Margarita, wife of Gradenigo, the portion above mentioned (to my sons) and an additional 100 Pesos should be accounted for out of the corpus of my estate at my death.

1752 – Catherine Doussin Mar 30 – Death, wife of Joseph Simon dit La Pointe. Sacramental Records, Roman Catholic Church, Archdiocese of New Orleans

1753 – Estimated year of marriage – Hugo Ernestus Krebs was married to Marianne Chauvin de Joyeuse in New Orleans about 1753. They were the parents of seven children,

(Granted to Mme. Maurau in 1743)

1784 – Maria Zecilia Krebs Jun 29 – baptism (Cecilia); dau of Joseph Krebs & Maria Louisa Dupont

1786 – Raphael Krebs and Marie Catherine Dupont Sept 18 – Marriage
"Catherine" is the daughter of Jean Claude Dupont and Marie Jeanne Guillory.

1786 – Antoine Krebs Oct – Baptism; child of Louis Augustin Krebs and Magdelaine Durif

1786 – Claude Dupont Estate of Sieur - Upon the death of Sieur Claude Dupont, one Augustin Moreau, called Belleisle, resident on Pascagoula River, became administrator.
There were several distributes, to wit,
Marie Anne Dupont, wife of Mathias Leflaux
Louison Dupont, wife of Joseph Krebs
Jean Baptiste Dupont (Married Marie Rose Ely in 1795, Pascagoula)
(Marie) Catherine Dupont (married Raphael Krebs 18 Sept 1786)
Marie Jeanne Guillory, widow of Claude Dupont, but then, wife of Augustin Moreau (aka "Belleisle")
This married widow petitioned and obtained from Grimarest an arbitration in 1783, Chastang, Sr., Duret, and Dubroca being selected. In some way they overlooked the debts and Moreau next year had the governor set aside their award. The same arbitrators were continued, however, and deducting debts, they ascertained the balance to be 2,347 piastres. Of this, half went to the widow, the rest to the four heirs, all of whom in 1786 sign in satisfaction, renouncing all right of appeal. In connection with this settlement we find Favrot's grant (homologation) of Jean Baptiste's (Dupont) request for emancipation, and that Raphael Krebs be made his guardian (subrogé tutor), Jean Baptiste being only twenty-one years old.

Bapt. Delmas, the Krebses, the Rabys, the Elys, the Cumbests and the Duponts were all on the east side of the river. They all lived in small houses built with mud and sticks, and nicely plastered with lime. Their chief occupation was burning lime for the New Orleans market. Some made tar for the same market. They had three small schooners to carry their products to market. Capt. Delmas seemed to be the leading man among them.

In America
Pascagoula, Mississippi

In September 1998 I travelled to the Mosel River to research the family history of my sixth great-grandfather, Hugo Ernestus Krebs. In Neumagen, I was helped by Klaus and Sylvia Krebs as well as by Monika Schwarz at the town hall. The kind lady who worked in the Trittenheim information office gave me the name of Christoph Schmitt who wrote a detailed letter to me concerning the history of Trittenheim and the meiers. From Pascagoula, Betty Rodgers and Robert Krebs gave advice to me by telephone. From Pensacola, Ellen Foster also encouraged me by telephone, and her book on the Krebs family sparked my initial interest. In Tucson, Felicia Sanders May and Vivian A. Kleese translated some very old and difficult German for me. The volunteers and other researchers at the Family History Center have given so much of their time and knowledge. My husband David cheerfully supports research and travel, gives advice about my writing, and proofreads, even though he doesn't have the slightest interest in family history.

All histories contain errors. Even though I have tried to document every piece of information, I know that future or even current research will find errors. I hope they will be identified and more accurate information will be published.

A Note on Names

Family histories typically have problems with the spelling of names. In previous centuries there was no standardization of the names, and they were spelled the way the writer thought that they should be. In this history the problem is compounded by the use of Latin in church records, old German and regional dialects in documents, and modern German in Familienbuchs. Thus, there are many spellings of the Krebs name: Krebs, Kribs, Kriebs, Krips, Kripps, Crebtz, and Cryfftz. Reinard Fritsch's first name was written Reinerus, in original Latin church records, Reinard in old German in his signature, and Reiner in modern German in the Familienbuchs. Anna Caritas Fitsch's name was written Charitas in Latin and Caritas in modern German.

Introduction

Hugo Ernestus Krebs of Neumagen, Germany immigrated to the Gulf Coast of America in the 1730s. Marie Josephe Simon La Pointe, his wife, was the daughter of Joseph Simon dit La Pointe who was one of the first French Canadians to come to the Gulf Coast. Hugo and Marie Josephe were pioneer settlers of Pascagoula. The Lapointe-Krebs house in Pascagoula, Mississippi is a legacy to their descendants and remains as one of the most historic structures in the Mississippi Valley. They are my sixth great-grandparents.

This monograph was written to provide a historical context for the Krebs family in Germany and to document family members. More importantly, it was written to encourage more research on the family in America and Germany.

This history looks at three towns on the Mosel River in Germany. Hugo Ernestus Krebs was born in Neumagen; his mother in Trittenheim; her mother in Leiwen. It is also the history of the Krebs who were his father's family and the Fritschs, Winters, Kohls and Kochs who were his mother's family. Finally, it is a history of meiers, men who represented the interests of land owners in court. This was the occupation of his mother's people.

The History of Neumagen

The town of Neumagen traces a long recorded history from at least the time of the Romans. It is located near the city of Trier and the early history of Trier is also the history of Neumagen. In the first century B.C. this area on the Mosel River was inhabited by the Treveri people. Edith Mary Wightman, author of Roman Trier and the Treveri, described these people. "The Treveri enter history in the Commentaries written by Julius Caesar on the Gallic War: characterized as a war-like tribe with a reputation for horsemanship, they inhabited an area between Meuse and Rhine, more precisely the middle and lower Mosel valley . . ."[1] The Treveri people were a Celtic tribe who evolved out of the Hunsruck-Eifel Culture which had lasted from to 600 to 250 B.C. Julius Caesar came upon the Treveri during his Gallic Wars of 58 to 50 B.C. Excavations of the graves of the Treveri show mounted warriors and charioteers. As the Romans took control of the area the Celtic Treveri people integrated into the Roman population, and a Gallo-Roman culture developed.[2]

About 17 B.C. the Romans in the reign of Caesar Augustus founded Augusta Treverorium, later known as Trier. The first Roman bridge across the Mosel was built at that time. In the 2nd and 3rd century A.D. Trier was a large and wealthy Roman city with villas in the suburbs. The Emperor Diocletian made Trier the capital of the Western Roman Empire at the end of the 3rd century A.D. The town became a center of early Christianity. In the first part of the 4th century A.D. it reached the height of its power under Constantine. The Romans built and occupied several military outposts in Germany, although the city of Trier was a civilian rather than military settlement. Neumagen was a small and fortified Roman outpost known as Noviomagus or New Market. It was about 24 miles downstream from Trier on the Mosel River. Edith Wightman described the siting of the Roman Noviomagus.

> Of the known villages on the Mosel, some served principally river-traffic, others road and river. Noviomagus, modern Neumagen, mentioned in the Antonine Itinerary (a Roman document which listed the names of towns and villages with the distance between them) and Ravenna Cosmography as well as by Ausonius . . . must be regarded as a staging-post, on the Mosel valley branch of the Trier-Mainz road. Situated at the point where the road and river diverge, it would be an important loading and unloading point. Little is known about early Neumagen; pottery and coin evidence show that it started in the 1st century, but flourished more in the 2nd and 3rd. It is the sculptured tombstones built into the later fortifications which best indicate the prosperity of the surrounding region.[3]

Several of the Roman villages were fortified. The forts were typically made of thick walls with protruding towers. Some archaeological evidence suggests that the fort at Neumagen was constructed after the village had burned. The size of the fort was about 100 yards square although the fort was polygonal in shape.[4]

In Germany in the early Roman times gravestones were small, but as the prosperity of the region increased tower tombs were built as monuments. These tombs were richly decorated with relief sculpture. Starting in the late 3rd century some of these tombs were dismantled, and the old bas relief stones were used as building material. When the Roman fort at Neumagen was excavated, these sculptured stones were found. Although it is probable that they originally came from somewhere else, they have become identified with Neumagen. They are now kept in the Rheinisches Landesmuseum in Trier, although replicas are placed in Neumagen at the site where they were found.[6] They give a picture of life in those times. The most famous of the Neumagen bas reliefs is the one depicting a wine ship from the early 3rd century. Roman soldiers were paid, in part, in wine. So vines were brought from Rome and planted along the Mosel and Rhine to produce the wine. Food and supplies were brought from Trier to Neumagen by river. The wine was also transported by river, and this is the subject of the famous Neumagen stone.

The history of the area thus moves from the Treveri people to the Romans and then to the Germans. The German Franks conquered the area in the 5th century A.D. and in 870 it became part of the East Frankish Empire. In 882 the Normans sacked Trier. In the 10th century the Trier Archbishop assumed control. The Trier Archbishop became an elector of the German kings in the 14th century when the town's population was about 10,000. Periods of war, prosperity and decline continue to the present day.

By the 1500s the town of Dhron, which is immediately adjacent to Neumagen, is noted in some records of the Krebs family. These two towns are typically referred to together as Neumagen-Dhron.

At the time of Hugo Ernestus Krebs's life in Germany in the first part of the 18th century, there are historical sources which give information about Neumagen and the people who lived there. The church records are a primary source. The original records are written in Latin and are kept in the Bistumsarchiv in Trier.[7] In the first half of the twentieth century, probably in the 1930s, a Familienbuch or Family Book was written from the Neumagen church records. It provides genealogical information about families. It includes baptism, marriage, and death dates for the people of the parish as well as yearly tabulations of the numbers of these events. Also included are some written histories of the parish and town.[8]

There are also some drawings of the town done after the time Hugo Krebs and his parents lived there. During the 18th and 19th centuries many series of paintings of the towns on the Rhine and the Mosel Rivers were done. One series of lithographs by Clarkson W. Stanfield in the 1830s entitled "The Romanticism of the Mosel from Trier to Koblenz", which is in the Mittel-Mosel-Museum in Trarbach, shows a pastoral scene of Neumagen with only the church, a building, and trees.[9]

In Chonik Neumagen-Dhron, the book of Neumagen's history, there is a curious drawing of Neumagen from 1730 when Krebs was 16 years old. The original is not reproduced, but a 1960's redrawing is.[10] Also included is a line drawing of the original which gives a clearer picture of the buildings. Some of the buildings are identifiable and are still there today. The small chapel called Peterskapelle still exists. The church, however, has been rebuilt and only parts of the steeple date from the 1700s. There has been a church on that site however since 1190.[11]

In 1732 a list of 17 rules was drawn up by the Neumagen town government. The rules included such items as a requirement that everyone must register once a year and only people who worked there could live there. They were voted on by the men of the town, 112 voted in favor, and they passed. Those who did not vote in favor were not recorded in the book. No Krebs man voted in favor.[12] The vote does show something about the population of the town at that time. There were probably 100 or so families and the drawing suggests a town of that size. The homes appear to be single story as well as two and three stories in height.

There are houses in Neumagen which are said to date from the time of Hugo Ernestus Krebs and his parents, Johann Krebs and Anna Charitas Fritsch. The house at Romerstrasse 98 has a date of 1730 near the gate and a date of 1742 on a public well. The house at Romerstrasse 92 is known as HAUS KREBS and is dated June 21, 1618, and the name Johannes Thommel is still written over the door.[13] A house at Moselstrasse 9 dates from 1740.[14] Johann and Anna Charitas were still living when it was built. One can assume that Hugo had left for the Gulf Coast prior to the building of this house. A building that Hugo was probably familiar with was the small and beautifully situated chapel called Peterskapelle which was built in the 1300s.

The Familienbuch or Family Book of Neumagen includes a tabulation of baptisms, marriages, and deaths for each year between 1692 and 1773. Baptisms only were tabulated from 1688 to 1691. From 1688 to 1730 there were typically from 30 to 50 baptisms, 4 to 13 marriages, and 12 to 47 deaths each year. It appears that the population of the town was stable. However, there were years when there were more than the usual deaths which might suggest epidemic years. For instance, in 1705 there were 123 deaths but there was no appreciable decline in baptisms or marriages in the few years after that which suggests that the very young and the very old died.[15]

In 1714, the year of the birth of Hugo Ernestus Krebs, Europe was recovering from the reign of Louis XIV of France. The king had twice ordered the devastation of the German Palatinate where the Krebs family lived. His army laid waste to the region in 1674 and again in 1688 Then in September 1715 Louis XIV died after taking the people of France through the glory of le grand siecle to eventual defeat and impoverishment.

Germany at that time was an extraordinarily diverse place. Johann Sebastian Bach was named Konzertmeister by Duke Wilhelm of Weimar in 1714. Bach was also an avid genealogist who carefully documented his ancestors. King Frederick William I of Prussia made primary education compulsory in 1717. Will and Ariel Durant described the political situation of "these virile folk" in 1715.

> It was fortunate for France and England that these virile folk, numbering then some twenty millions, were still divided into more than three hundred practically independent states, each with its sovereign prince, its own court, policy, army, coinage, religion, and dress; all in various stages of economic and cultural development; the whole agreeing only in language, music, and art. Sixty-three of the principalities - including Cologne, Hildesheim, Mainz, Trier, Speyer, Wurzburg - were ruled by archbishops, bishops, or abbots. Fifty-one cities - chiefly Hamburg, Bremen, Magdeburg, Augsburg, Nuremberg, Ulm, and Frankfurt-am-Main - were "free," i.e. loosely subject, like the princes, to the head of the Holy Roman Empire.
> Outside of Saxony and Bavaria, most of the German land was cultivated by serfs legally bound to the soil they tilled, and subject to nearly all the old feudal dues. . . Class divisions were sharp, but they were so mortised in time that the commonalty accepted them with very little complaint; and they were mitigated by a greater survival and honoring of seignorial obligations to protect the peasant in misfortune, to care for him in sickness and old age, to look after widows and orphans, and to maintain peace and order.[16]

The Krebs of Neumagen

Two records document that Hugo Ernestus Krebs was from Neumagen, Germany and was the son of Johann Krebs and Anna Charitas Fritsch. He stated this in his last will and testament,[17] and his baptism was recorded in Neumagen. The Neumagen church records started in 1689 and are kept in the Bistumsarchiv in Trier.[18] They are in Latin and are difficult to read. German Catholic Church records are also kept in a Familienbuch or Family Book which gives a complete record of the families in a parish. The Familienbuch of Neumagen documents the Krebs family.[19] The Familienbuch contains several sections of information. The largest is an alphabetical listing of family groups which includes a husband, a wife, baptized children and their spouses. Another section contains a history of the leaders of the town and a history of the church. One section is a listing of deaths of people who were not included in family groups with a husband and wife and baptized children.

In the Neumagen Familienbuch the last name for people probably named Krebs was variously spelled as Krebs, Kribs, Kriebs, and Krips. The name means crayfish. The first mention of the Krebs family is in a list of people who died. This death listing presumably includes people who had been born before 1688 or were not part of a family group baptizing children after 1688, although it is impossible to determine this because only their name and death date are mentioned. For some reason there were two different groupings of families under the names of Kribs and Kriebs which is not explained. The first list starts with a woman, Maria Magdalena followed by four people who appear to have been her children. In this society the mother was referred to by her maiden name. It thus seems unlikely that this would be mother and children although the style of the presentation makes it seem probable.

Kribs, M(aria) Mag(dalena) died 5 August 1698
" Jodocus died 16 January 1712
" Lois, daughter, died 26 December 1738
" Peter died 18 April 1697
" Susana, young unmarried woman, died 23 November 1695[20]

Krebs 1466

In the second grouping the last name is spelled differently and there are three people with the last having died in Neumagen in 1768.

Kriebs, Elis(abeth) died 27 March 1699
" Johann, adolescent, died 14 July 1704 died in a flood of the Mosel
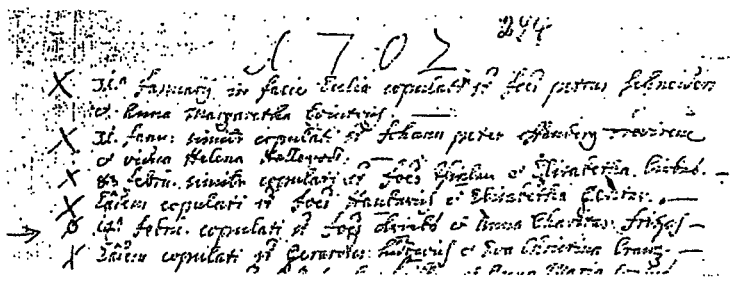
" Maria in Neumagen died 22 July 1768[21]

The Krebs name first appears in the Familienbuch in family groups with two men, Johann and Mathias. Johann and his wife Anna Charitas baptized nine children in Neumagen from 1703 to 1721. The baptism records also show Mathias Krips and his first wife Agnes Apoll Meurer and his second wife Susanna Kirsher baptizing children in Neumagen from 1710 to 1730. One could assume that Mathias and Johann were brothers or cousins.[22]



The original marriage record of Johann Krebs and Anna Charitas Fritsch

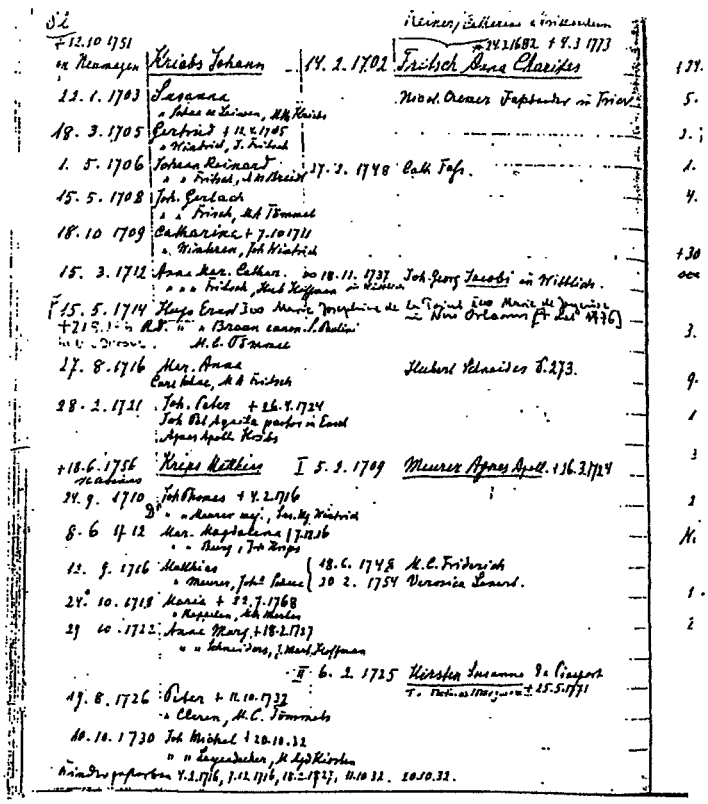
Johann Krebs and Anna Charitas Fritsch were married on February 14, 1702.[23] Hugo Ernestus was the seventh of their nine children.

The baptism records of this family include notations of godparents. Godparents can give clues to other family members. I have noted possible godparent relationships to the child parenthetically.

The Schue family was related to the Fritsch family. Susanna Schue from Leiwen, the godmother of Anna Charitas and Johann's first child, was related to Anna Charitas. Anna Charitas's mother Catharina Winter had a sister married to Johann Schue who was a meier or official in Neumagen from July 28, 1661. It is not clear who the godmother Susanna Schue was. A Johann Schue was a godparent for a child of Mathias Krebs and Maria Catharina Schue was the mother-in-law of Mathias Krebs.[24]

Mathias Krebs was the godfather of the first child of Johann and Anna Charitas. His wife, Agnes Apoll Kriebs was the godmother of their last child. Johann Krebs was godparent to Mary Magdalena, the child of Mathias Krebs. Otherwise, all the godparents I have identified parenthetically are maternal relatives. Some godparents may be relatives of Johann Krebs's mother whose name is unknown.

Each child was named after the godparent. This tradition continued in America. Hugo Ernestus Krebs and his maternal cousin, the son of Johann Fritsch and Maria Anna Tommell, were named after their godfather Hugo Ernst Braun who was a canon at the St. Paulin Monastery in Trier. Braun was from the town of Schmidtburg in southern Germany near the Austrian border. He was ordained as a canon on September 17, 1694 and was at St. Paulin from 1706 to his death on March 24, 1728. The relationship between him and the Krebs, Fritschs and Tommells is not known. Because he was godfather to a child from these two families it is possible that he was a family friend. Since he was from Schmidtburg which was located a great distance from Neumagen it is unlikely that he was a relative.[25]



The Neumagen Familienbuch. Curiously, the marriages of Hugo Ernestus Krebs in America is written into the Familienbuch. Possibly the information came from the need to probate the estate of his parents in Neumagen.

In the original baptism written in Latin, Hugo Ernestus Krebs was baptized Hugo Ernestus Kripps and his godfather's name was written the same way. In the familienbuch his name was written Hugo Ernst. Also, records of Hugo Ernst Braun do not use Ernestus. Ernst appears to be German and Ernestus Latin. Hugo Ernestus Krebs used the Latin name in America.[26]

I have transcribed here the baptismal records of all the children of Johann Krebs and Anna Charitas Fritsch. It includes my parenthetical information about possible relationships with godchildren.[28]

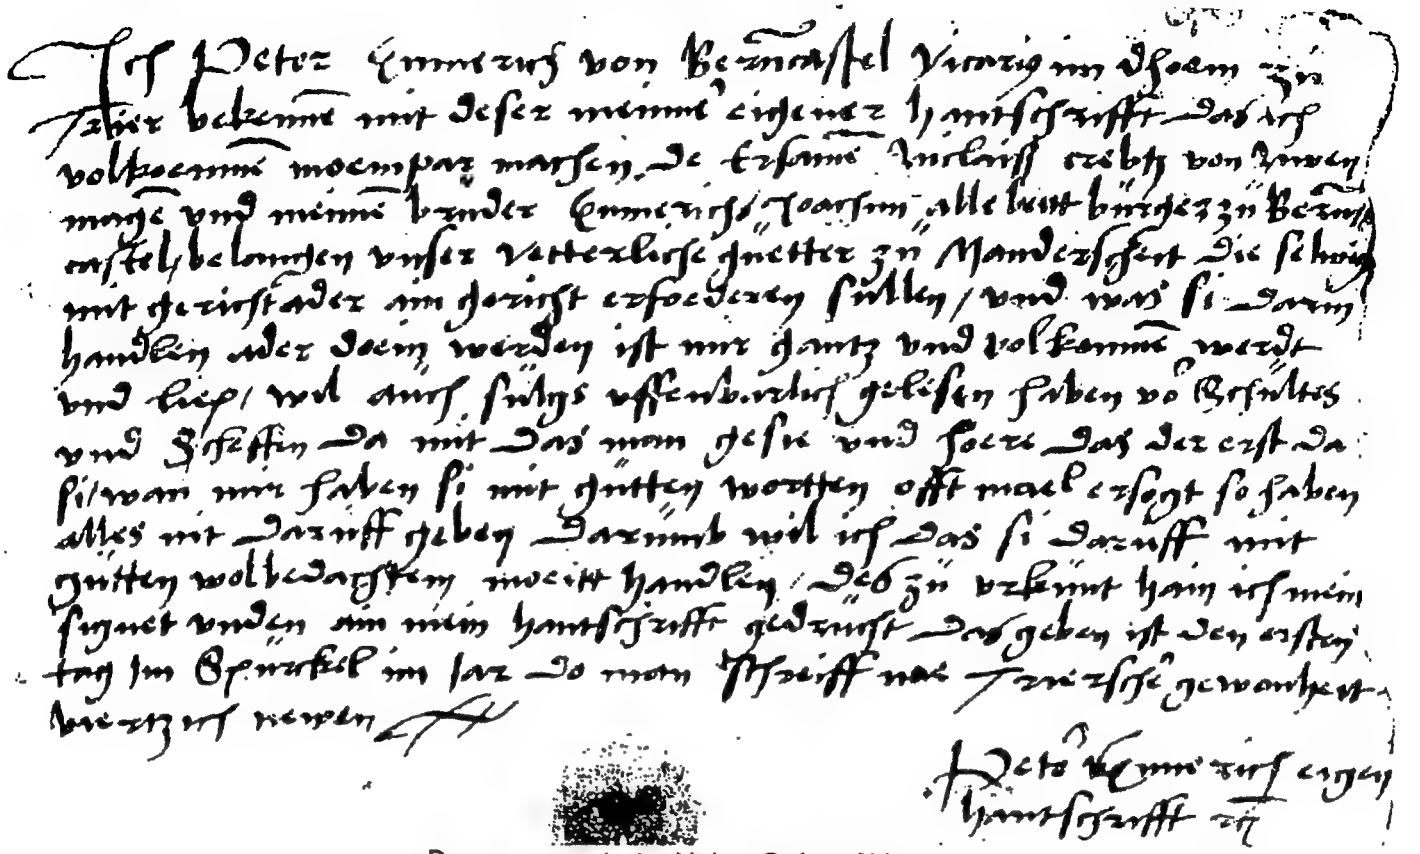
January 22, 1703	Susanna	Godparents Susanna Schue of Leiwen and Mathias Kriebs. (Susanna Schue was a maternal relative.)
March 18, 1705	Gerhard	Godparents Gerhard Hindrich and J. Fritsch (unknown female maternal relative)
May 1, 1706	Johann Reinard	Godparents Johann Fritsch and A.M. Breiot (maternal uncle)
May 15, 1708	Johann Gerlach	Godparents Johann Frisch and M.A. Tommel (maternal uncle and maternal aunt, wife of Johann Gerlach Fritsch)
October 18, 1709	Catharina	Godparents Catharina Hindren and Joh Kindrich
March 15, 1712	Anna Mar. Cathar	Godparents Anna Mar. Fritsch and Hugh Hoffman in Wittlich (Godmother is maternal relative. Wittlich is on the Lieser River to the northwest of Kues)
May 15, 1714	Hugo Ernst	Godparents Hugo Ernst Braun and M.C. Tommell (Godfather is canon at St. Pauline Monastery. Godmother is maternal relative)
August 27, 1716	Mar. Anna	Godparents Carl Schue and M.A. Fritsch (maternal relatives)
February 28, 1721	Joh Peter	Godparents Joh Peter Agaila and Agnes Apoll Kriebs (Godfather is pastor in Ensch and godmother is possibly paternal aunt, the first wife of Mathias Krebs)

Three of their children died in childhood. Gerhard died on April 12, 1705 at the age of one month; Catharina died on October 7, 1711 at the age of two years; and Johan Peter died on April 26, 1724 at the age of three years.

Johann Krebs died on October 12, 1751 and Anna Charitas Fritsch died on March 4, 1773.[29]

These are the earliest church records that exist for Neumagen. However, there are probably documents that pertain to property or legal matters still in existence in German records. It is wrong to assume that everyone in this area named Krebs is related. But the name does suggest lines of research. One such German record is from 1409 and refers to Niclaus Crebtz of Neumagen. The document is from Peter Emmerich of Bernkastel, vicar of the Cathedral of Trier. He gives to his brother Joachim Emmerich and to the honorable Niclaus Crebtz of Neu Magen, both of them citizens of Bernkastel, power to act on manners regarding the holdings of their father (this meant Peter and Joachim Emmerich's father) in an area controlled by the Duke of Manderscheid.

The document was dated the first day of Spurkel, or February, in the year 1409. It probably gives power of attorney to Niclaus Crebtz and Joachim Emmerich while Peter Emmerich is a vicar of the church. This record documents a Krebs in Neumagen in 1409. However, this name could have been used by many families. There is a three hundred year gap between Niclaus Crebtz and Johann Krebs of Neumagen.[30]



Document mentioning Niclaus Crebtz of Neumagen

The most important man named Krebs from the Mosel region is the great humanist Nikolaus Cusanus of Bernkastel-Kues. These two towns, Bernkastel and Kues, are across the river from each other and are about 12 miles down river from Neumagen. Nikolaus was born in 1401 in Kues. He was the son of a merchant shipowner. In the Moselle-Franconian dialect his name was Hennen Cryfftz which translates in German to Johann Krebs and in English to John Crayfish. As a priest he was known as Nikolaus of Cusa or Cusanus which means "man from Kues" in Latin. He rose through the church hierarchy to become Papal Legate in Germany, Bishop of Brixen, Cardinal of the Catholic Church, and General Curate in Rome. He died in 1464. Cusanus was truly a Renaissance man. His scholarly interests were enormous. As a philosopher he taught the infinity of the world which led the way for modern mathematics and created a conception of the world that was to be confirmed as true in its essentials by modern-age scientist from Copernicus to Einstein. His first and principal philosophical treatise "De Docta Ignorantia" argues that one who is truly learned is aware of his own ignorance. He collected a large library of manuscripts, books, and maps which still exists today. Nikolaus established a home for the poor in his hometown of Kues. To do this he and his brother and sister dedicated their wealth as well as their father's estate to the establishment of the St. Nikolaus Hospital. The deed for this hospital was executed on December 3, 1458. The number of needy men in the home was to be 33 representing each year of Christ's life. Since 1465 the dining room has been in continuous operation for the poor men who have lived in this home. The entire complex of buildings including his library and the wine cellar can be visited today.[31]

Another Krebs is mentioned in a note about the 16th century included in the Neumagen Familienbuch. There is no information about who wrote it, but it appears to be a transcription of earlier records. It lists men from Neumagen and the adjacent town of Dhron. At the top of the note is the date May 6, 1579. This is followed by a list of seven men. The first is noted to be the district magistrate, the third man is a meier in Dhron, and the last man is Wolfertes Krebs of Dhron.[32] There is no known evidence linking Wolfertes Krebs, Nikolaus Cusanus or Niclaus Crebtz to the family of Hugo Ernestus Krebs. Three hundred years separate them. These three men are mentioned to encouraged further research.

The History of Leiwen and Trittenheim

The mother of Hugo Ernestus Krebs, Anna Charitas Fritsch, was born in Trittenheim three miles upriver from Neumagen. Her mother, Catharina Winter, was from Leiwen which was one-half mile up and across the river from Trittenheim.

Information about Trittenheim and Leiwen comes from Christoph Schmitt of Calw, Germany who has written about the history of Trittenheim.[33] At the time of the lives of Anna Charitas Fritsch's ancestors in Leiwen there are no historical records that have been discovered and written about. This is a gap in the historical records which may be filled with more extensive research.

Trittenheim was probably founded in pre-medieval times. The first mention of Trittenheim was in 893 A.D. in a document from the monastery in Prum. The town and surrounding area was owned by three different entities in the 11th and 12th centuries. One part had belonged to the Monastery in Prum since the early middle ages. Another part was owned by the Archbishop of Trier. The final part belonged to the Benedictine Abbey of St. Matthias and St. Eucharius which received it in the 10th or 11th century from the Archbishop of Trier.

The Prum Abbey loaned Trittenheim to the Dukes of Vianden around the beginning of 1000 A.D. In the 1600s the town ownership was transferred from the Dukes of Vianden to the Dukes of Mandersheid through marriage. The Mandersheids then possessed property and speaking rights about village life in the judicial courts. In a lay council the Dukes of Mandersheid had 7 of 14 representatives. The other 7 representatives were divided between the Archbishop of Trier with 4 and the Trier Abbey with 3. The council took care of the law and justice of the area and was in turn responsible to the nobility. In 1700 the property of the Duke of Mandersheid was bought by the Crown Prince and the Archbishop of Trier.

The history of the Leiwen-Trittenheim-Neumagen area on the Mosel River during the 17th century was tumultuous. The plague, the Thirty Years' War, and other wars caused considerable havoc. The plague occurred throughout the 17th century. The Thirty Years' War lasted from 1618 to 1648. Ostensibly a war between Protestants and Catholics, it was in fact, much more complicated. The Protestants themselves were fiercely and murderously divided between the Lutherans and the Calvinists. Eventually the religious aspect of the war disappeared in favor of the political aspect. Six armies were involved: German, French, Swedish, Spanish, Danish, and Bohemian. Many people were killed in the War, especially from 1632 to 1645. It is estimated that the population of Germany fell from 21,000,000 to 13,500,000 during that time.[34] Will and Ariel Durant in their great history of Western Civilization wrote of this war.

> Thousands of fertile acres were left untilled for lack of men, draft animals, or seed, or because peasants had no assurance that they could reap what they had sown. Crops were used to feed armies, and what remained was burned to prevent the feeding of foes. . . The air was poisonous with refuse and offal and carcasses rotting in the streets. Epidemics of typhus, typhoid, dysentery, and scurvy ran through the terrified population and from town to town. The arts and letters that had ennobled the cities withered in the heat of war.
> Morals and morale alike collapsed. The fatalism of despair invited the cynicism of brutality. All the ideals of religion and patriotism disappeared after a generation of violence; simple men now fought for food or drink or hate, while their masters mobilized their passions in the competition for taxable lands and political power.[35]

The war was concluded in 1648 with the Treaty of Westphalia which created the Palatinate area of Germany as an eighth electorate with Charles Louis as Elector. The Palatinate is the area on the west side of the Rhine River where Neumagen and Trier are located. Germany was an association of areas which were each controlled by imperial electors who elected an emperor. These electors were either political rulers or spiritual electors who were archbishops, including the archbishop from Trier.

Not only the war but also the plague was present in Trittenheim during the 17th century, and Mr. Schmitt, the historian, has said the historical memory of the town includes a legend that the population was destroyed and families from the town of Leiwen moved to Trittenheim to occupy the housing. However, he believes that the population was not completely destroyed but was decreased by about one third at that time. Mr. Schmitt has studied and written about Pestkreuze, or pestilent crosses, that were erected in Trittenheim in 1654.[36]

1654 Pestkreuze

In popular memory these crosses were erected to ward off the plague. Mr. Schmitt states that they were erected to thank God for sparing lives and to hope for better times ahead. The crosses appear to have been paid for by patrons who had social ranking.

In Trittenheim during the Thirty Years' War there were terrible economic hardships, but the tax lists show that there were also some winners and losers. The patrons of the crosses were typically the winners.

Trittenheim baptismal font

After 1648 some people from Leiwen moved into Trittenheim. There was a favorable period for the population and the economy between 1650 and 1670. Even more people became economically prosperous. In 1680 some Italian families moved into the town, and their descendants are still there today.

Then followed a terrible period for the people. Mr. Schmitt cited the proverb that "war breeds war" to describe the times. The French, Spanish, Dutch, and Germans were fighting in the area up until the last French occupation after the War of Spanish Succession in 1713. From that time until the French Revolution in 1789 there was some peace and quiet.

Unfortunately there is little left in Trittenheim from the 17th century that would have been known by Anna Charitas and her family. There are also very few records prior to 1550. The parish, which had St. Clemens in Rome as patron, has existed since the 11th century. It was in the possession of the Abbey of St. Matthias in Trier and was apparently a gift of the Archbishop of Trier. Only the lower half of the present day church's tower is from the Middle Ages. The existing church was built between 1790 and 1793 and replaced a church which was built in 1722. However, the baptismal font dates from the 17th century. Evidence from the church book entry of 1626 shows that it was erected in that year. This font was probably used to baptize the Fritsch children.

The Fritsch Family of Trittenheim and Leiwen

The earliest known records of Hugo's father, Johann Krebs, are the Neumagen church records. He was first mentioned in the baptism record of his oldest child, Susanna, on January 22, 1703.

Hugo's mother's family can be traced back further to the nearby towns of Trittenheim and possibly Leiwen and Piesport. Hugo's mother, Anna Charitas Fritsch, came from the town of Trittenheim on the Mosel River. It is about 3 miles upriver of Neumagen. The original church books of the pastorate of St. Clemens in Trittenheim, the Trittenheim Kirchenbuch, are kept in the Bistumsarchiv in Trier. These records have been transcribed into a Familienbuch or Family Book.[37] Because the Familienbuch is a 20th century transcription of the Kirchenbuch there are errors.

Original baptism record of Anna Charitas Fritsch

Anna Charitas was baptized on March 24, 1682. Her parents were Reinard Fritsch and Catharina Winter and her godparents were Charitas Jacobi Jungling of Neumagen and Mathias Bruls.[38] Five children of Reinard and Catharina were baptized. Johann Jacob Fritsch was baptized on April 8, 1674. Nicolaus Fritsch was baptized on January 4, 1676. He is not included with this family in the Familienbuch because his last name was transcribed incorrectly. Adam Fritsch was baptized on February 23, 1678. Johann Fritsch was baptized on September 8, 1679. Anna Charitas Fritsch, mother of Hugo Ernestus Krebs, was the next child. Johann Gerlach Fritsch was baptized on January 24, 1684. All of the children of Reinard Fritsch and Catharina Winter lived to adulthood.[39]

The Trittenheim Kirchenbuch, the Trittenheim Familienbuch, and the Leiwen Familienbuch give conflicting information about the family of Catharina Winter. Therefore, information will be presented from each source. The following caveats apply.

1. Only the information in the Trittenheim Kirchenbuch is original. Trittenheim church records begin in 1598, and Leiwen church records begin in 1705.

2. The information in the Trittenheim Familienbuch and Leiwen Familienbuch was written in the twentieth century. Other than the Kirchenbuch, no other sources are given even though there is additional information.

3. Different people can have the same name.

4. The names are written as they were in the record. For example, Joannes Winteren and Eva Colin are what is written in the Kirchenbuch. In the Familienbuch they are written Joh. Winteren and Eva Kohl.

Trittenheim Kirchenbuch

The Trittenheim Kirchenbuch, the original source for the Trittenheim Familienbuch, does not appear to have a baptism recorded for Catharina Winter. There are, however, baptism entries for the children of her presumed parents Joannes Winteren and Eva Colin. Remember, different people can share the same name. In the Familienbuch and Kirchenbuch the family is listed with the name Winteren. Winteren rather than Winter is also how the name is written in the Leiwen Familienbuch. The following baptisms were recorded in the Trittenheim Kirchenbuch for Joannes Winteren and Eva Colin: Engelbert on November 1, 1633; Margaretha on November 5, 1635; and Joannes Mathias on January 10, 1638. The parents of Joannes Mathias Winteren were Joannes Winteren, mayor Mandersheid, and Eva Colin. For the other children her name was written Eva with no last name. Joannes and Eva were popular godparents during this time. Eva was last a godparent in Trittenheim in 1640. After that there are no further church records of this family. Margareta daughter of Joes Winteren was a godmother on January 2, 1652. One could assume that they are Margaretha and Joannes Winteren. Casporius Winteren was a godfather for the son of Bonifacie Lay on July 2, 1652. Christoph Schmitt wrote that Joannis Winters, Mandersheid meier was in Trittenheim on January 16, 1654. There appears to be no record of the baptism of Catharina Winter. Because Catherina's first child was baptized in 1674 one could assume that Catharina was born in the early 1650s. Was she the daughter of the Joannes Winteren and Eva Colin who baptized children in Trittenheim from 1633 to 1638?[40]

Trittenheim Familienbuch

The Familienbuch has a listing for the family of Joh. Winteren and Eva Kohl. This is a transcription of the baptism records of the children of Joannes Winteren and Eva Colin who baptized three children in Trittenheim: Engelbert on November 1, 1633; Marg. on November 5, 1635; and Joh. Math. on January 10, 1638. This is the same information in the Trittenheim Kirchenbuch except that Eva Colin is now Eva Kohl and two of the children and the father's names are abbreviated. However, additional information is provided. The name Caspar Winteren who died June 8,1655 is written above the family of Joh. Winteren and Eva Kohl. The Trittenheim Kirchenbuch mentioned Casporius Winteren as a godfather for the son of Bonifacie Lay on July 2, 1652. Joh. Winteren was identified as a Mandersheid meier as was written on the baptism of Joannes Mathias Winteren. There is a note that another of their children, Georg, was baptized in Trier on Feb 2, 1648. This suggests that the family moved to Trier. As in the Kirchenbuch, there is no record of the baptism of Catharina Winter. The Familienbuch states, however, that Anna Charitas's mother, Catharina Winter, was the child of Johann Winter and Eva Kohl of Leiwen. Leiwen is a town one half mile upriver from Trittenheim. Another entry in the Familienbuch mentions Eva Kohl. It was the family record of Johan Schu and Susanna Winteren who baptized children between 1642 and 1652. Johan Schu was described as a Mandersheid meier. Above Susanna's name was a note indicating daughter of Yve Koll = Colin. Underneath her name was a note indicating daughter of Eva Colin in Leiwen. Could this mean that there was another Eva Kohl who had a family of children in Leiwen?[41]

Leiwen Familienbuch

The town of Leiwen also has a Familienbuch.[42] The title page has a date of October 1938, and it was apparently written in Trier. It is taken from the Leiwen parish records from 1705 to 1798. On the title page in pencil is a reference to genealogies of five other families including the genealogical table of Franz Jakob Winter. The Familienbuch contains in alphabetical order the families' baptism, marriage, and death records. At the end there is a seven page written genealogy of the Winter family with dates only for the 1700s, with the exception of the 1643 baptism of Johann Georg Winter and a date in 1589. I do not know who wrote this genealogy. The source was the records of the Trier Classical Secondary School. This is the handwritten first page of the genealogy.

10 December 1589
From the foundation records of the foundation of Anna Goebel
Trier Classical Secondary School

The parents of the founder are called Anton Goebel and Anna Koch, daughter of Casper in Piesport Merchant of Trier

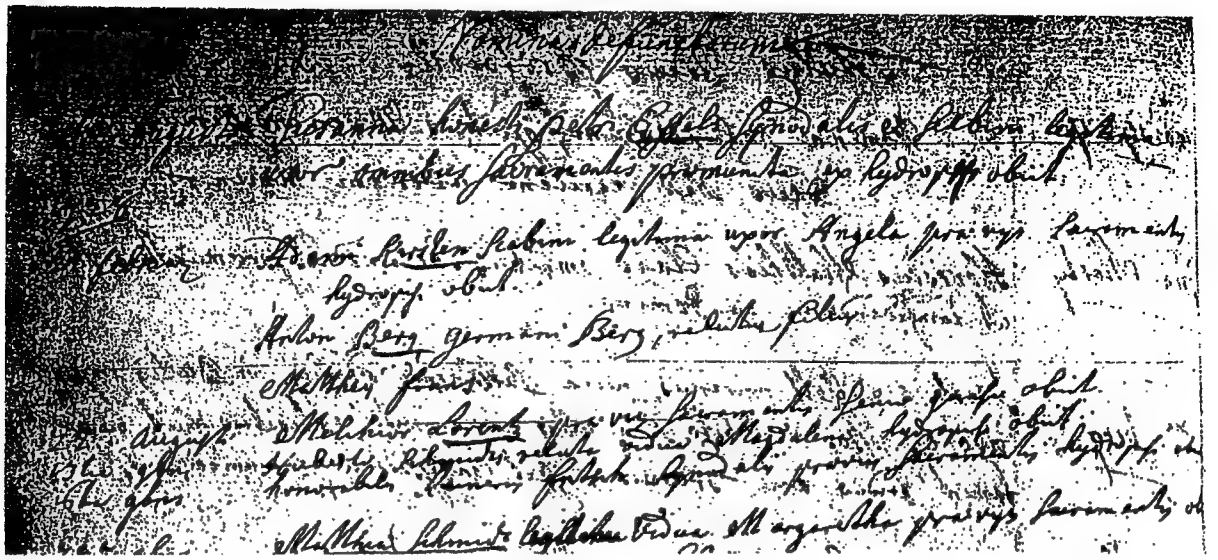
The Anna Koch had two sisters
Angela Koch married Conrad Breit, village magistrate in Emmel
Maria Koch married with Franz Jacob Winter, village magistrate in Leiwen

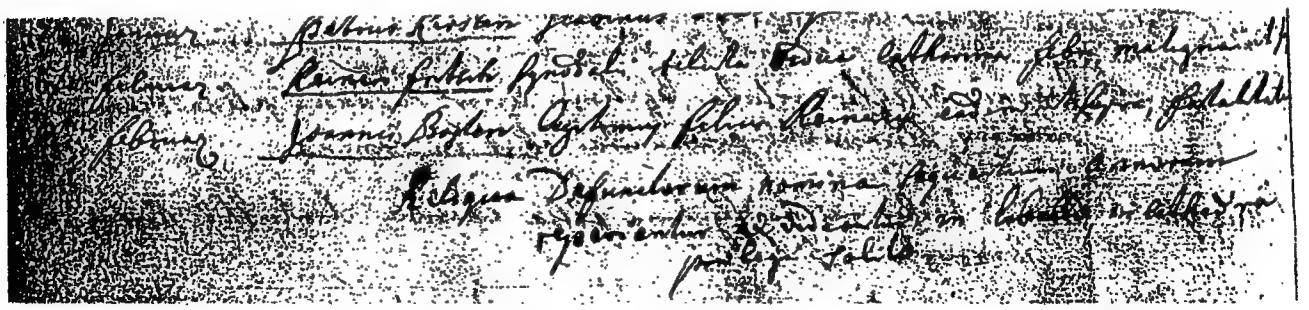
There then follows a written genealogy of the family of Anna Goebels of the sixteenth century school, or foundation, in Trier. Only once is a date given in the 1600s. The parents, children and their spouses are listed. The following genealogy is derived from this list. Casper Koch of Piesport had at least three daughters who were named Anna, Angela, and Maria. Maria Koch married Franz Jacob Winter and they had five children: Johann, Gudelia, Susanna, Catharina, and Maria. Franz Jacob Winter is noted to be a meier of both Leiwen and Trittenheim. Johann Winter married Eva Kohl and they had five children: Susanna, Adam, Johann Gorg, Charitas, and Catharina. Only Johann Gorg has a birth date which is 2 Feb 1643. Catharina married Reinard Fritsch and became the mother of Anna Charitas Fritsch.

The information from these three books makes it impossible to come to a conclusion about the family history of Catharina Winter.

In the Trittenheim Familienbuch the parents of Reinard Fritsch were not mentioned, however in it is the notation by his name that he was aus Neumagen or from Neumagen. When considering the aus Neumagen, it is important to remember that this was written 300 years after his birth.[43] There are no church records for the Fritsch family in Neumagen, but these records only date from 1688. Reinard and Catharina's first child was baptized in 1674, and they lived another 54 years which suggests they were both in their mid 70s when they died. Reinard died on November 16, 1728 and then Catharina died two and a half months later on February 6, 1729. The death entries in the parish records are written in Latin. It shows that Catharina died of "malignant fever". The Latin words on Reinard's death entry is very difficult to decipher. He may have died of dropsy which is edema or rabies.[44] For that time, Reinard and Catharina had a long and fortunate life. All of their children survived, married, and had children.

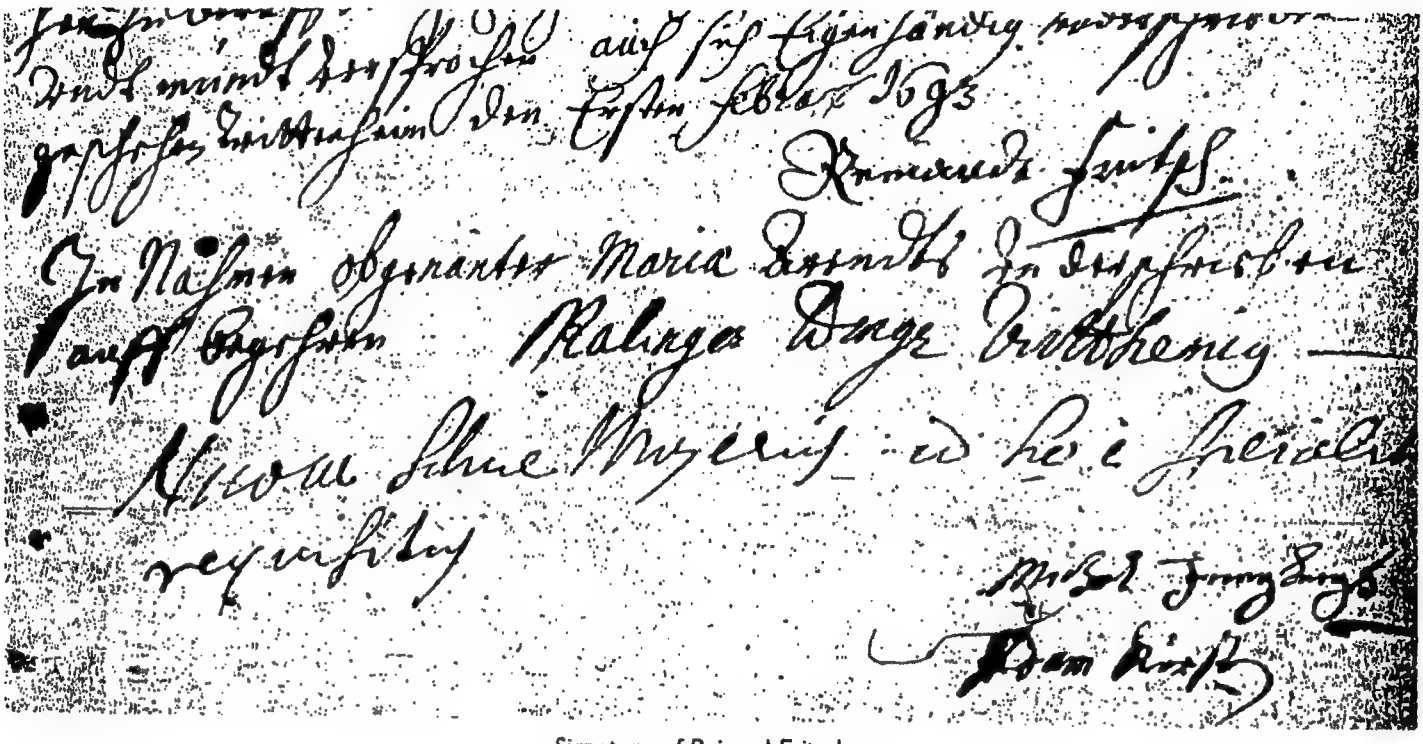


Death record of "honorable Reinerus Fritsch"



Death record of Reinerus Fritsch's widow Catharina

There is a marriage record of February 1693 in the Trittenheim Kirchenbuch or church book. This book is the original record from which the Familienbuchs were derived. It appears to be a record of the marriage of Reinard and Catharina's oldest son, Johann Jacob, to Margaret Arens. This document is signed by Reinard. His name is typically written Reiner in the Familienbuchs, and this is probably a modernization of his name. Johann Jacob Fritsch's 15 year old brother, Adam, also signed the document at the bottom.[45]



Signature of Reinard Fritsch

Reinard Fritsch was a man of position in Trittenheim. According to the church records Reinard Fritsch was the Manderscheidscher Mayer.[46] He was a mayer, which may also be spelled meier, of the Duke of Mandersheid.[47] This title indicates that he was an official who represented the property and other rights of the Duke and played an essential function at the judicial court. The times were rife with continual war. The meier's work could not have been easy at that time because of the insecurities about law and property. He had to protect the endangered legal claims of the Duke against the others in the town which probably caused him to make some enemies.

Reinard was named as meier in 1683 in a protocol of a conference where the court sat. A record from that time shows the following documentation of his appointment. His name was written Reinhard Fritsch.

> Herrn Grafen von Manderscheidt Kaill hierzu committirten als(.) / die Nachbenannte Manderscheitsche Meyer und Scheffen als nemblich / Reinhard Fritsch meyer, Richard JoanneB, ..."

The position of meier required that the person be neutral and have no familial relationships with the people in the town. This would allow the meier to make decisions that were in the best interests of the Mandersheids and to represent their interests. The Mandersheids and other landowners in Trittenheim in the 17th century refused to name a local person as a meier. So, it is probable that Reinard Fritsch came from another town. There came to be a meier dynasty and marriages between meier families were not uncommon. Christoph Schmitt wrote of the meier relationships of this family. Reinard's wife Catharina Winter was from a meier family. Her father, Johannes Winter, was born in Leiwen as the son of a meier of the Elector. Later, Johannes Winter was a meier in Leiwen and was in the services of the Dukes of Manderscheid in Trittenheim. Catharina Winter's brother-in-law Johann Schue was a meier in Neumagen. The brother of Anna Charitas Fritsch, Johann Fritsch, was also entered into the service as meier to the Electorate. Other meiers are mentioned in the written genealogy of the Winter family in the Leiwen Familienbuch and as notations in the Neumagen and Trittenheim Familienbuchs. Therefore, it was mainly occupational reasons which brought Anna Charitas Fritsch's family from Leiwen to Trittenheim. It was matrimonial reasons which brought Anna Charitas Fritsch to Neumagen. But what were the reasons that brought Hugo Ernestus Krebs to Pascagoula?

Hugo Ernestus Krebs in Pascagoula

It has often been written that Hugo Ernestus Krebs immigrated to Pascagoula about 1730. He would have been 16 years old at that time. His first child was baptized in January of 1742, so it is safe to assume that he came to Pascagoula sometime in the 1730s.[48]

There was a history of German people immigrating to the Gulf Coast from the early part of the eighteenth century. Germany was not the unified nation it is today, and the people referred to as Germans included a diverse group of people from that general area.

A history of these Germans in Louisiana was written by Rene Le Conte in "The Germans in Louisiana in the Eighteenth Century". He wrote that during the settling of the French possessions in America, the Company of the West, which was later known as the Company of the Indies or the Company of the Mississippi, sought to populate the area with people from France or the West Indies. However, in May 1719 John Law got three concessions from the Company. The first was located at the confluence of the Arkansas and Mississippi Rivers. The second was called English Turn and was on the right bank of the Mississippi a short distance below New Orleans. The third was near Biloxi. To help populate these concessions, pamphlets were prepared and distributed in Germany and Switzerland. One pamphlet's translated title is Detailed Historical and Geographical Description of the Great Mississippi River of North America, Situated in the Magnificent County of Louisiana.

The Germans, Alsatians, and Swiss went to the ports of Lorient and Port Louis in France for embarkation to America. "In all, from 1720 to 1722 inclusive, no more than sixteen hundred Germans, Alsatians, and Swiss, including soldiers and military workers, emigrated to Louisiana from French ports. To our knowledge none left Europe afterward for this colonial enterprise."[49] When these Germans arrived in Louisiana, Governor Bienville granted them a concession in June and July of 1721 on the right bank of the Mississippi between Bustard Bend and the Lac des Ouaches which was subsequently known as the German Coast or Les Allemands. Bad weather, including a possible hurricane, caused a decline in the population, but in 1731 on the German Coast there were forty-two men, forty-four women, and eighty-eight children. After that, more Germans settled there and in 1745 there were one hundred German families.[50] study, and a more realistic understanding of it is now available. It is an extraordinary building in that even though it has been structurally changed, it still has a history that dates back almost three centuries. That any foundation and successive rebuilding has withstood the hurricanes of the area is amazing.

By 1772 a plantation was owned by La Pointe's son-in-law Hugo Ernestus Krebs who was the widower of Marie Josephe Simon La Pointe. That year a particularly ferocious hurricane struck Pascagoula. It was described by Captain Bernard Romans the travelling surveyor, cartographer, and botanist for the British.

> ...but the greatest fury of it was spent on the neighbourhood of the Pasca oocola river; the plantation of Mr. Krebs there was almost totally destroyed, of a fine crop of rice, and a large one of corn were scarcely left any remains, the houses were left uncovered, his smith's shop was almost all washed away, all his works and out houses blown down.[61]

Bernard Romans in his book A Concise Natural History of East and West Florida, gave detailed information about the Gulf Coast in the 1770s. The clothing of the people was described by Romans as simpler than that worn by other Americans.

> The manners and way of life of the white people in Florida, differ very greatly from those in other provinces of America, particularly in respect of cloathing; they are very plain, their dress consists of a slight waistcoast of striped cotton, and a pair of trousers of the same, and often no coat; if any, it is a short one of some light stuff; in winter a kind of surtout, made of a blanket, and a pair of Indian boots is all the addition; the women also dress light and are not very expensive; happy frugality![62]

Romans also described the food that was available. There was a wide variety of meat, game, fish, and vegetables.

> In respect of vegetables, from Mobile westward there is an amazing supply of everykind the year round in their highest perfection and of the finest flavour...
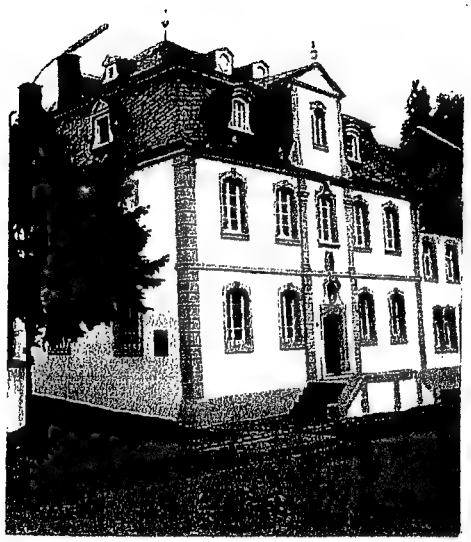
> In the gardens we find various kinds of cabbage and sallading, carrots, turnips, radishes, skirrets, leeks, scallions and other roots, asparagus, artichoakes, cucumbers, green pease (in some the year round) vast variety of beans, and choice of best flavoured pot herbs, in short every fine esculent plant Europe can boast of, they have beyond description perfect, neither has the bounteous hand of nature here been sparing in the most delicious fruits for the table, nor forgot to stock the fields and woods with fine mushrooms, truffles and morels for the most exquisite sauces.[63]

As part of the restoration project, a planning document was prepared for the Jackson County Historical Society by Building Conservation Technology, Inc. of Nashville, Tennessee. It details the documentation, archaeology, and structural analyses of the Lapointe-Krebs House. The information presented here comes in large part from that document.[64]

The structural analysis of the LaPointe-Krebs house shows that it reflects 18th century French colonial building techniques with some Spanish style. Six different building phases were identified. The first is possibly a hearth area used by Indians who lived on the site with Europeans and had European guns. Artifacts were found which date this site to the early 1700s. The second phase was sand, oyster shell, building rubble, bones, and trash that were used as a platform for the construction of a building. In the third phase, a trench was dug for the timber framing of a building about 28 feet by 21 feet. The floor was a raised wooden one and there was no fireplace. This room became the central room of the existing structure. An eastern room was built soon after the completion of the first structure. The fourth phase was done in the early 1800s. An oyster shell concrete floor was laid as well as a chimney. Possibly sometime in the 1800s the western room was built in the fifth phase. In the sixth phase the floor was raised and a lean-to and other ancillary structures were added prior to 1940.[65]



Moselstrasse 9 dates from 1740

Romerstrasse 92 known as HAUS KREBS

A Krebs doorplate in Neumagen

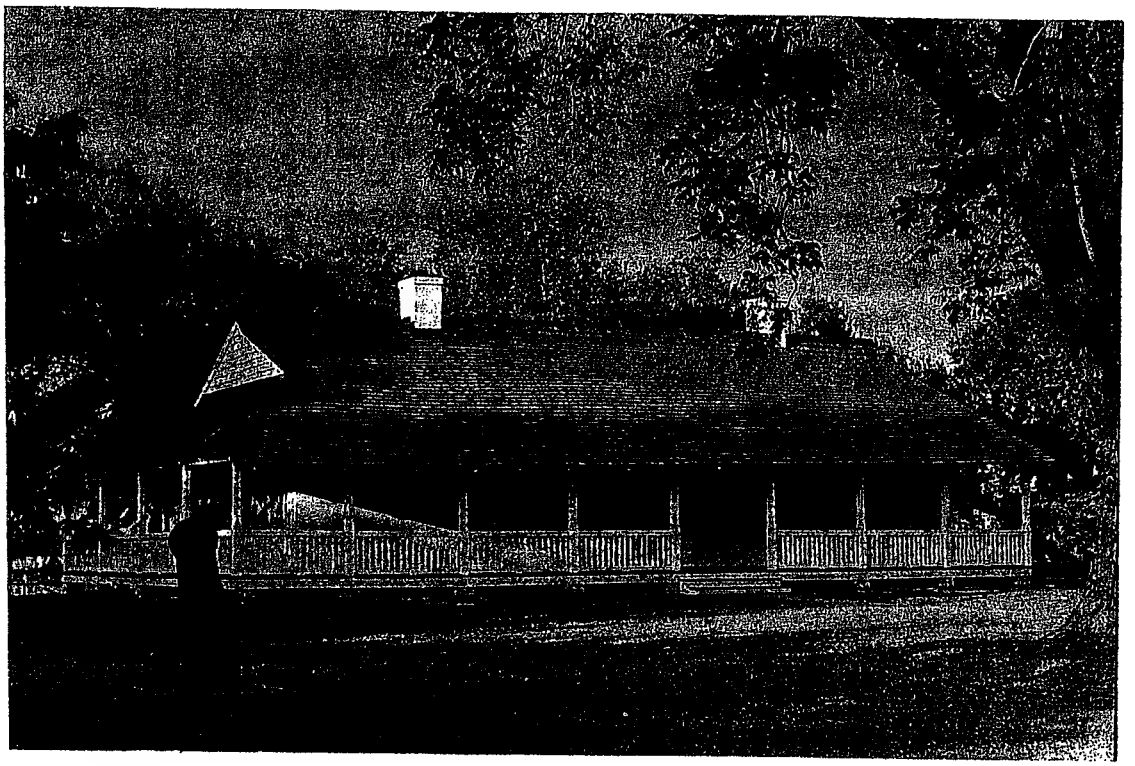
The house at Romerstrasse 98 has a date of 1730 near the gate and a date of 1742 on a public well. It is the home and winery of Klaus and Sylvia Krebs.



Lapointe-Krebs House in Pascagoula, Mississippi

The original building now called the LaPointe-Krebs House was built of cypress and juniper, its walls filled with a durable mix of clay and moss and covered with ground oyster shell plaster. The present layout is three rooms on a single axis.

Also added was a one-story porch across the front of the building. The original oyster shell concrete floor was first covered with wood and raised about 18 inches. Random width boarding is laid tongue and groove in the attic, which is reached through a trap door. The small thin bricks which form the back of the fireplace are 18th century "French" bricks. The double doors leading to the east room are still in the original location and may also date to the 18th century.

No other private building exists in the entire Mississippi Valley from this era. This modest, cottage-like structure is indeed old, probably the oldest structure in the United States between the Appalachian and Rocky Mountains.[66]

Hugo's wife Marie Josephe died on November 7, 1751. Her burial is recorded in the Mobile Diocese's Burial Book.

Marie Josephe Lapointe

On 7 November 1751, I, a Capuchin priest, Cure of Mobile, have buried in the parish cemetery the body of Marie Josephe Lapointe, wife of Mr. Krebs, who died the same day as above, after having received the sacraments of the Church.
In faith whereof I have signed.
Father Pierre, Cure[67]

After the death of Marie Josephe and before his remarriage, Hugo took an inventory of all the family property and goods and determined the value to be 9,000 pounds. In his will, he left half to the children of his marriage to Marie Josephe and half to his estate.[68]

Hugo Ernestus Krebs was married to Marianne Chauvin de Joyeuse in New Orleans about 1753. They had 7 children. Daniel Hugo Krebs was born December 25, 1754; Antoine Raphael Krebs was born September 8, 1756; Maria Theresa Krebs was born in March 1759; Anna Charite Krebs was born January 12, 1761; Basillio Krebs was born March 8, 1763; Maria Rosa Krebs was born in 1766; Cecelia Krebs was born in 1767.[69]

Although his death date or burial place is not known, Hugo Ernestus Krebs did have his will executed in Spanish before Juan Bautista Caric, Notary Public, on September 21, 1776 in New Orleans.[70] He was 62 years old at the time of his will. He wrote that he was a resident of the province of Mobile but was presently in New Orleans. The will was written because he was infirm with illness. Hugo asked to be buried in "this city" which was presumably New Orleans. His burial site is not presently known.

The Last Will and Testament of
Hugo Ernestus Krebs

In the name of God our Lord and of the Most Holy Virgin, his Blessed Mother, advocate of all sinners, conceived without stain or shadow of original sin from the first instant of her most pure and natural being:

Let is be known by this public testamentary writing, last and voluntary will, that I, Hugo Ernestus Krebs, a resident of the Province of Mobile but presently in this city, a native of Neumagen, Archbishopric of Treves, legitimate and natural son of the late Juan Krebs and of Anna Charite Fritz, husband and wife; being infirm because of bodily illness; fearful of death, which is natural; hoping for divine clemency; with my free judgement, understanding and will, recollection and memory, and in possession of my faculties and senses, which is apparent to the undersigned witnesses and Notary (that I) undoubtedly am able to dispose of my goods and to order my last testament, of which, by this instrument, I give faith.

I firmly believe in the most holy mystery of the Most Blessed Trinity, Father, Son and Holy Spirit - three persons distinct but only one God: I confess our Holy Mother, the Roman Catholic Church, which I humbly believe, although an unworthy son, in the belief of which Church I have lived, profess that I will continue to live and die, wishing to save my soul I prescribe my testament in the following form:

Item: I order that when it shall be the will of God our Lord to take me from this life my body shall be interred in the hallowed ground of this city, and I leave my funeral arrangements to the disposition of those named in this

Item: I declare that I have contracted two matrimonies according to the rites of the Holy Mother Church. The first with Maria Simon Lapointe, deceased, from which marriage I had and still have (the following) legitimate and natural children:

Joseph, de Bai	aged 33
Pedro	aged 30
Francisco	aged 32
Augustin	aged 29
Maria Josepha Narbona	aged 28
Margarita	aged 27
and another named Maria Gradenigo	aged 26

And the second marriage was contracted with Marianna Chauvin, alias Joyeuse, and from this marriage we have the following children:

Hugo	aged 20
Raphael	aged 19
Theresa	aged 16
Anna Charite	aged 14
Bazilio	aged 12
Maria Rosa	aged 10
Cecilia	aged 9

Item: I declare that before contracting the second marriage I had an inventory taken of all the goods that remained at the death of my first wife, including appreciation in value, which amounted to 9,000 pounds, one half of which belonged to me and the other half to my children of that marriage as heirs of their mother, and by agreement reached before the Justice of Mobile I consented to give to each one of my said first children 200 Pesos. I have given to:

Francisco 150 Pesos; to
Joseph the same amount; to
Augustin the same; to Pedro another 150 Pesos; so that these do not have to receive on account of their mother but another 100 Pesos each, which amounts shall be paid out of my succession.

I also declare that no accounting has been made of the portion which belongs to Maria Josepha Narbona, she having been given nothing.

I also declare that I have paid to Margarita, wife of Gradenigo, the portion above mentioned (to my sons) and an additional 100 Pesos should be accounted for out of the corpus of my estate at my death.

Item: I declare that the second marriage which I contracted with Marianna Chauvin was, as the first one, contracted under the laws and customs of Paris; and that Dona Marianna Chauvin brought as her dowry 100 Pesos in conformity with our marriage contract, and that afterwards I received 240 Pesos which she received from her inheritance from her mother, totalling the sum of 340 Pesos in accordance with the terms of said marriage contract, of all of which one-third belongs to the community. Consequently, my said wife shall not take but 226 Pesos, 5 1/2 Reales before the partition. She will also have to take 300 Pesos which are assured for the Vicar and 100 Pesos for the principle; all of which is contained in said marriage contract.

The balance of my goods shall be divided in two equal parts, one for my said wife and the other for my children; my wife acting as trustee, pending the final partition, for the children of my first marriage. Besides that which belongs to my present wife, she will also have to take 900 Pesos accrued during this marriage of the half which belongs to me out of the first inventory and these present accounts. The balance shall be divided in two equal halves, the one for all my children and the other for my wife. And to the part that belongs to my children shall be added the 900 Pesos that shall be procured out of the corpus of my estate. Then the total shall be divided among all my children of the first and second marriages and partitioned among them in equal parts; thus discharging my conscience and in compliance with the laws under which we have contracted matrimony and to which we have subscribed.

Item: To the extent that my children of my aforementioned second marriage are minors, under twenty-five years of age, and for this reason are incapable of administering their estates or in case of their death, I name and appoint as Curator M. Chastain, the Major, because of the confidence I have in him, and believing that he will take care of this charge and for this purpose I give to him all the power that I possess and which he may need under the Royal laws.

Item: In all matters that it may be necessary to administer this, my testament, I name and elect my wife, Marianna Chauvin, giving her all the power necessary and that may be requested.

Item: I desire, and it is my wish, that all my debts be paid, not only those that are secured by public writings, but all others that are debts in conscience. And of the remaining of my goods, rights and actions which belong to me and can be enforced I name as my legitimate and universal heirs my aforementioned children of my first and second marriages so that they may have and inherit equally with the blessing of God, and mine.

This is my last will and testament, which I wish defended and executed. I hope for the mercy of God our Lord and that he will take me to himself. And moreover, I hereby revoke and annul any and all wills and codicils that I may have heretofore made, by word of mouth or in any other manner; so that faith may be had in this (will) which I now sign.

Signed in the City of New Orleans, where I am ill, this the twenty-first day of September, Seventeen Hundred and Seventy-six, the witnesses being Don Joseph Adrien de la Plaza, Don Luis Lioteau and Don Antonio Teboul, inhabitants of this City, present, and I will sign this document which I understand and sign.

Hugo Ernestus Krebs
Este M.
Juan Bautista Caric
Notary Public

Krebs 1484

His will gives some information about himself. He had been in contact with his family in Germany, because he knew that his father and possibly his mother had died. He scrupulously arranged for his assets to be divided equally among each of his children even keeping track of how much he had already given each, and noting that he had not yet given his daughter Marie Josephe Narbonne anything. He also asked that all of his debts in conscience be paid.

After the death of Hugo, there was arguing about his estate. The children of the first marriage and the widow and children of the second marriage fought over the property and brought claims to the government. A letter from Governor Favrot of Mobile indicates his opinion of the widow of Krebs.

April 22, 1787
Pierre Joseph Favrot, Mobile, to Estevan Miro, New Orleans:

I am sending you a certified document, which the widow Mariana Josefa Cresp signed in my presence. Your grace will note that she has no grounds for a claim against the land of her deceased husband, which belongs to the children of the first marriage.

This woman only wants to sow dissension among both families, even though she has lost the same lawsuit on three occasions. She has spent close to a thousand pesos from her first marriage on these suits. On the day set for her to turn over the land, she incited her children to bring suit before Your Grace's tribunal against the aforementioned children of the first marriage to make them pay for buildings she constructed on the land, such as the house, cabins, gardens, et cetera. She claims this indemnification without giving consideration to the long period of time that they have extracted products such as pitch and wood from the property. I feel it necessary to tell Your Grace that this woman brags of having the judge in her power, and she claims that she can get him to do anything she says. Such boasts are disgraceful. She did not solicit a search for copies of documents in the archives, as these would negate her claim. If the copy that I enclose is valid, please sign it and return it to me to act upon it. These people are always fighting among themselves, mother against children, brothers against mother. They are, in a word, a bunch of vagabonds, fugitives from justice, without prudence or a sense of right or wrong. For this reason I am writing you so that you will not be surprised. May God Protect you many years.[71]

Be not surprised about these people Governor Favrot warned. I have been wonderfully surprised and hope that more information about the family will be found and published.

JACKSON COUNTY ARCHIVES

Coal Mine No. 11

The base photo in this collage was taken from the 1902 annual report of the Osage Coal & Mining Company, which operated the major mines in Krebs from the 1870's to the early 1900's. Mine #11 exploded on January 7, 1892, killing almost 100 men and boys as young as 12 years old and wounding many more. This was the worst mining disaster in Indian Territory/Oklahoma history and almost every household in Krebs was directly affected. The report states that the mine had been totally refurbished just prior to 1902. Krebs, McAlester, and most of the surrounding towns within 15 miles, owe their existance to coal mining. The color overlay in lower right is of the memorial that was erected and dedicated at the site of the mine in the Summer of 2002. It memorializes those lost or wounded in the 1892 explosion. The large masonry object to the left of the large tree, is a base for mining machinery and is all that remains of the original mine. The memorial is located 2 1/2 blocks north of the Krebs School.

Krebs MK&T Depot in the late 1880's

This photo is of the KATY depot in downtown Krebs and is purported to be one of the oldest photos of an area business location discovered to date. The building at far left is the 'Osage Coal & Mining Co.' business office. The locomotive was called 'The Nellie'. Visable in the right side of the locomotive cabin are Andy Drumb (Conductor) on left and J. Mann (Engineer). The KATY branch line that the Nellie served went as far East as Wilburton. What is now State Highway 31 crosses from left to right between the locomotive and the coal office. This treasure of a by-gone era would have been lost forever without the help of the 'KATY Red River Museum' in Dennison, Texas.

The Krebs Opera House

August 1911 Krebs fire aftermath

On Saturday August 19, 1911 a terrible fire destroyed a large portion of the Krebs business district. Everything from the Opera House to Washington Ave. (31 Highway) was destroyed. Notice the contents of the stores that was saved by being carried out into Main street. Also notice the streetcar tracks in front of the Opera House at left and the wording OPERA HOUSE and 1903 date at the top of building. The current Post Office on Main Street is the location from where this photo was taken. A newspaper article about the fire and an additional photo of the fire aftermath are on display at the Krebs Heritage Museum.

Street car in downtown Krebs heading for McAlester

Pittsburg County Railway Company's trolley car #35 is stopped in downtown Krebs on Washington Avenue (31 Highway) heading West. At far left is 'Jabara's Dry Goods' and next door is 'Milwee Drug Store'. Krebs City Hall is obscured behind the streetcar. A highway 31 sign is visible at far right by the automobile. The Krebs KATY depot is just out of sight at the right of the photo. The streetcar line which was operated by the electric power generating company in McAlester, began operation in the late 1890's and had extended as far as Hartshorne by late 1904. The line ceased operation in early 1947. This photo was taken in 1945-46 period.

he be mistaken in this, he names defendants to this, his bill of complaint, the unknown heirs-at-law, assigns , devisees and personal representatives of Paul Krebs, Mrs. Paul Krebs and Augustine Krebs.

Krebs 1517

The sixth son of Augustine Krebs, William Krebs, as your complainant is informed and believes, to be true, left this country when a young man and has never been seen nor heard of by any of his relatives now living. And your complainant has been unable to discover after diligent search and inquiry any heirs of the said William Krebs, hence he makes defendants to this his bill of complaint, all unknown heirs, assigns, devisees and personal representatives of the said William Krebs, deceased.

The seventh child of Augustine Krebs, Hippolite Krebs, as your complainant is informed and believes to be true, married one Richard Fitzgerald, and with her said husband left these parts, both of whom the said Hippolite Fitzgerald and her said husband have long since died, according to the laws of nature, and your complainant, after diligent search and inquiry has been unable to discover the names, places of residence, Post-office addresses and street addresses of their said heirs, and he makes as defendants to this his bill of complaint, all the unknown heirs, assigns, devisees and personal representatives of Hippolite Krebs Fitzgerald and Richard Fitzgerald.

Complainant would further show that Stephen Routh died intestate about the year 1876, and that your complainant has made diligent search and inquiry to ascertain the names, places of residence, Post-office addresses and street addresses of his heirs-at-law, and after such diligent search and inquiry, complainant has been informed and believes them to be as follows:

H. S. Routh, Alice Routh, Ernest S. Routh, Stephen M. Routh and Charles S. Routh, whose places of residence, Post-office addresses and street addresses are unknown after diligent search and inquiry.

but your complainant has been unable to learn whether the said parties are living or dead, and if living, their places of residence, Post-office address and street addresses. and if dead, the names, places of residence, Post-office addresses and street addresses of their heirs, and complainant makes as defendants to this, his bill of complaint, the unknown heirs, assigns, devisees assigns , devisees and personal representatives of Stephen Routh, deceased, and H. S. Routh, Alice Routh, Ernest S.Routh, Stephen M. Routh, and Charles S.Routh, if living, and if dead their unknown heirs, assigns, devisees and personal representatives.

Complainant would further show that Celestine Ladnier died a number of years ago and left the following heirs-at-law:

Her husband, Chas. S. Ladnier, a resident citizen of Harrison County, Mississippi, and the following children:

Lawrence Ladnier, whose place of residence and post-office address is Mobile, Alabama, street address unknown.

Mrs. Ida Benson, Gus Ladnier and Mrs. Joe Able, resident citizens of Harrison County, Mississippi.

Eddie Ladnier, who died several years ago, leaving the following heirs ;

His widow, Mrs. Kate Ladnier, a resident citizen of Jackson County, Mississippi, and the following children:

Lonnie Ladnier, whose place of residence and Post-office address is Aransas, Texas, no street address; Robert Ladnier, whose place of residence and Post-office address is Mobile, Ala., c/o U.S.Dredge Pascagoula, and Eugene Ladnier, Ida May, Anna Ladnier, Celestine Ladnier, Henry Ladnier, Mildred Ladnier, her minors children, who live with their mother Mrs. Kate Ladnier

Krebs 1518

Complainant makes defendants to this, his bill of complaint the unknown heirs, assigns, devisees and personal representatives of Celestine Ladnier and Eddie Ladnier, deceased, as well as all of the above named parties.

That L. D. Herrick died intestate several years ago leaving as his sole and only heir-atOlaw, his widow, Mrs. Caroline Herrick, a resident citizen of Jackson County, Mississippi, and complainant makes as defendants to this, his bill of complainant, the said Mrs. Caroline Herrick.

That complainant has made diligent search and inquiry to ascertain the names, places of residence, Post-office addresses and street addresses of any and all other persons who have or might claim any interest in or to the lands hereinabove described, but that after such diligent search and inquiry he has been unable to find any other persons, save those made defendants to this bill of complaint. and complainant prays that publication may be made for all the above named defendants and any and all other persons having or claining any right, title or interest in and to the lands described in this bill of complaint.

That on account of the breaks in the chain of title to this land, as shown in the deraignment of title, and on account of the errors in the deeds of conveyance as hereinabove set out, some doubt is raised as to the validity of your complainant's title to said property, and your complainant is therefore hindered to some extent in being able to dispose of said property to the best advantage, and though your complainant is advised that by adverse possession he has acquired a valid title to said land, yet he is anxious to have the record thereof cleared and all clouds, doubt or suspicion removed therefrom, and to have this Court declare him to be the legal and equitable owner thereof, and to have his title quieted and confirmed against all parties named as defendants to this, his bill of complaint, as well as any other persons who have or claim any interest therein. And complainant is without remedy save in this Honorable Court.

The premises considered, complainant prays that this, his bill of complaint may be received and filed; that all resident defendants be summoned personally to appear herein, and that process by publication be made in the manner required by law for all non-resident and unknown defendants, as well as for any other person having or claiming any right, title or interest in or to the above described land. That all said defendar be summoned to be and appear before this Honorable Court at the December Term 1926 thereof, and then and there be required to answer, plead or demur to the allegations of this bill of complai answer under oath being expressly waived. And complainant prays t on the final hearing hereof, that the deeds hereinabove referred to may be reformed and corrected and the title to said land be quieted and confirmed against all said defendants. And complainant prays for such other relief as in equity he may be enti to receive.

30. Brief statement of the property's history: This residence has been constantly altered over the years. It was apparently built by Helaire Krebs who acquired the site in 1822. In an 1846 conveyance is is noted that Krebs' daughter was living here. The Krebs family retained the property until 1898. There have been atleast three fires in the house - 1900, 1925 and 1976. After the 1925 fire the side gallery was enclosed, the kitechn revived and part of the rear gallery enclosed. After the 1976 fire additional changes were made.

Krebs 1522

Thank you Renee,
I have not yet found Emanual and Zoe Krebs marriage, but should have been about 1850, since their first child was born in 1852. Is it true, that before a Catholic could get married, the church in which they were married (assuming not in town where he grew up) had to give permission? He was from Malaga Spain.

The other is the marriage of grandfather Richard Ryder Deas Sr, b 1869, to Elise (Lulu) Alice Hupp,born 1873 in New Orleans. Their first child was born 1896. Her father, Valentine Hupp died in 1882 and her mother shortly after that 1887 - both in New Orleans. I always was told that Lulu was sent away from New Orleans during the yellow fever epidemics, and indeed, she had two siblings to die in 1878 of yellow fever. I have asked the Orleans Parish, trying to figure out which church they would have gone to, but no records were found of the marriage, but for all the deaths, yes. I wonder if some record could have been in Mobile. Their first born child, Ethel Elise's baptism and birth are in the Biloxi Diocese .

That was long winded! Thanks for any help from the indexes.

Those marriages, baptisms and burials are in the Mobile and New Orleans Catholic Diocese Records. There are abt. 18 books for NOLA and only one for Mobile; although our Society published an index to Mobile...then you have to write the church. The NOLA books end in the 1820s. Everything else you have to get from there. They do have a website and someone told me that they had digitized more lately. I haven't checked. There isn't an index to those records like we have for Mobile.

JACKSON COUNTY SCHOOL ATTENDANCE

In the Federal Census of 1850 there is revealing information about education in Jackson County. A mark is made for each child who attended school and the profession/occupation is listed for each school teacher. There may be some who attended school but the census taker failed to indicate with the (/). From this record we have extracted those who were apparently students and teachers for the year 1850.

DIES AT SEVENTY-FIVE

Last Rites Monday For Charles Krebs, Who Died Saturday

Funeral services were held Monday for Charles Henry Krebs, lifelong resident of Pascagoula and member of one of the city's pioneer families.

He died Saturday night at County Hospital after a brief illness. He was 75 years old.

Krebs was a retired merchant, son of Emile Helaire Krebs and Sarah L. Bishop. He was long active in civic and church activities, was a member of Our Lady of Victories Church and the Knights of Columbus.

Rosary service was held at Fails Chapel Sunday night and last rites conducted Monday at 9 a.m. by Msgr. P. J. Carey at

KREBS INFANT CHRISTENED

On Sunday, March 30, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe V. Krebs was christened, Stephen Foster, at Our Lady of Victories Church, with Father Carey officiating. The sponsors were Miss Anna Krebs and Harold Illing, Jr., of Ocean Springs. Following the ceremony, the family and a few friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Krebs to congratulate the parents and wish for the young man a long and happy life.

Jane, Marie
Aimee Krebs
Dec. 12, 1884
Pascagoula Democratic Starr

Died in Mobile, on Thursday, December 4, 1884, after a lingering illness, MARIE AIMEE KREBS, wife of Mr. R. J. Jane, aged 27 years and 3 months.

The deceased was under the care and treatment of the best physicians in Mobile, and loving hands ministered to her every want, but it was the will of her Heavenly Father that she should go up higher. Her remains were brought here, and on Saturday last were followed to their last resting place by a large number of sorrowing relatives and friends. She leaves a disconsolate husband and several children and a host of relatives to mourn her death. The light has gone out on the altar of of that once happy home, the ashes lie cold and dead, the house-hold band all stricken and shivering by the desolate hearth. The soft, gentle hands, always so ready to minister to the wants of all, are cold and still. What hand is like the mother's? Oh! the dear, dead hands now folded so peacefully, who will bind the wounds and wipe away the tears?

We tender our heart-felt sympathies to the bereaved. May He in His infinite wisdom comfort them in their sore bereavement.

"Affliction sore when here she bore,
Physicians' aid was all in vain,
Till God was pleased to end her days,
And freed her from her pain."

a short cruise. Sails were bent, and away she flew with my friend Captain Pierce and me, across Buzzard's Bay on a trial-trip—all right. The only thing that now worried my friends along the beach was, "Will she pay?" The cost of my new vessel was $553.62 for materials, and thirteen months of my own labor. I was several months more than that at Fairhaven, for I got work now and then on an occasional whale-ship fitting farther down the harbor, and that kept me the overtime.

Harry Pidgeon, who in Alaska used to saw a tree into boards and build himself a small boat, built the Islander single-handed —simply because he couldn't afford to buy a ship ready made. His patience was considerable (the Islander took eighteen months to build, but cost only $1000 in cash) and his skill almost unbelievable to anyone who knows the difficulties of bending a ship's timbers and fastening them to the frames—even with plenty of help. Built in 1917, the Islander took Pidgeon twice around the world and was wrecked in 1948 on yet another voyage.

Ray Kauffman, too, knew what he wanted. He had some difficulty in convincing his builder of this, but in the end Kauffman's technical knowledge and Sidoine Krebs' experience and skill combined to make the Hurricane one of the best of the round-the-world craft.

Sidoine Krebs was an honest man, building ships today as his grandfather had done a hundred years ago, but slowly conforming to the demands of the present-day owners and skippers. I had met Mr. Krebs on a previous trip south, and I had not forgotten him.

After a futile search along the coast from New Orleans to Tampa for a suitable boat, Gerry and I wound up in the little fishing village of Pascagoula, resolved to do business with Mr. Krebs. His shipyard had been idle for over a year, excepting a few orders for "pullin' skiffs" from the local oystermen, and he was eager for work. Yet it was hard to get Sidoine down to figures in black and white. I talked about a hull contract for two thousand dollars and Sid said he would build it. That, I thought, was a low price, so I had several sheets of detailed specifications at hand. When I showed them to Sidoine, he looked puzzled and said, "I tol' you I would build you all a little boat fo' two thousand, hull and decks, an' I'll do her proper, but I don't see no sense in messin' with all them papers."

"But," I protested, "we intend going a hell of a long way in this ship and she must be seaworthy. We can't afford to take a chance unless the hull is built according to these specifications."

Sidoine, his eyes bright with anger, snorted and shook his finger in the general direction of the dilapidated sawmill and a husky seventy-foot fishing smack shored up in the yard.

"I ain't never turned out no boats that wasn't seawo'thy. I got thirty-five schooners afishin' snapper offen Campeche banks an' they ain't a one aleakin' yet. . . . I tell you they ain't no po' boats ever la'nched offen them ways. Specifications!" Splat, and a well-masticated half pint of Beech Nut scrap festooned a cypress log.

"Well," I began again, "I have some plans here——"

"Mister, them drawin's is sho' neat, but I left my glasses up to the house an' I cain't read them figures. Why don't you just tell me how long you wants her, an' what beam an' how much water you aim fo' her to draw, an' I'll make you a model to the half-inch scale."

There was something about Sidoine, I do not know what it was, but I knew we would not go wrong. Taking a long breath and shuffling the papers, I started again.

"Now about this contract, will it be all right with you if I pay half down now, and the rest when the job is finished?"

"Well, I don't like no cash money around the house, an' you done said you'd pay the agreed price. All I'll want is a little money to put in some new boiler tubes in the ol' mill to git started. When I needs mo' I'll ask fo' it. Ain't that all they is to it?" I nodded my head and he continued, "I know you boys is all right. You wouldn't be comin' clean down heah from Ioway a wantin' a little boat if you wasn't aimin' to pay fo' it."

There was just no getting Mr. Krebs on paper. The deal was closed by moving into the household and paying room and board to Ma Krebs at the rate of three dollars and fifty cents a week each. . . .

In a few days the model was finished. It was neatly made of laminated wood, alternate red cedar and white cypress, twenty-one and a half inches long. Sidoine, with a visored cap advertising a brand of Mobile paint pushed far back on his head, squinted along the shearline.

"Now boys, I made her good an' full so as we can cut her down with a spokeshave."

We shaved a little off here and there, giving her a longer run aft and a narrower stern. With sandpaper we sharpened her forward at the waterline until the entrance lines were almost hollow. We fined her up as much as we dared, still leaving plenty of boat but sharp as a knife forward with a deep forefoot and a long clean run aft.

I was in love with the finished model. This built-up block of wood, shaped into curves and lines of beauty and symmetry, was something tangible. This half-inch-scale miniature multiplied by twenty-four would soon be our home, transportation and life! Work just could not start soon enough.

While Roy and Uncle were overhauling the boiler in the mill, we went with Sidoine and combed the yards around the bayou for seasoned lumber. We helped snake huge cypress logs down the river to the runway of the sawmill.

Krebs 1568

Forty miles we drove to a timber reserve for virgin long leaf yellow pine to make the masts and booms and lay the keel. Two trees, eighty feet to the nearest branch, were felled, dragged by oxen to the river and towed by launch to the shipyard. An old man, a relic of sailing-ship days, with powerful shoulders and a bent back, was hired to shape the spars.

With the material on hand the work began. Chips, smelling strongly of turpentine in the keen winter air, flew from the sparmaker's adze chopping steadily into the pitch-laden, fresh cut pine. Stripped of the white sapwood, the dark heart pine, glistening in the sunlight, grew round and true. Smoke belched from the tall iron stack as a negro fireman in blue overalls, almost invisible in the shadowy mill, shoveled in the dry pine chips. Pressure rose on the gauge and the live steam hissed from many leaks. The rumbling of the circular saw changed to a high-pitched scream as the sharp teeth bit into the huge logs, and thin slabs of bark fell away as the log moved slowly through on the carriage. The band saw cut through the thin wood patterns for the frames, piling up a giant's jig-saw puzzle on either side. Square timbers were dragged to a clear patch of ground. Kreb's shipyard after a long rest had come to life.

Work progressed rapidly in fine weather. The keel was laid and the frames branched out. A huge bent live oak log was shaped for the stern post, and the stem, a foot and a half through, rose in a graceful curve. Deck beams arched across. The lumber pile was looking like a ship.

In bad weather when the cold northerly wind brought rain, Mr. Krebs, bundled up to his chin, stood shivering in the lee of his tool shed, and blowing his large reddened nose, muttered about the "dirty ol' nor'wester."

"You cain't tell nothin' 'bout this weather no mo', Mr. Ray. Used to be I could tell by the moon, but they must o' somethin' happened 'cause you jest cain't tell nothin' no mo'. . . . I read somewheres it was them big guns shot off durin' the war."

Krebs 1569

"Papa," said Roy, "if we only could build them boats under a shed, look at the time we'd save."

"That sho' would facilate the work," sighed Mr. Krebs, looking wistfully at the rain-drenched yard.

"My ain't it cold, papa?" said Roy, swinging his arms.

"Awful dirty ol' nor'wester, awful, awful! Son, I'm gettin' too ol' to work in this weather."

"No you ain't, papa. It's just because you is all crippled up with rheumatics."

"Tain't that so much as it is my bronckeetis." Turning to me he added, "Mr. Ray, let's go to the house and see if the old lady has got some coffee hot."

"Papa," said Roy brightening, "you ain't aimin' to work today?"

"No, son, a man cain't do no good cold as it is. No suh!"

Although not yet mid-morning, it had been definitely decided that no work would be done that day. Even though the sun came out later, the Gods of Weather had sent the dirty ole nor'wester to humbug Mr. Krebs. The sturdy frames of our ship were left alone, deserted to the chill north wind; light chips banked against the keel and little whirlwinds of sawdust swirled across the newly laid decks.

Before the warm cookstove, drawing board across my knees, I scaled out the sail plan of the ship, ketch rigged. Sidoine, looking on with ill-concealed disapproval, remarked:

"Now Mr. Ray, I don't like to tell no man his business but you done got the mainmas' in the wrong place. This heah little schooner is rigged backwa'ds and she ain't agoin' to sail."

"This isn't a schooner, Sidoine, it's a ketch and the mains'l is forward with the smaller sail, the mizzen, aft."

"A sketch you say? Look heah, son, at this heah new rig." He called to Roy.

Photographs, sepia with age, were produced showing most of the thirty-five ships Krebs had built, mute testimonials for the schooner rig. I found a picture of a transatlantic racer, ketch rigged, which I proudly showed to Sidoine as definite proof that there was such a thing. The Atlantic was beyond his geographical scope and, therefore, beside the point. Unconvinced, he shook his head sadly.

"She might do up No'th like you say, but she won't do out in this heah guff, no suh. This guff is a awful place."

To Mr. Krebs the farthest points away from Pascagoula were Mexico and Michigan. If you mentioned anywhere else you were dealing with astronomy and its inconceivable distances in "light years."

There was nothing else to be done in bad weather except argue around the cookstove while the "women folk" boiled chicoried coffee and baked corn sticks. Every rainy day put launching day just that much farther ahead and we chafed at the delay, hating the "dirty ol' no'westa's" as much as Mr. Krebs.

The next big job was planking, and Gerry and I were in for our full share of labor, driving and countersinking the five-inch spikes. We made good progress, and I promised that when the shutter (the last strake of planking) was in place we would all knock off a day and celebrate by going fishing to Bayou Battre, with a gallon of moonshine to "grease the hooks." This announcement pushed work up to top speed but the net result proved a dead loss. The Krebses started getting in each other's way and tempers grew short. Hacksaw, working a little too leisurely, received many an angry glance.

Finally Roy said, "Hacksaw, you ain't hardly done a lick all day."

"The hell I ain't."

Krebs 1570

"You been workin' fo' the govamint so long you got one o' them coast gua'd chests."

"Yeah? . . . It takes a better man than you to get into the coast guard!"

"You do some ha'd work around heah an' you'll lose that coast gua'd chest," laughed Roy, patting his stomach.

This threw Hacksaw in a swearing rage and Roy into uncontrollable fits of laughter. Hacksaw finally dropped his tools and stamped off home.

Sidoine had been driving Uncle all day and when Uncle remarked:

"Comin' from the No'th and joinin' the coast gua'd both done make Hacksaw no good."

Sidoine retorted, "Uncle, you mine yo' own damn' business."

"You cain't talk thataway to me payin' as little as you do."

"You ain't no ship's carpenter nohow. You ain't even a house carpenter, you is just in the road."

"You can all go plumb to hell," shouted Uncle, and throwing his tools on the ground, headed for his corner of Krebsville.

"Papa, you hadn't oughta talk to Uncle thataway."

Sidoine about to reply stopped dead before a newly laid out plank.

"Who put the bevel on this heah plank on the wrong side?"

"I ain't troubled it, papa. You done it yo'self."

"That ain't true. I seen you planin' on it." He knocked it off the sawhorses. "This work is a humbug, somethin' always humbuggin' me. I cain't get no good he'p no mo'. Awful, awful. I cain't depend on nobody." He shook his head sadly. "I'm getting too ol' to do all the work."

Roy, the only one left in good humor, said, "It don't look like that shutter is a goin' in today so I might as well lock up the tools an' go home."

It was mid-afternoon when work stopped but I was worried about the next day. I talked to Gerry and we conceived the idea of using our gallon of moonshine to placate the shipyard hands. That evening, as ambassadors of good will, we made the four corners of Krebsville with disastrous results. Hacksaw went to town and never showed up for two days. Uncle's wife chased poor Uncle off the front porch with a broom. Sidoine fell over at the dinner table and stuck his nose in the hot grits. He then staggered off to bed muttering, "Awful, awful, awful."

We felt so badly about all this that we drove to New Orleans to see if legal whisky had a better effect. The day after next, when we returned, we were not greeted with the welcome sounds of hammering and sawing and Mr. Krebs was found hovering over the cookstove. I asked him what the trouble was and why he hadn't been working. He mentioned something about the "dirty ol' nor'wester" and finally confessed.

"Mr. Ray, there ain't no use in hidin' the devil under a bush. We all done had too much to drink."

Reflecting on our handiwork, I realized it would be some time before the fatal shutter was ever in place. We firmly resolved never again to attempt to speed up production above the normal pace but to quench our Yankee impetuosity and let the work continue in the more leisurely and perhaps better method of the deep South. . . .

Launching day was set for next week and all hands were busy painting and caulking. The interior was finished. Forward were two double bunks, next the chart room and toilet; amidship was the main cabin with two bunks faced by two settees the same length with a drop leaf table between them. The engine room and galley combined, with an extra bunk, were aft. She was roomy and well ventilated and painted white enamel with a stained mahogany trim. Outside she was white with gray decks and a red waterline. The little model had been multiplied by twenty-four and the results were beyond our expectations. She was a real little ship, looking much larger than her specified length.

The customs came to measure the boat for the registration. I told the official that she was forty-three feet long by thirteen beam. We stretched the tape—she was forty-five feet overall and her beam was almost fourteen feet! No wonder my arrangement plans hadn't quite fitted the actual hull. I recalled how Mr. Krebs had measured all material for the boat with a two-foot rule, going over the timber like a measuring worm and punctuating each two-foot mark with tobacco juice.

I called, "Sidoine, this ship is two feet longer and nine inches wider than she was supposed to be."

Mr. Krebs looked guilty. He dropped his tools and climbed up the ladder to the deck. "You say she's bigga than what she ought to be?"

Gerry and the customs on either end of the tape confirmed her length as forty-five feet. Roy and Allen stopped painting below and joined the circle.

Roy said, "That ain't nothin'. Papa always builds 'em a little bigga than the model."

Mr. Krebs apologetically explained: "Well, you see it's thisaway, boys. I done built as pretty a little smack as they is on the guff fo' a man down in Luzianna. After she was la'nched an' we was fixin' up the papers, he accused me of violatin' the contract what called fo' a seventy-five foot boat an' she measured by the customs to just seventy-fo' feet and three inches, an' he done paid me a hundred dolla's sho't fo' them nine inches."

"That was hardly fair," said Gerry.

"Sho' it weren't fair. So I says to Roy, 'From now on we are buildin' boats just a little bigga than the model so as they won't be no complaints.' "

"This little boat has sho' growed some, papa. It stretched out two feet!" said Roy.

We all felt a tense excitement. The big day was drawing near. The scaffoldings were knocked down and the ways built under the ship. In a day or so the paint would be dry. Waiting for the ship to take to the water was like waiting for a birth. The shipyard was the mother who after months of labor was about to produce a child of your own creation, and during these last few days, the shipyard was really having labor pains. Roy, juggling hundred-pound bilge blocks around the yard, expressed his feelings, "As soon as that bastard is in the bayou, I'm a goin' to set down!"

The ship would have a painful birth, she had grown so big for her mother's womb.

The day for launching arrived. Everyone who had anything to do with the construction of the boat was on hand. The blacksmith who had made the ironwork, tall and gaunt with huge ears bracing up a wide-brimmed hat, strode around the yard in a long, black frock coat. So long were his legs and so high his waist that the ship chandler down from Mobile for the launching said that he was split up the middle like a pair of dividers. The engineer who had rebuilt the old tractor engine and the plumber who had installed the tanks were on hand in their Sunday clothes to sample the "la'nching whisky." The sparmaker was there; and the old caulker with the long flowing white mustache, who had kept us in suspense while caulking the decks, fearful lest this mustache would become mixed with the cotton and he would hammer himself fast to the deck seams. The Krebs family was there in full force; the women folk in Sunday clothes and the small children romping in the sawdust pile; but the four shipyard hands were in work clothes, standing by to knock the wedges out from behind the bilge blocks. Even Nigger, the little dog who had grown up with the ship, was there, hungrily licking the tallow off the ways.

Friends, neighbors and in-laws, the curious and the loafers, regular hands at funerals, births, weddings and launchings, gathered on the yard and circulated around the pump under the huge live oak tree festooned with gray moss where the "la'nching whisky" was kept cool in gallon stone jugs. Spirits rose as the jug passed around and the tide came in. The bayou would soon be deep enough. An old river tug backed up at the foot of the ways and with her nose against a piling churned up the muddy bottom to increase the depth.

By the time the tide was in and the bayou pronounced deep enough the crowd was hilarious; but, at the sound of the heavy mall striking the hardwood wedges, they quieted down and formed a semicircle around the bow for the christening. No champagne foamed over the sturdy stem. She was not that kind of ship but a child of the cypress swamps and the tidewater marshes. She was gently baptized with a conservative amount of Mississippi corn whisky poured from a stone jug, properly anointed with a liberal amount of tobacco juice, and named the Hurricane.

As the wedges were driven out, she rocked uneasily in her cradle, moved slowly backwards a foot or so, then gathering momentum, rushed down the greased ways and plunged into the muddy bayou. The cheering of the spectators drowned the noise made by twenty tons of wood and iron being born a ship. Floating high like a duck, she sailed backwards across the stream and fetched up in the saw grass on the other side.

The builders were successful only if they knew exactly what their requirements were and how to fit these requirements into a hull design that was efficient and seaworthy. Almost anybody can sit down with a scratch pad, design a dream house, and have a contractor build it. The house may be inefficient, uneconomical, uncomfortable, ugly, and impractical, but it won't disintegrate in a rough sea or run onto a reef or be swamped by a following wave. The man with a scratch pad who designs a ship has to know enough hydrodynamics and aerodynamics to design a safe and efficient vehicle, and he has to be a competent architect, because there is no adding another wing or changing the position of a bulkhead once the frames have been set in place.

Every boatyard has its share of little tragedies, the protagonists of which thought that they could design and build a small sailboat because they had once designed and built a fairly usable bookshelf in a manual-training class. The tragedy of an unskilled and inexperienced sailor designing and building an ocean-crossing ship is, naturally, not a common one. But Jack London's building of the Snark is saved from tragedy only by the humor (both conscious and unconscious) with which he relates it.

As originally planned, the Snark was to be forty feet long on the water-line. But we discovered there was no space for a bath-room, and for that reason we have increased her length to forty-five feet. Her greatest beam is fifteen feet. She had no house and no hold. There is six feet of headroom, and the deck is unbroken save for two companionways and a hatch for'ard. The fact that there is no house to break the strength of the deck will make us feel safer in case great seas thunder their tons of water down on board. A large and roomy cockpit, sunk beneath the deck, with high rail and self-bailing, will make our rough weather days and nights more comfortable.

When we increased the length of the Snark in order to get space for a bath-room, we found that all the space was not required by the bath-room. Because of this, we in-

CONCLUSION

John Smith and Elizabeth Smith had roots in different states and grew up in different counties. Nonetheless, they were neighbors who married in Elizabeth's home county. Despite their common surname, a lifetime of relocating, and published misinformation about Elizabeth's mother, nearly a century after their deaths John and Elizabeth are identifiable and traceable.

Dear Mr. Higginbotham:

Thanks to Mr. Francis Latady of Birmingham, another descendant of Hugo Ernestus Krebs, I have finally located Neumagen on the map. The birthplace of H.E.Krebs, as I have it underscored in red and indicated by a red arrow, is located on the Moselle river between Trier or Treves and Cues (spelled Kues on the map), the birthplace of Nicholas (Krebs) of Cusa, the Cardinal-scientis The Moselle, as you can see from the map, runs southwestward from the Rhine river, past Luxembourg and the Saarland, into Lorraine and France, and very much later winds up in Alsace. Neumagen is located in the portion of the Rhineland near Luxembourg and the Saarland, and hence often under France or French influence during the 17th and 18th centuries, and after both World Wars, as well as under the House of Lorraine during medieval and renaissance periods, and at times under the House of Burgundy and of Flanders. It was part of what was known as the Palatinate during the latter part of Louis XVIII's reign, and was probably governed by the Elector, as he was called, at the time Hugo Ernestus Krebs was born. Since the Moselle runs deep into French territory, a family of boating interests such as the Krebs must certainly have carried on their business in the French provinces during all of their family history on that river. The Xerox copies of portion of this map are from the Times Atlas, Mid-Century Edition, published in London in 1955. The map, therefore, shows the Rhineland as part of West Germany.

I am very much interested to know that you are descended from Sieur Graveline, as I have seen his name on so many of the early records of the Mobile and Pascagoula settlements, and felt he should be some relation to the Krebs and Lapointe families. I am also interested to know you are related to such a famous painter as Degas, who is one of my top favorites. You can obtain a copy of the marriage certificate of Lapointe to Catherine Doucin in 1723 from New Orleans Cathedral Archives. It, unfortunately, does not give the name of Catherine's previous husband, though saying she is a widow, and she has a two year old daughter who was legitimated by marriage contract with Lapointe. It is not clear from the wording of the church record whether the daughter was Lapointe's or whether that was a sort of adoption process to protect the inheritance rights of the child of a previous union. It does not give the name of the child, so it cannot be ascertained whether she was the one married in 1734 to Boudreau or a younger daughter. If she was the same daughter, she would have been only thirteen years old at that time. You said she was already a widow which would mean that she would have had to be married the first time even younger than that. I am aware that many of the French girls at that period did marry very young, so it is not impossible. What did you say the last name of Boudreau's bride was? I could not quite make out the spelling, and, like in the case of Catherine Doucin, I was not certain whether that was her maiden name or her married name. However, the name given in Church registers is usually the maiden name, and not the widow's married name, and I assume that "Doucin" was her maiden name. If the marriage contract mentioned in the Church record could be located, it might give more information. It should be in the New Orleans archives somewhere, but some documents seem to be missing.

I am sorry that I do not have more information in this connection. There are a great many references to the Gravelines in the Louisiana Historical Quarterly, and other Archives, but I am sure you must have gone through those already before writing your history of that family. I should like to see it when it is ready.

Best wishes for the success of your book.

Sincerely,

Regina Rapier

CHAPTER 28

LaPOINTE

Krebs 1614

-oOo-

We can trace our LaPointe line as far back as any other with reasonable certainty. Not only that: but we know that the first one we list below is a third generation Québecois and believe we can, if we wish to spend the time, go to Québec and get further information.

IN ADDITION TO THE ABOVE, WE BELIEVE THIS IS THE FIRST OF OUR ANCESTORS TO COME TO WHAT WAS LATER NAMED "WEST FLORIDA" AND OUR EARLIEST ANCESTOR IN THESE PARTS.

-oOo-

This is your great-great-great-great-great-great-grandfather, from whom you have derived 1/256 of your blood.

JOSEPH SIMON, Sieur de LaPOINTE

Native of Québec in the Province of New France (which is now called the 'Dominion of Canada'), he was a 3rd generation Québecois. He was also a nephew of the famous Catherine Barré of Mons, known in history as Madame de Chaumont. Both Chaumont and his wife were from Flanders, which was not originally part of France, but he had taken the 'oath of allegiance' and is officially recorded in history as Secretary to the King.

The Chaumonts owned a castle on the Loire - that river south of the Seine that passes Tours and is the valley of castles. In fact, just a few months ago Pan-American Airways showed a picture of the Chaumont castle in a full-page advertisement in the National Geographic magazine.

As a very young man, our Joseph Simon, Sieur de LaPointe, went from Québec, New France, to France, probably with Iberville and his young brother Bienville, in order to join the expedition to settle a colony at or near the mouth of the Mississippi. A feverish race was them going on, ever since Robert Cavelier, Sieur de LaSalle, had discovered its mouth, to control that river. This was a bit before the master-promoter John Law became so prominent in French and in fact worldwide history.

Iberville's small party sailed from France direct to San Domingo (now called Haiti) and landed first at Cap Français. That part of this island had recently been captured from Spain by French pirates. Iberville inqured as to whether the Spanish had established a colony west of the Apalachicola river, and, being misinformed to the effect that the Spanish had not, he sailed direct to where Pensacola now is. To his chagrin, he found a Spanish colony, and immediately turned Westward to where Ocean Springs now is, and established the first "Biloxi".

Joseph Simon, Sieur de LaPointe was in this expedition and this was 1699 - just two hundred and sixty-eight years ago! and this is the first we know of of our blood entering this territory.

JOSEPH SIMON, Sieur de LaPOINTE

For a few years we are not entirely certain as to the whereabouts of LaPointe. We do know from many historical works, that Iberville explored Dauphin Island before going to the first Biloxi, and that he also made friends with the Choctaw Indians, went through Bayou Manchac and finally out into the Gulf and up the mouth of the Mississippi to where New Orleans now is. In fact, the oldest place name given by White people in what is now Louisiana was Bayou Mardi Gras and Mardi Gras Point, adjoining what is now known as Fort St. Philip, which name was given by Iberville and his party on Mardi Gras Day in 1699. What we do not know is whether LaPointe stayed at Fort Biloxi or continued on the trip.

Neither do we know whether he continued in this area as a settler or returned to Québec. But we do know that LaPointe secured a grant from Governor Cadillac for one square league of land on Dauphin Island, im order to raise cattle, when Mobile was on that island, was called "Mauvilla" and was the capital of Louisiana.

A terrific hurricane struck Dauphin Island in 1717, destroyed everything on the island and almost destroyed the island itself. Regardless of which definition of a "league" you take, the island at its widest point is not a league wide. Moreover, we also know that that hurricane created Sand Island and bottled up the port of Mobile for the following two hundred years (see Grant's Pass under the Chapter on Unruh).

We do not know whether LaPointe was married two or three times, nor whether our ancestress was his first or second wife. Official records do show clearly that his home was the center of Catholic activity in the Pascagoula area. The 1725 census gives him 3 children, and the 1726 census only two. He seems, too, to have had a great deal to do with the conduct of the concession granted to his aunt, Mme. de Chaumont, although her concession seems to have been a little further up the Pascagoula River than the so-called Old Spanish Fort, which he built with Indian labor and crushed oyster shells (see the chapter on Krebs). In fact, my story about the fort should be in this chapter instead of the Krebs chapter, but the Pascagoula Historical society emphasizes the Krebs name more than the LaPointe name.

I find a very interesting document in the St. Louis Cathedral. I will not give it to you entirely in French, because some of the words, and all of the construction are archaic to the extent that I cannot make them all out. But I can read enough of it to give you the sense in modern English, as follows:

> "In the year 1723, the 13th day of June, I have received the mutual consent of Mr. Joseph Simon, Sieur de LaPointe, a widower & a resident, and of Catherine Doucin, also a widow, and after the ceremonies of the Church and other formailties were duly observed, I, the undersigned priest, curé of Fort Louis, called the Biloxi, have given to them the Nuptial Benediction in marriage.
> "The Sieur de LaPointe recognizes a little girl about two years old of Catherine Doucin, born after a promise of marriage, whom he has legitimized by a contract to marry, and whom he legitimizes again through the present ceremony, to the end that she will be treated equally in succession with the other children. Thus done in the presence of Charles Argron, Sieur de LaMothe, Louis L. Vergne, Charles Veillard, Jean Veillard and several other witnesses as well as J. S. LaPointe and some who declared they were unable to sign their names and made their marks. In faith of which I have signed, J. Vorez, Priest."

JOSEPH SIMON, Sieur de LaPOINTE

Now, don't get too badly shocked by the above document. There was a period of eight years that no priest visited Pascagoula or Mobile and it was an approved practice of the Church for a couple to meet with witnesses, sign a contract to marry as soon as a priest was available, and the ceremony was accepted. In fact, after more priests were available, the LaPointe home in Pascagoula was for years the meeting place for baptisms and marriages as well as the saying of Mass.

This document is just a resume of the original contract and church ceremony. The original may still be somewhere in the New Orleans archives, and the Presbytere is about to give the Genealogical Research Society of N. O., of which I am now a trustee, access to the ancient "Black Boxes." These are boxes painted black with ancient documents in them, and which are so old the authorities do not allow anybody to open them. If I find the original document we will know more about this famous man and his ancestors.

To give you an idea of how important LaPointe was, I give you below a map taken from Hamilton's "Colonial Mobile". I have superimposed an arrow pointing to a spot entitled "Habitn. du Sr. Lapointe" ("Residence of Sir LaPointe").

Entrance Hymn - "Parable"

To ev'ry thing there is a season; A time to be born, and a time to die,
A time to plant, and a time to harvest; A time to meet, and a time to part.
A sower went out to sow the seed. Some fell on shallow, rocky soil,
And some among choking thorns.

To ev'ry thing there is a season; A time to be born and a time to die,
A time to speak and a time for silence; A time to wound, and a time heal
Nothing can grow in barren soil, Briars and ravens take their toll Still there is grain a hundred fold, From seed that took root and grew.

To ev'ry thing there is a season, A time to be born and a time to die;
A time for joy and a time for grieving; rooted in joyful loving hearts,
Growing like grain in fertile ground a harvest that overflows.

To ev'ry thing there is season, a time to be born and a time to die,
A time to plant and time to harvest, a time to meet and a time to part,
A time to meet and a time to part,

Krebs, Ella

Miss Ella Krebs, teacher of the Ward public school at Lucedale, went through a trying ordeal on Thursday, February 28th. Lightning struck the school house, killing Dollie Holder and injuring three other pupils. Miss Krebs came to her home in our city after the calamity to recover from the shock and returned this Thursday to her charge.

hijo Lexitimo y natural de difuntos Juan Krebs, y de anna charite fritz Consortes. Estando enfermo en Cama de enfermedad Corporal temeroso de la muerte que es natural y por la divina clemencia Con mi Libre Juicio entendimiento Conforme Constante la voluntad recordando la memoria y Con disposicion tal de mis potencias y sentidos que segun parece a los infra escritos testigos y Es.no indubitadamente puedo disponer de mis Bienes y ordenar mi ultimo testamento de que yo el presente Es.no Doy fee. Creiendo Como firme y verdaderamente Creo y venero el sacro santo misterio de la Sanctissima trinidad padre hijo e espiritu santo tres personas distintas y un solo Dios verdadero, Como en todo lo demas que tiene Cree, y Confiessa Nuestra santa madre Iglesia Catolica de Roma de la que me Confiesso humilde, aunque indigno hijo en Cuya Creencia y fe he vivido protesto vivir y morir y — desseando salvar mi alma, otorgo mi testamento en la forma siguiente —

Primeramente mando y encomiendo mi alma a Dios nuestro Señor que la crio y redimio con el inestimable precio de su sangre suplicando a su divina Mag.d la lleve con sigo a su Gloria para donde fue criada y el cuerpo mando a la tierra de que fue formado.
Otrosi mando que quando la voluntad de Dios nuestro Señor fuere servida llevarme de esta presente vida mi cadaver sea sepultado en el Campo Santo de la parroquia de esta Ciudad y mis funerales dexo a la disposicion del albacea testamentaria que despues elegire otrosi quiero se me digan las tres Missas del alma Otrosi declaro que he contraido dos matrimonios en fas de la Santa Madre yglesia el primero con Maria Simon Tapointe ya difunta de cuyo matrimonio tuve y tengo en hijos legitimos y naturales a Joseph de edad de trinta y tres años
a pedro de trinta años a francisco de trinta y dos a augustin de veinte y nueve Maria Joseph a narbona de veinte y ocho años Margarita de veinte y siete años y a otra nombrada Maria Gardinigo de veinte y seis años = y el segundo charité de catorze, a Basilio de doze años a Maria Roza de diez, y a Cecilia de nueve años

Ill.ma declaro que antes de contraer el segundo matrimonio hize inventario de todos los bienes que me quedaron al fallecimiento de mi primera muger el qual monto y dhos bienes fueron apreciados en nueve mil libras, mitad por mi y la otra mitad por mis hijos de mi dho matrimonio como herederos de su Madre, y por convencion expressa hecha ante la justicia de la mobila consenti de dar a cada uno de dichos mis hijos primeros dos cientos pessos de los que tengo pagados a francisco ciento y cinquenta, a Joseph igual cantidad a augustin lo mismo y a pedro otros ciento y cinquenta con que estos quatro no tienen que repetir por la parte que les corresponde en la herencia de su Madre solo cien pessos las que se pagaran sobre mis bienes antes la particion general.

assi mismo declaro que la parte que corresponde a Maria Josepha consorte del numbrado narbona se esta enteramente debida no haviendo le dado ninguna cuenta. assi mismo declaro que he pagado a Margarita consorte del numbrado Gardinisso la parte entera que le compete y cien pessos de mas de los que debera hazer cuenta a la Massa y cuerpo de bienes que quedaran a mi fallecimiento.

Ill.mo declaro que el segundo matrimonio que tengo contrattado con marianna chauvin a sido assi como el primero contractado baxo las leyes y costumbres de paris: y que dha mariana chauvin llebo por su dote cien pessos consta de su carta de dote y que despues tengo recevido doscientos y quarenta pessos que le havian venido de la herencia de su madre: lo que haze la cantidad de trescientos y quarenta pessos. pero como esta convenido y espressado en dicha carta de dote que todo lo que le viniere, un tercio sera metido en la comunidad. consequentemente dicha mi consorte no tendra que llevar antes la particion que solo la cantidad de doscientos veinte y seis pessos cinco reales y medio: mas havra de llebar trescientos pessos que le tengo assegurados por el dotario y cien pessos por el precipue assi que esta estipulado y espressado en dha carta de dote. y lo demas y estas prelevas hechas se han de dividir mis bienes en dos partes yguales la una por dicha mi muger, y la otra por mis hijos como siendo gananciales, assi mismo antes de hazer esta ultima particion haviendo prelevado lo que corresponde a mis primeros hijos: lo que corresponde a la dha mi actual consorte se havra de llebar tambien nuebe cientos pessos que llebe a este matrimon por la mitad que me pertenecia en los primeros inventarios, y estas pretensas efectuadas lo demas quedaran por Gananciales los que se dividiran en dos mitades yguales la una por todos mis hijos y la otra por mi Consorte y a la parte que Corresponderan a mis hijos se havran de añadir los nueve Cientos pessos que se habran pretevados sobre el Cuerpo de Bienes, para despues el todo ser dividido entre todos mis hijos del primero y segundo matrimonio y partido con ellos por partes iguales: assi lo declaro por descargo de mi Conciencia y son las Leyes Baxo las quales tenemos Contraido matrimonio y a las que nos hemos sometidos.

Otro si por quanto los dhos mis hijos de mi precitado segundo matrimonio son menores de veinte y Cinco años y por esta razon incapaces de administrar en el todo sus Bienes para en el Caso de mi fallecimiento les nombro y Establesco por Curador ad bona y ad lites a Mo Chavlan el mayor por la Confianza que del tengo fiando tomara a su Cuydado el de este Encargo para Cuyo efecto le doy Concedo y substituyo todo el poder que en mi reside y el que necessita segun las Leyes Reales otro si y por lo que fuere menester para efectuar este mi testamento nombro y elijo mi Consorte Mariana Chuvin — dandole todo el poder necessario que en

Dro se requiere.
Otro si quiero y es mi voluntad sean todas mis deudas pagadas aquellas que legitimamente constare ser deudor por escrituras publicas privadas testigos u otras pruebas observando el fuero de mas segura consciencia — y del remanente de mis bienes derechos — y acciones que me pertenecen y puedan — instituyo y nombro por mis legitimos y universales herederos a los precitados mis hijos de primer y segundo matrimonio — para que los hayan y hereden igualmente con la bendicion de Dios y mia —
Este es mi ultimo testamento y postrimera voluntad que por tal quiero valga y tenga su execucion y cumplimiento luego que Dios nuestro señor, como lo espero de su misericordia tenga por bien llebarme para
si. Y para mas abundamiento, revoco y anulo y he por revocados y abolidos otros qualesquiera testamentos o codicilos hasta esta hora de palabra por escrito, u de —

The Rebels' weekly newspaper, the Mississippian, finished its thirty-ninth year of publication this semester. Every Friday—except during registration, examination, and holiday periods—bound stacks were dropped with resounding thuds in dorm doorways by circulation manager Joe Moore and his assistants—Virginia Seal, Bill Oldham, Harold Brewer, and A. B. Catlett.

But more than that went into getting out the paper each week. Editor Jimmie Caldwell, spurred on by Managing Editor Albin Krebs, got the editorial staff to work every Monday afternoon. Bill Street, assisted by Bobby Jones, handled the sports copy, while Dorothy Jean Hunter (with an assist from Carol Price) rounded up society news. Dorothy Wooten and Paul Pittman were co-feature editors. J. O. Emmerich and Sam McKee each served a semester as news editor. Simon Lee, the tall man with the big cigar, took pictures, and Pete Raphael kept readers informed of what went on in other schools.

Members of the editorial staff included Margaret Robinson, Sis Fields, Abe Tahir, George Hall, Harry Danciger, Bob Berman, Bob Cassanova, David Weinmann, Ned Nelson, Paul Amos, Harriet Denham, Lynn Holloway, and Mary Forrest McCall. Columns were penned by Roger Shows, Bill Street, Frank Montague, and Albin Krebs.

Eaton Lang, business manager extraordinaire, kept the paper out of the red by successfully curbing any attempt by the editorial staff to spend money. In this he was aided by Bill Connors, assistant business manager, and abetted by Ed Howell, advertising manager. Assistant advertising manager was Ed Brignac.

The Mississippian sponsored the annual Hall of Fame and the Miss University contest; meanwhile staff members concentrated on making the paper worthy of winning a much-cherished but only once-won "All American Honor Rating."

The life of
Allen Joseph Krebs
31 October. 1862 - 11 August 1923

After acquiring and reading the wonderful Krebs Family History book researched and produced by Ellen Frances Miller Foster and complied and edited by Gladys Rutan Daw in 1991, I have been compelled to research my grandfather's life which was left out of the above mentioned book. Now I know why....no birth certificate. Blame the Civil War, blame the lack of record keeping during that time in the now defunct town of Americus, Mississippi. Americus is PROBABLY where Allen Joseph Krebs was born as his father, Sidoine Krebs, was there serving in the 5th Mississippi Infantry (Confederate State Troops) Company H. The first official document of Allen Joseph being born that I have found so far is the 1870 census stating that he is 8 years old, born in Mississippi, but at the time of the 1870 census, living in Mobile. With the help of Dr. William Ashley Vaughan of Jackson, MS, genealogist with the Archive of the Catholic Diocese of Jackson and the Mississippi Department of Archives & History, we have surmised that he was born in Americus, and probably baptized at Our Lady of Victories in Pascagoula. Although the church was founded in 1855, there are no known baptism registers for the church before 1882. Sidoine Krebs, Allen Joseph Krebs' father, was taken captive by the Union forces at the battle of Vicksburg and was declared a Prisoner of War (see attached). His release was secured on the 10th day of July 1863. Sidoine died the 2nd of September 1864, hence Allen Joseph was just shy of two years old when his father died.

I wish I had written down more about my grandfather, Allen Joseph Krebs, while my father, Miller Martin Krebs, was still alive so I could ask him questions. I realize that I know very little about my grandfather. I do know that a story goes that my grandfather "ran off" his mother's second husband with a "buggy whip" when he was 12 years old. My father always chuckled about that. I do know that when my grandfather, Allen Joseph Krebs, was in college studying construction engineering he took a summer job as the assistant to the head engineer building the first bridge across Lake Pontchartrain. The head engineer dropped dead of a heart attack and Allen Joseph at the tender age of 19 or so finished the job. He went on to establish the A. J. Krebs Construction Co. Some of the buildings he built in the early part of the 1900's are still being used today. Two examples are the Hillman Hospital in Birmingham, AL which is the cornerstone for the great University of Alabama at Birmingham Hospital today. He also worked on the famous Biltmore House in Asheville, N. C. , forming a friendship with the famous landscape designer, Frederick Law Olmsted. As World War I approached he withdrew my father from the Virginia Military Institute where he was studying construction engineering, to work with him to build installations for the government. My father was exempted from the service due to the nature of this work. A. J. Krebs Construction also built V. A. hospitals and Telephone and Telegraph buildings all around the southeast. He was only 60 years old when he died of a heart attack in Atlanta, Georgia, where he was working at that time. He is buried in Birmingham, AL. He and his wife, Caroline Lee Martin had three sons, Allen Joseph Krebs, Jr., (no issue), my father Miller Martin Krebs, (issue 7 children), and Ralph Krebs who died as a youth, (no issue).

My father Miller Martin Krebs was born and grew up in Birmingham, AL. After the death of his father he continued in the construction business. During WWII he also built installations all over Alabama for the government. After the War he settled in Montgomery, AL to build shopping centers, university buildings, etc. He dearly loved his work and was retired for a short time before his death at age 79 in 1971. My father was married to Lois Thompson, daughter of Annie & Joseph O. Thompson of Birmingham, AL. Together they had 7 children. See Attached.

My father, Miller Martin Krebs, had many wonderful memories of spending summers at the Krebs Fort. When he and my mother married in 1914 they took a train to New Orleans for their honeymoon, stopping to spend the night with relatives at the Krebs Fort. As children we also were taken to the Fort and visited in Pascagoula. My younger sister and her husband, Kathleen & Lee Crowe, lived for many years in Pascagoula so I was afforded many visits as a grown up and my children have fond memories of fishing, sailing, and swimming with their cousins there also. My daughter was so attached to the little city that she wrote a poem about Pascagoula, See attached.

Introduction

At the end of the summer of 1991 I learned of the existence of copies of some of the books of the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception of Mobile and determined to visit the State Archives in Montgomery, Alabama, where these copies were preserved. A short time later I did visit the Archives and was delightfully surprised to see pages and pages of Book 1 baptisms and burials clearly typed in French, along with photocopies of the pages of the original books of the same. Inasmuch as copies of these could be made, I copied all of the French transcriptions that time allowed and came away from there richer.

My objective in all of this was to translate all of this material and publish the indexes, which people have waited too long for already. With this lengthy work completed, I brought the translations and indexes to the Archdiocesan Archivist, Very Reverend G. Warren Wall. He was quite pleased with so much work and promised to send me copies of untranslated material to move the process along. I also told him that the indexes would be offered to the Coast Journals.

Much still has to be done. It is hoped that the readers of these indexes will find their ancestors therein and obtain the needed copies of pertinent documents.

Regarding these indexes, the single and double first names, e.g., Rosalie and Jeanne Elizabeth, are names of female Blacks or Indians; Jean and Paul Emile are names of males. As you peruse these indexes you will see many of such names.

It is imperative that should someone wish to have a document from the listing below, that he order by section number, name of person sought, page and act. This will insure getting the proper document in translated (English) form. Should the person ordering want a photocopy ofthe original French entry, the Archivist will have to search the books for the year and date of that entry. Inasmuch as these translations cannot be kept by register number, one cannot say in which register the original entry can be found. The Archivist will find it.

CHAPTER THREE

HELAIRE KREBS - CLAIM SECTION #6

A quick walk to the west end of the beach brings us to the point where the seawall meets the mouth of the East Pascagoula River and Claim Section #6, originally patented to Helaire Krebs on April 8, 1847. It is described in the official records as a tract bounded north and west by Lake Yazoo, south by the beach, east by the shipyard property, and the marsh on the west. It is not so difficult to understand that a portion of this Claim Section should be known as "Krebsville", remembering that many early settlers in this area were named Krebs. It is interesting to note that the Krebs name may be spelled "Krebbs" or "Krebs" on land documents. (See Plat of Claim Section #6 in this Chapter.)

Important places and people were not lacking here in the history of our beach area. Perhaps one of the outstanding places was the first beach park site known as Anderson Park, but, before this came into being, the property was owned by a famous citizen about whom we thought you should know...

CAPTAIN JOHN GRANT

It doesn't take long for one to discover this gentleman's name woven in and out of our local history. His inventive genius led him to be recognized as the "Father of the Pascagoula Port", for more than 100 years ago, John Grant dredged the first channel on the east stream of the Pascagoula River.

John Grant could not escape being a Yankee, having been born In 1796 in Pennsylvania, although he moved to Baltimore, Maryland at an early age. He became a southerner when he moved to Mobile in 1827 to build a dredged canal for the government. From that time until his death in 1887, he lived in Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana. John Grant was a remarkable nonagenarian, inventor, engineer, commander, legislator, and first railroad man of the south whose more important and best known achievement was the construction of "Grant's Pass".

With an investment of $109,000, he connected the navigable waters of Mobile Bay and the Mississippi Sound (a passage for boats drawing six feet). With the dredging of this channel in 1839, he did what government engineers had failed to do earlier. From that day, "Grant's Pass" has remained a permanent channel. (10)

Helaire Krebs, Sr., b. 1-13- 1788, d. April 1831
Son of Louis Augustine Krebs and Madeline Durif
We don't know much about him! The most interesting thing that I've observed is that two of his daughters married John Grant's sons and they lived in Krebsville. I guess since he died in 1831, he didn't build the home; maybe he lived in another one on the land and his son Helaire built the big home around 1840.

Married Irene Bermuchand b. 1799- d 1870.
Together they had

Helaire Jr. b. 1819 d. 1900 m. Mary Louise Krebs
Mary (Garm) Krebs m. W.F. Grant
Zoa m. Emanuel Deas
Delphine m. John Lafayette Grant
Ferone m. Richard Ryder
Evelyn m. Thomas Hawkins

Helaire Jr.(Helaire, Sr., Louis Augustus, Hugo) married his second cousin, Mary Louise Krebs(Charles Rene, Joseph, Hugo) . The joining of these two important Krebs Lines brought together financial resources each had inherited from their Krebs' ancestors. They owned land and farmed it...see agricultural census of 1850. Helaire was appointed by the State of MS as a Land Agent (see MS Harvest, for a good story). They reached their golden wedding anniversary(see newspaper clipping). They are buried at Greenwood Cemetery. Remember that in 1850 they lived in "Krebsville".

Their children are listed on the census of 1850....about half of Pascagoula descends from them!!

My quote would have to be, I have enormous gratitude towards my family because 1) My great Uncle Hermes Gautier, bought and restored the antebellum Krebs home originally and now my cousin Michele gautier and her husband Dan Lee, have repeated the history by buying and restoring the home for this generation. Living in the International shipbuilding workers....historic district promotes community pride about our shipbuilding heritage and the fact that Uncle Hermes helped buy and preserve the neighborhood makes it doubly special. for me Gautier

The Golden Wedding of Mr. HILAIRE KREBS and Mrs. MARIE LOUISE KREBS was on Monday celebrated in the Catholic Church with unusual solemnity. The ceremonies had been announced for 9 o'clock a. m. but at a much earlier hour the sacred edifice was thronged with invited guests. While the aged but still vigorous pair walked up the aisle to the altar, a beautiful march pealed forth from the organ under the accomplished touch of Miss ALBA POL.

The eyes of eleven children and fifty-three grandchildren followed with reverent and filial affection, their stately approach to the foot of the altar. There they were met by the Pastor, Rev. C. A. Oliver, assisted by Rev. Father V. Bally of Pass Christian, who performed the usual ceremonies of matrimonial celebration.

High Mass succeeded during which the choir assisted by Rev. Father Bally then spoke in feeling and eloquent terms most appropriate to the occasion.

THE HILAIRE KREBS HOUSE

14. THE HILAIRE KREBS HOUSE

This house, which faces Yazoo Lake at the western end of Columbus Avenue, was built by Hilaire Krebs around 1850. Originally this two-story house had three dormer windows in the front (Classic Revival period) with a gallery across the front and back. Downstairs there was a living room, hall and two bedrooms. In addition, a kitchen and dining room were attached to the house on the southeast corner. An extra room was added onto the north side. However, it was later removed and relocated on the site. The house was built of heart pine, utilizing square nails mortized pins and wooden pegs. A fire destroyed the top of the house before the Civil War. Scars of this fire can still be seen on two oak trees on the site. During World War I this house was used as a hospital for the International Shipyard and doctors lived in the house. In 1925, the house was purchased by Hermes Frederic Gautier who lived there until his death. It is now the home of the Hermes Quinn Gautier. [17] It is in standard condition.

*NOTE: The children by some attributed to Pierre Krebs are in this record given to Louis Augustin Krebs for the following reasons: Joseph Krebs, in an affidavit on a land claim, July 7, 1843, stated that "Augustin Krebs had 7 children; those who lived and had heirs were: Paul, Antoine, Hilaire, Basil, and Hipolite." Rene Krebs under the same date stated that Paul, Basile, and Hypolite were "the children of the widow of Augustin Krebs."

1. Joseph Moreau born Aug 20, 1741, baptized Feb 4, 1748.

2. Francois Moreau born Feb 4, 1748, baptized March 31, 1749.

3. Augustin Moreau baptized June 17, 1754, age 6 years. Born about 1748.

4. Marie Jeanne Moreau baptized July 21, 1750. * The list of Descendants of Joseph Moreau that Renee has lists a Marie Jeanne Moreau as being child of Joseph and Marie Jean Dauphin, born 1750, but the parents of this Marie Jeanne were listed as deceased Joseph Moreau and Marie Jeanne Bergeron.

* This marriage found, Volume 1, page 17: Jean Baptiste Bergeron (Leonard and Margueritte Beauvais), resident upstream on the river, married Marie Jeanne Dauphin, April 4, 1725. – so apparently Marie Jean Dauphin was married prior to marriage to Moreau. I have not found record of death of Jean Baptiste Bergeron and didn't find any children listed in N.O. records as having been born to them. I don't know why she's listed as Bergeron here unless the clerk just mistakenly listed her prior married surname instead of maiden name.

Marie Helene Moreau baptized September 25, 1753

* Marie Helenne Moreau, daughter of deceased Joseph & Marie Jeanne Dauphin, married Jacques Lamy on Jan 22, 1760 on this same page in N.O. Sacramental Records. She was probably baptized some years after her birth.

Jacques Lamy (Jacques and Margueritte De Rossiere), native of Musso {Mousseaux-sur-Seine?], Diocese of Meaux in Bry [sic], married Marie Helenne Morau [@Moreaux], Jan 22, 1760.

Children:

Jean (Jacque and Heleine Moreau), born Sept 17, 1761, baptized Sep 19, 1761.

Euphrasie (Jean Baptiste, surnamed Brindamour and Heleine Morau), born Nov 19, 1769, baptized Dec 2, 1769. * Don't know why father listed as Jean Baptiste instead of Jacques.

Son of Heleine Moreau, widow of Lamy:

Pierre Moyse Moreau born Dec 26, 1771, baptized Dec 31, 1771 – born to Heleine, widow Lamis, surnamed Birndamour. Jacques Lamy died Feb 17, 1770, drowned on the Pere de Famille on a trip to France. (Louisiana Troops 1720-1770 by Winston DeVille). So this child could not have been Jaques Lamy's child.

Was Joseph Moreau married twice before marrying Marie Jeanne Dauphin? NO Sac Rcrds, Vol 1, lists:

Joseph Moreau, master locksmith, widower of Jeanne Lamourette, dec. in this parish, married Thereze Le Grand, June 4, 1729, widow of Pierre Dreux.

Same page:

Charlotte (Joseph Moreau {@Maraux], locksmith, and dec. Jeanne Dammourette), married Jaque {@Jacques} Ozenne, Nov 10, 1727.

Charlotte Julie Moreau (Joseph and Jeanne Amourette), native of Blois, widow of Jacques Ozenne, married Claude Trennonay, Dec 31, 1743.

(Found in The Vaudreul Papers by Bill Barron): Moreau, Charlotte Julie, Dame, wife of Trenaunay Chanfret, 6 (LO 54)

When document number is parenthesized, as this one is, it means that the name appears only in the original document, not in this book.

Began from recollections of mine on November 11, 1723 at the village of St. Louis de la Apalache near Fort Conde de la Mobile.

Although I am not a educated man I feel that I should write down what I can remember of my life in Louisiana since my arrival on the ship the Pelican at Fort Louis de la Mobile in septmber 1704. I pray that my memory will prove to be good and correct.

The first thing I recall was the women that landed with me. My rememberance of them was mared that year because of the great number of people who died from the great fever. I lost many new friends.

It was the following year that my friends the Apalaches came to Fort Louis. They came seeking that M. de Bienville to ask him for a place to live. They had led Spanish territory toward St. Augustine. We settled them near the Tomez.

In 1702 (1707?) we began to improve our settlement at Dauphine Island. M. de Noyant a commander arrived at Massacre with three ships. Later in that year a merchant ship named St. Antoine ran a shore off the island.

The following year M. Diron, a great friend came to Mobile. He was very interested in peace with all of indians. To aid in keeping peace with them he sent M. d'Eraque to the Illinois to talk peace with them. As a matter of fact however two of the tribes were to go to war. These the Alibamons and the Mobiliens.

In 1709 M. La Vigne Voisin built a good fort on Dauphine Island. Later that year we saw more trouble when a small number of the Chactacs clashed with at least fifty Alibamons. The (?) was a great disappointment to M. Diron. A new friend I was to meet that year, Nicolas Bodin.

In 1710 the Mobile River overflowed and left most of the fort under water for the most of a month. We decided that we would have to move the colony elsewhere.

As the new year 1711 started we moved the settlement south to within a league of the mouth of the Mobile River. Shortly more aid was to come viz: the arrival of the Kings Ship La Renommee, and its captain M. Remonville.

The year 1712 brought us a change. M. de la Mothe de Cadillac was made Governor of Louisiana. He a rived in early summer with his family and M. Duclos, the commisary-general on the ship Le Baron de la Fozze, of which M. de la Jonzuiere was the captain. During that year M. de St. Denis traveled to ascend the Rouge River and r ach the Nassitoches Indians.

In 1713 M. de la Loire came to Mobile to help as a merchandise clerk. He was to arrest an English (man?) called Hughes. He had been trying to win the Natchez friendship away from us to the English. M. de la Loire brought him to M. de Bienville. During this year there was much trouble between my friend M. De Bienville and M. de la Mothe.

In 1714 the Natchez murdered five of our men but we proved to get our revenge. In February the La Dauphine arrived, M. Rogeon the new director.

During this year at the reguest of M. de Bienville at least a dozen of us went to the Apalache village of St. Louis a league above Mobile to enforce the small eleven man garrison we had there.

In the year 1715 M. de la Mothe granted my friend S. La Pointe a tract of land on the east shore of Mobile Bay. During the year we built a new fort among the Natchez. We named it Rosalie. M..de St. Denys returned from a trip from Mexico to marry Captain Pedro de Vilesca's daughter. Afterwards he wnet beyong the Mississipi and built a fort which he named Fort Nassitoches.

In 1716 I saw fit to marry the one I loved, Maria of the Apalachee nation. This I will never regret dispite the disapproval of many. We made home with her people are at St. Louis. Her people are simple lot. They have since before leaving Florida celebrated with reat gaiety St. Louis Day. They are a very religious group despite the fact that they are considered to be savages by the majority of us.

In the yar 1717 a new governor came to replace M. de la Mothe. His name was M. de l'Epinet. With him came many new officers. Governor M. de l'Epinet, like M. Dirion was very interested in peace with the indians. At Daubhine Island he smoked the peace pipe with at least two dozen tribes.

M. Diron was very interested in peace with the indians. At Dauphine Island he smoked the peace pipe with at-least two dozen tribes. During the year we built a fort at New Biloxi not knowing that within a few years this was to replace Fort Louis as our capital.

In the year 1718 we started a settlement thirty leagues up the Mississippi from its mouth. We called it New Orleans. In August a great storm wrecked the coast. It all but destroyed the harbor at Dauphine Island doing great damage to all concerned. The storm was so great that the harbor there was blocked with sand.

During the year 1718 I was able to plant my first large garden with the help of my friends the Apalachees. We planted it on the east side of our village. Our village is composed of 16 buildings, a small log dirt stockade, and a small brick chapel below the village on the bayou.

(Sketch of the village site.)

The year of 1719 brought what I thought was bad news. In January M. de Serigny arrived at Dauphine Island with the news that war had been declared between us and the Spanish. M. de Serigny brought three ships with a great number of soldiers, many workmen, and at least three hundred negroes. A few days after the arrival of M. de Serigny we launched an attack against Pensacola. M. de Bienville marched overland with an army to attack the Spanish while M. de Serigny sailed with five ships. The Spanish surrendered the day of the attack.

Within two weeks 1,500 seized Spanish returned and seized Pensacola.

Soon after the Spanish siezed Pensacola they attacked Isle Dauphine and the near by mainland. They did a great deal of pillaging but were soon driven off by a party of our beloved Mobiliens. A large number of the Spanish were killed while fifteen were captured.

Commodore de Chamelin came to Isle Dauphine with five great warships and organized an attack on Pensacola. After only a siege of a few hours Pensacola surrendered to M. M. de Serigny, M. de Chamelin, and M. de Bienville.

After the surrender we took all we wanted that was at Pensacola and then destroyed the town and fort.

Late in the same year came the first number of aliens to our colony. Aboard the ship Les Deux Freres were a great number of German men and women. They brought a great deal of supplies and personal affects with them. They landed at New Biloxi.

They were not the only ones to go to Biloxi because during the same year many of the inhabitants of Isle Dauphine moved to Biloxi. It was a sad day when M. de Bienville and all of his officers left to set up a new capital at New Biloxi.

The year 1720's activities were mainly centered around Biloxi. Probably the most important happening during the year was the arrival of seven ships from France. Aboard were many new colonists including sixty young girls to marry.

A great number of land grants were issued during this year.

Concessions were issued to M. Laur, M. Colis, Count de Artagnan, M. Le Blanc, the Marquis d' Anceny, Duke de Charost, M. Dartaquet, M. de Villemont, M. de Mezieres, Madame de Chaumont, and many others. M. de Bienville said that over 3,000 persons in Louisiana had concessions by this time.

In March 1721 the ship La Baleine came to Biloxi with M. de Chateaugue aboard. Aboard were ninety girls from Paris who were to marry the colonists. Shortly Le Marechal de 'Estrees arrived. On it came nearly 200 slaves. Most of these were destined for the inhabitants of New Orleans. All during the year ships came and left. Among these were La Durance, Le St. Andre Le Marechal d'Estrees and Le St. Catherine. On board Le St. Andre were a great deal of supplies and one-hundred settlers for the Mississippi above New Orleans. All of these were from Germany.

1721 saw one-hundred colonists settle at Madame Chaumonts plantation on the Pascagoula.

By 1722 it was declared that Louisiana was to be divided into districts and be called New Orleans, New Biloxi, Mobile, Alibama, Yazoo, Natchitoches, Arkansas, and Illinois.

Chevalier D'Arensbourg came to Mobile along with M. Marigny de Mandeville. Again financial problems compelled much of the garrisons of Mobile and Biloxi to go to the indians. Conditions reached such a point during the year that much of the garrison at Fort Toulouse de la Alibamons mutineyed. These were soon captured.

A great hurricane hit the coast during the fall and did great damage.

This year has seen M. de Bienville give Pensacola back to the Spanish.

In this year I wonder and am deeply worried about certain feelings that M. de Bienville has made known to me. I should have known something by now. Perhaps this is why M. de la Mothe didn't want his daughter near him. I pray that God will for give and lift from his heart the abomination of this unholy sin against nature that plagues him.

Our village continues to grow in this its twelfth year. In April a delagation composed of M. de Mandeville,

FAYE LEWIS DUVALL

M. de Villemont, M. de D'Aemsbourg, the Swede, Frere Claude and myself where in New Orleans to meet with members of the Superior Council. On the thirteenth we attended a ball commerating the fifth anniversary of the capital. It is miraculous the improvements and growth that has taken place since it was founded. The city now has over 300 inhabitants and is growing at a rapid rate.

In the twelefth year of St. Louis de la Apalachees our village contains the following inhabitants.

THE BEGINNING OF THE CLAIM SECTIONS

During the turbulent period after the Pascagoula area was granted to Madame de Chaumont, the British moved in and seized the area, setting aside and disregarding the earlier French Grants. The British, however, were not destined to hold the area very long. For two decades later, in 1781, the Spanish ousted the British and disregarded land claims of either the British or the French. Because of the help given by the French to the colonists during the War of Independence, close ties of friendship emerged between the United States and France. One result of this friendship was that the United States later acknowledged and authenticated many of the earlier French land grants.

Interesting features of the land grants or claim sections are that they follow no particular pattern, are completely at odds with a regular governmental section (640 acres square), yet are the controlling legal designation today by virtue of Mississippi Supreme Court decisions. The plat of claims which cover what was Pascagoula adequately demonstrates the point (See sketch, page 13). If you will note Claim Section 7, the claim of Rene' Krebs, you will see its pattern is that of stair steps. It is said that he first selected the largest tract, then became more ambitious and on two subsequent occasions added the two northerly portions. In any event, the early settlers merely staked out their claims, swore they were occupying and using the land, and thereby became the owners. (32) The following claims touch the Pascagoula Bay front and cover the area involved in our story.

Chapter Two:

. . . ANTONIO KREBS CLAIM SECTION #8

Many years after Mississippi became a state (1817), the Federal Government recognized and authenticated the French Land Grant of this area to Antonio Krebs on April 23, 1847, under the Federal Act of May 8, 1822, which authenticated and approved the earlier French and Spanish Land Grants and which thereafter were designated as "Claim Sections". The original Claim Section of Antonio Krebs was bounded on the

- . . . north by Ingalls Avenue
- . . . west by Pascagoula Street
- . . . east by Baptiste Bayou, just west of 11th Street
- . . . south by the Pascagoula Bay.

Upon the death of Antonio Krebs, the property was inherited by his niece, Eugenia Baptiste. (27)

The Antonio Krebs Claim Section was destined to see an exciting era stretching from the late 1820's to the late 1850's and beyond. The beginnings of this era are found in the . . .

OLD McRAE HOTEL

The exciting era was due in part to the most famous resort hotel being built in this area. Fronting on the beach and located between what is now Pascagoula Street and Buena Vista Street was the impressive McRae Hotel. (A smaller hotel by the same name and built by the same owner was located in West Pascagoula, now known as Gautier.) Sometime between 1830 and 1860 this palatial structure made the Pascagoula area burst into a mecca for well-to-do tourists who strolled in the balmy Gulf Breezes and partook of fine cuisine. (The gentlemen also partook of the poker games which were available daily.) There are varying reports as to the size of the hotel, but from all accounts it consisted of 250 to 300 rooms with several cottages on the grounds. One such cottage was destined to become famous in its own right as the Cottage-By-The-Sea.

The owner of the property, John McRae, an enterprising business man who came from North Carolina to Jackson County in 1826, left the land to his four sons--Malcolm, Colin J., John J., and James B. It was destined for Malcolm, the oldest son, to bring the property to its fullest use, for it was he who developed the hotels, one in Pascagoula and one in Gautier (the latter one was managed by Elizabeth McRae, the mother). (1)

Extending from the McRae Hotel waterfront was a long pier, 1500 or more feet (extending into deeper water) and wide enough for two carriages to pass. Horse-drawn carriages were used between the hotel and sea end of the pier. These carried the passengers and cargo which arrived by sail or steam-powered excursion vessels (packets) from New Orleans. The pier was also used for loading supplies for delivery by "lighters", a barge-type sailboat, to large schooners anchored in "middle fleet" near Horn Island. (32)

The hotel turned out to be short-lived for it was destroyed by fire in the early 1860's. It's owner, Malcolm McRae, did not attempt to rebuild the hotel.

But for the unique personalities of the McRae family, Pascagoula would have missed its place in early history. The father, John McRae was a man of immense energy, personal charm, and imagination. His drive and ability were inherited by his sons, three of whom served in public office. In 1854, John J. McRae, Jr., became the 15th Governor of Mississippi. He served a full four year term at a crucial time when the economic forces, which produced the Civil War, were driving the state's leadership into an adamant position from which, ultimately, it could not retreat. (32) Colin J. became a Confederate Congressman; and the youngest brother, James B., a Colonel in the Confederate Army. (1)

The hotel in Pascagoula was of such grandeur as to host the famous Mexican War General and later U. S. President, Zachary Taylor. It was the scene of one of his pre-inauguration balls.

John J. McRae, Jr., died in 1835; and is buried along with his youngest son, James B. McRae in Gautier. John J. and Colin J. died in British Honduras and are buried there. (1)

The McRae Tract was a large piece of land, stretching from the bay, north to La Street (now Ingalls Avenue), bounded on th west by Pascagoula Street, and extending east to within 185 feet of Buena Vista Str (13)

During the McRae ownership, a map of tract was used for deeding the property to various persons; however, the Courthouse f of 1875 destroyed the map and produced gre confusion as to property lines. Present-d records are still prominent with reference to the bygone era of the McRae Hotel Tract

(The voice paused and while I wanted hear more, I knew nothing more remained to said about the once glorious McRae Hotel. too, paused . . . and let the spirit "jog its memory" in hopes that another story wa forthcoming--and--I wasn't disappointed.)

"I mentioned," the voice began, "that one of the cottages was destined to become famous in its own right." And without further hesitation we were off and running again with the story of . . .

THE COTTAGE-BY-THE-SEA

proprietor, Charlie Boster, opened for business and early records read like storybook ads vying for the tourist trade. Take, for example, this description taken from an 1895 writing of Along the Gulf.

"This hotel is in the town of Pascagoula on Front Street, immediately facing the Bay of Pascagoula (within 40 feet of the water), giving a fine view of the islands, shipping, etc., and receiving in full during the summer months the cool balmy breezes from the Gulf of Mexico. It's owner, Charles Boster, is a well-known hotel man in the south. There are several buildings connected with the main cottage and all accommodations are nicely fitted for guests. The large, airy rooms have wide verandas which will withstand the cool winter winds. The dining room is one of the best appointed and coolest on the Gulf Coast. The table is par excellent the attraction of the hotel. The best the markets, surrounding country, and waters of the Bay can furnish are supplied to the guests with a lavish hand. This, combined with the efficient service maintained in every department, makes it one of the most popular resorts on the Gulf Coast." (2)

The Biographical and Historical Memoirs of Mississippi (14) has recorded that this resort accommodated 60 to 70 guests. It was lighted throughout by gas and had a fine wharf extending out into the bay with a roomy fishing pier at the end. Bath houses were attached on each side, and the finest salt water bathing to be found on the coast could be enjoyed the whole summer. The hotel was connected by telephone with all parts of Pascagoula, Moss Point, and Scranton.

* * * * * * * *

"One feature of the cottage complex which I shall tell but which I claim no part is Mr. Boster's dabbling with" . . . (and the voice hushed) . . . "the spirits! Now mind you, not the type of spirit I claim to be, but the 'bottled variety'. You know the kind! Now I'm no gossiper, but I've been told that the saloon was the finest place of its kind between New Orleans and Mobile. It had a polished hardwood bar behind which were mirrors of various sizes. The floor was carpeted and showcases around the walls exhibited all sorts of souvenirs collected by Mr. Boster on his many travels in the Gulf of Mexico and Carribean Sea. Other curiousities had been presented him by seafaring friends who stopped at the "Cottage Complex" while in the Pascagoula port for an overnight visit. (15)

19

Curiously I interrupted, "Tell me about Charlie Boster. He seems to have been quite a fellow."

"Well," the voice relaxed, "he was--he was. A native of Germany, born in 1828, he came to the United States when he was 17 and served in the United States Navy during the Mexican War on board the Frigate Cumberland. At the close of the war and his term of service, he shipped out of New York on a whaling voyage, which lasted three years and which took him around the world. During this time he had many thrilling adventures and suffered many hardships, but acquired invaluable knowledge about many countries. On his return, he took up residence in New Orleans and engaged in the mercantile and steamboat business. In the 1850's he was proprietor of the bar on the steamer "Creole", one of the passenger boats going from New Orleans to different watering places on the Gulf Coast. After the Civil War he tried various places until he settled in Pascagoula in 1878. We are told he attained an enviable reputation in the community, by his public spirit and fair dealing with his neighbors and guests, by his genial disposition, and his close attention to their wants and comfort. Being a civic-minded citizen, he was a member of the Pascagoula Board of Health and a Mason. (15)

The "Cottage-By-The-Sea" can still be seen today at 1205 Beach Boulevard, although its original second story was removed some years ago. Several owners have called the Cottage "home" since Charlie Boster's time. Today, its owners are the T. B. Fairleighs who purchased it from Mrs. Lillian Green in 1957. (13)

Several doors east of the "Cottage" and adjoining Square 1 of the McRae Hotel Tract is the present day residence of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Megehee at 1305 Beach Boulevard. This property was the original site of the . . .

WILLIAM S. DODSON HOME

. . . whose great-grandsons are Charles and Henry Torjusen, who live in this area.

During the mid-1800's, the William Dodsons owned various parcels of land in the Antonio Krebs tract (one of which is now the Woman's Club property). Carl Megehee has given us this history of his home property at 1305 Beach Boulevard:

On May 2, 1851, Eugenia Baptiste and husband, Jacob Baptiste, conveyed the proper ty to William S. Dodson. The original records of the Courthouse were burned three times in fires of 1862, 1866, and 1875; and this Deed has been re-recorded in Deed Book Page 122, Land Deed Records of Jackson Count Mississippi. The original Dodson homestead lot ran from the Beach to Washington Avenue and included the land that during the 1930's and 1940's was in the "Rose Garden" of Captain H. H. Colle and the north part is nc the home place of Mrs. Ollie Colle. William S. Dodson built a large two-story wood frame house with porches across the front, and operated what was known as Dodson House Hote which began operation before the Civil War and operated until the late 1800's. Mr. Dod son was the great-grandfather of Charles and Henry Torjusen. Just west of the fence of this property was the property of the large hotel, known as the Pascagoula Hotel, or the McRae Hotel. Just east of this property on Buena Vista Street in the front yard of the present Dr. Enger home, was the post office for the town of East Pascagoula.

Mr. Dodson sold the property in 1890, a in April, 1900, it was purchased by F. H. Lewis, who conveyed part of said land at tim to E. J. Jane and Joseph A. Tabor, and F. H. Lewis later re-acquired all the property in January, 1920. Mr. Lewis had three small houses as camp-sites among the trees on this property, and one of the camps had the roof built around a magnolia tree. The camps are now gone, but the trees remain.

While F. H. Lewis owned the property during the middle 1920's, William Faulkner spent a summer at one of the camps as a guest of Mrs. Myrtle Lewis Stone's family. It was while he was here in Pascagoula, he wrote the book Mosquitos. The fact that William Faulkner, the Nobel Prize Winner, stayed at this location is printed in the Biography of William Faulkner, written by Joseph Blotner, and in the book there is a picture of William Faulkner sitting by an oak tree in the front yard of the property with Rosebud Stone Leatherbury in his lap, when she was about two years old.

In the early 1930's, the property was sold to A. L. Staples, who sold it to Captain H. H. Colle in 1938. Captain Colle tore down the cottages and landscaped the yard and made it into a flower garden. After the death of Captain Colle, his widow, Mrs. Ollie Colle, conveyed the property to Carl A. Megehee in October, 1961. The present house was constructed on the property in 1964. (27)

As the old saying goes, "Time changes many things" and certainly property becomes an object of change both in ownership and appearance.

* * * * * * * *

"Since the Woman's Club Center property was originally a part of Lot 1, Square 3, of the McRae Hotel Tract, how did this 40 feet by 100 feet lot come into the possession of the Woman's Club Center?" I asked.

1710

"That," the voice said, "is a title researcher's nightmare." (Remembering again the Courthouse fire of 1875 which destroyed the records.) "You must keep in mind that my original purpose was religious in nature and that there have been not ONE, but TWO church lots. The first lot 100 feet by 100 feet was on the south corner, adjacent to the present 40 feet by 100 feet lot. But to tell my history, one has to know the history of both lots, or the south 140 feet of Lot 1, Square 3, McRae Tract, and the beginning of . . . "

THE UNION CHURCH LOTS

On July 28, 1954, Elizabeth McRae conveyed land including this property to Ursin Raby, whose heirs conveyed Lot 1 and other property to Jermina Dodson in 1867 for the sum of $260.00. (This seemed an unusual conveyance to a married woman 100 or more years before "women's lib".) This land involving the first church lot (south 100 feet by 100 feet) was deeded by the Dodsons to the Trustees of the Union Church, John W. O. Ferrill, B. R. Chambliss, and William Welch on March 25, 1868. This is the first time that a benevolent purpose is impressed upon this property, and the deed reads as follows:

Jermina Dodso

Pag 45 -

and what does "Consolidated"

1711

"We, WILLIAM S. DODSON, and wife, JEMINA DODSON, being disirous of erecting a church for the purpose of divine worship in the town of East Pascagoula and for future consideration of $1.00 to the said JEMINA paid by the trustees hereafter named, do grant and bargain the following lot or parcel of land in East Pascagoula:

> 100 feet off the south end of Lot #1, Square #3, fronting 100 feet upon a County Road* and running east 95 feet on Jackson Street*; thence 100 feet north, 95 feet west to the County Road.

In trust with the following conditions:

(1) Within reasonable time cause to be erected upon described premises a suitable building for religious worship.

(2) Building is equally open to all white preachers of the Protestant faith of whatever denomination and shall be under the exclusive control of none.

(3) If the church is not built or ceases to be a church, the property reverts to the donor." (13)

* County Road - Pascagoula Street
* Jackson Street - Washington Avenue

From the records it seems that the church was not built, and the land did revert to the donor. But the Dodsons were determined that a house of worship would be built on this same piece of land because on August 26, 1881, the Dodson family gave a deed to another Board of Trustees of the Union Church, Benjamin F. Lindsey, Robert B. Grant, and Jens Nielson, who must have carried out the wishes of the Dodson family and built the Union Church, because the records show that on October 2, 1893, a hurricane destroyed the Union Church Building. (These same records also show that the first building was constructed about March of 1875.) (13)

Thus ended the use of the south 100 foot as a church lot and after this the chain of title to this piece of property is a completely different record.

In the meantime Edmond Torjusen, a native of Norway, came to this country and married Lula P. Jordan, granddaughter of William S. and Jemina Dodson. Lula's mother was the Dodsons only daughter, Mary Sophia Dodson Jordan. J. W. H. Jordan died only two years after he married Sophia, and she later married C. D. Hendrickson. Hence, most of the records do not show the name "Jordon" but rather Mary Sophia "Hendrickson."

Lula Jordan Torjusen and Edmond Torjusen lived in East Pascagoula on property acquired by them from the family. Lula died and Edmond remained in Pascagoula until 1898 when he returned to Norway in 1901 and the two boys eventually returned to the United States. Edgar and his wife, Ida, had one son, Edmond, who was killed during World War II. Charles Tobias married Bertha Fitzenriter and their two sons, Charles and Henry, are Pascagoula residents.

It is just one short block from the Beach School, south on Buena Vista to the beach front. A few feet east, still in the Antonio Krebs Claim Section is found the site of a home no longer in existence. More modern and beautiful homes have taken its place, but in an earlier era the home of . . .

MRS. L. W. O'CONNELL

. . . was located on property now owned by the Bacots, Simmons, and Lockards. (23)

From Along the Gulf Coast we learn that in 1891:

> "One of the most beautiful estates in Pascagoula is the home of Mrs. L. W. O'Connell, situated directly on the waterfront, facing the Gulf of Mexico. This estate comprises, in all, about 40 acres of the finest land to be found in this section of the country. Giant live oak trees are scattered all over the estate throwing a grateful shade over the place, and there is one of the finest pecan orchards in the State." (2)

Fruit trees were abundant--figs, grapes, pomegranites, pears, etc. The homesite had a 350 foot front on Pascagoula Bay. The front had a wharf extending 1000 feet into the Bay with bath houses built at the end.

The back of the estate was heavily timbered. Several large buildings built in the Southern style and several summer houses built amid the huge moss-hung live oak trees were scattered throughout the estate.

> "In short, this is one of the most beautiful spots to be found on the entire Gulf Coast and can be bought very low, owing to the advancing years and continued ill-health of Mrs. O'Connell, the owner." (2)

We do not know how long the home was in existence, but the home was purchased by Dr. W. R. Kell; and according to Arthur Smith, was one of the sites considered for the "new" Beach Park.

Perhaps one of the most well-known and prominent figures who visited and lived for a short time in the Antonio Krebs Claim Section was none other than the 12th President of the United States and his wife . . .

PRESIDENT AND MRS. ZACHARY TAYLOR

The story begins in 1847, immediately at the close of the Mexican War, when the then General Zachary Taylor and Mrs. Taylor came to Pascagoula. (The Taylors knew this area, since they had previously vacationed here at the old McRae Hotel from their plantation home near Baton Rouge.)

The Taylors spent several summers and an undetermined length of time at a home on the beach (located west of a bayou and 11th Street--near the Dantzler property). Rumors are that General Taylor also purchased or leased a 40 acre tract of land behind the present city park.

An interesting story found in the writings of historian Walter Lewis is that General Taylor built Pascagoula's first housing project, which ran from the beach north to Lincoln Avenue (now Ingalls). He named the streets in this project after battles he fought in the Mexican War--Buena Vista, Resca de la Palma, Cherubusco, and other names which still exist today. (17) Fiction, or fact, it is a good story!

Another story is that General Taylor dismissed the remnant of his "Mississippi Rifles", the army he commanded during the Mexican War, somewhere along the beachfront and paid the men off in gold worth $10,000. Accordingly, it is told that folks living here at that time never saw so much gold as was in circulation then! (10) (39)

The "Taylor beachfront home" no longer exists. It was a two-story frame structure built long before the War Between the States by a Mr. McClatten whose wife taught a private school in the house. The architecture of the front was changed when the high steps leading to either side of the porch were damaged so extensively from the tropical storms that they had to be removed. It is also said that Federal soldiers took refuge in the house during the war. (10)

Some folks say that Margaret Smith Taylor died at the Pascagoula beachfront home. Others say she died at the Taylor plantation in 1852, near Baton Rouge.

Knox Taylor, second born of the six Taylor children, married Jefferson Davis in 1835. However, their marriage was short-lived for Knox died three months later. (4)

One of the last occupants of the home was the L. E. Cox family. Mr. Cox, an energetic leader and businessman in Scranton and East Pascagoula, bought the home from the Volney Brown family about 1900.

During the time the Cox family lived in the house, it was the subject of an unusual episode. Fannie Louise Cox Voitier relates this story about her sister:

> "On the day in question (1916), a water spout from the bay came ashore right in the path of the Cox home. Audrey Cox, then an infant of two, was crawling on a living room rug runner. The waterspout forced open the front doors, took the baby and rolled her in the rug and tossed her against an antique mirrored hatrack. The hatrack turned over on the child and protected her from further harm. The family was frantic until they discovered the child unharmed, rolled in the rug. Audrey became Mrs. Douglas Nichols and lived in Mobile until her death in 1974." (38)

Fannie Louise Cox Voitier (Mrs. George) lives in Pascagoula and gave us the picture from which our sketch of the "Taylor home" is taken.

The life of
Allen Joseph Krebs
31 October. 1862 - 11 August 1923

After acquiring and reading the wonderful Krebs Family History book researched and produced by Ellen Frances Miller Foster and complied and edited by Gladys Rutan Daw in 1991, I have been compelled to research my grandfather's life which was left out of the above mentioned book. Now I know why....no birth certificate. Blame the Civil War, blame the lack of record keeping during that time in the now defunct town of Americus, Mississippi. Americus is PROBABLY where Allen Joseph Krebs was born as his father, Sidoine Krebs, was there serving in the 5th Mississippi Infantry (Confederate State Troops) Company H. The first official document of Allen Joseph being born that I have found so far is the 1870 census stating that he is 8 years old, born in Mississippi, but at the time of the 1870 census, living in Mobile. With the help of Dr. William Ashley Vaughan of Jackson, MS, genealogist with the Archive of the Catholic Diocese of Jackson and the Mississippi Department of Archives & History, we have surmised that he was born in Americus, and probably baptized at Our Lady of Victories in Pascagoula. Although the church was founded in 1855, there are no known baptism registers for the church before 1882. Sidoine Krebs, Allen Joseph Krebs' father, was taken captive by the Union forces at the battle of Vicksburg and was declared a Prisoner of War (see attached). His release was secured on the 10th day of July 1863. Sidoine died the 2nd of September 1864, hence Allen Joseph was just shy of two years old when his father died.

I wish I had written down more about my grandfather, Allen Joseph Krebs, while my father, Miller Martin Krebs, was still alive so I could ask him questions. I realize that I know very little about my grandfather. I do know that a story goes that my grandfather "ran off" his mother's second husband with a "buggy whip" when he was 12 years old. My father always chuckled about that. I do know that when my grandfather, Allen Joseph Krebs, was in college studying construction engineering he took a summer job as the assistant to the head engineer building the first bridge across Lake Pontchartrain. The head engineer dropped dead of a heart attack and Allen Joseph at the tender age of 19 or so finished the job. He went on to establish the A. J. Krebs Construction Co. Some of the buildings he built in the early part of the 1900's are still being used today. Two examples are the Hillman Hospital in Birmingham, AL which is the cornerstone for the great University of Alabama at Birmingham Hospital today. He also worked on the famous Biltmore House in Asheville, N. C. , forming a friendship with the famous landscape designer, Frederick Law Olmsted. As World War I approached he withdrew my father from the Virginia Military Institute where he was studying construction engineering, to work with him to build installations for the government. My father was exempted from the service due to the nature of this work. A. J. Krebs Construction also built V. A. hospitals and Telephone and Telegraph buildings all around the southeast. He was only 60 years old when he died of a heart attack in Atlanta, Georgia, where he was working at that time. He is buried in Birmingham, AL. He and his wife, Caroline Lee Martin had three sons, Allen Joseph Krebs, Jr., (no issue), my father Miller Martin Krebs, (issue 7 children), and Ralph Krebs who died as a youth, (no issue).

My father Miller Martin Krebs was born and grew up in Birmingham, AL. After the death of his father he continued in the construction business. During WWII he also built installations all over Alabama for the government. After the War he settled in Montgomery, AL to build shopping centers, university buildings, etc. He dearly loved his work and was retired for a short time before his death at age 79 in 1971. My father was married to Lois Thompson, daughter of Annie & Joseph O. Thompson of Birmingham, AL. Together they had 7 children. See Attached.

My father, Miller Martin Krebs, had many wonderful memories of spending summers at the Krebs Fort. When he and my mother married in 1914 they took a train to New Orleans for their honeymoon, stopping to spend the night with relatives at the Krebs Fort. As children we also were taken to the Fort and visited in Pascagoula. My younger sister and her husband, Kathleen & Lee Crowe, lived for many years in Pascagoula so I was afforded many visits as a grown up and my children have fond memories of fishing, sailing, and swimming with their cousins there also. My daughter was so attached to the little city that she wrote a poem about Pascagoula, See attached.

DEATH OF MR. ALFRED E. KREBS.

Seldom has our community been stirred with such profound sorrow as when on the morning of June 18th the news spread like wild fire that our esteemed and much-beloved citizen, Mr. Alfred Edward Krebs, was dead. He had received his final message, as he greeted his friends in life and filled with the knowledge of everlasting peace he passed to the beautiful beyond at 12:30 a. m. All the people mourn with the bereaved wife, who has lost the strong right arm of her household, and the children who have lost a kind, indulgent and affectionate father.

Alfred E. Krebs was born February 1, 1847, at Pascagoula. He was the second son of Mr. Hilaire Krebs and the late Marie Louise Krebs. Arriving at manhood's estate he married Miss Hermina Ellison, of Mobile, in 1871. Growing in the esteem of his fellow-citizens he occupied many places of public trust, among the most noted, mayor of Scranton, two terms as justice of the peace and was holding the position of deputy collector of customs when death claimed him for his own.

Fourteen children blessed his union, eleven of whom are still living, five sons and six daughters.

His funeral was held at his late residence Sunday morning, June 19th, Rev. Father Ten Brink, officiating. The house was filled with sympathetic friends who followed him to his last resting place in the Catholic cemetery at Pascagoula.

The community will long mourn the loss of their dear and valued citizen, on whose name no blot appears, and the heartfelt sympathy of all is extended to the bereaved wife and children.

DEATH OF MRS. H. KREBS

Mrs. Hanna Hermina Ellison Krebs, widow of Alfred E. Krebs, died at her home on South Pascagoula street, this city, on Friday, April 1, 1938, at 12:40 p. m., after an illness of three months, her death being caused by senile debility.

The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon, April 3, at three o'clock, from late home of deceased, proceeding to the Church of Our Lady of Victories, where the services of the church were conducted by Father P. J. Carey, in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives of deceased. Interment was in Greenwood cemetery, with the following pall bearers: Paul H. Krebs, J. Eugene Krebs, Alcee L. Krebs, Ira P. Krebs, Monroe S. Krebs, and Edwin J. Westbrook, all sons of deceased except Mr. Westbrook, who is a son-in-law.

A long line of cars carried friends and relatives to the cemetery where the remains were tenderly interred alongside the grave of husband of deceased, and many beautiful flowers, brought by friends and relatives, wafted their fragrance to the skies, like incense, silent reminders of love and esteem.

Mrs. Krebs was one of the oldest and most highly esteemed citizens of Pascagoula. She was born in Mobile, 60 years ago, in a home at Church and Franklin streets which is said to be still standing and occupied as a residence. She was married when only 19 years of age in New Orleans to Alfred E. Krebs, and immediately moved to Pascagoula where she has resided for 67 years, rearing a large family of children, eleven of whom survive. Her husband preceded her to the grave forty years ago. The surviving children are as follows: Mrs. W. P. Ramsay of Ocean Springs, Miss Edwina Krebs of Pascagoula, Paul S. Krebs of Birmingham, Mrs. Ella Brincat of Mobile, Mrs. E. J. Westbrook of Pascagoula, Eugene J. Krebs of Houston, Texas, Alcee L. Krebs of New Orleans, Mrs. R. L. Paquette of Jackson, Miss., Mrs. C. M. Murray of Pascagoula, Ira P. Krebs of Pensacola, and Monroe S. Krebs of Pascagoula. There are also [illegible] grandchildren, and numerous other relatives.

Mrs. Krebs was a devout member of the Catholic church, a good woman in every way, always ready to help others and to answer the calls of mercy and kindness until the encroachments of age caused her to remain at home most of the time. She loved flowers and children, and her bereaved sons and daughters have the recollection of a long and useful life to cheer them during remaining years of their [illegible]

Last Will and Testament of MARIANA CHAUVIN,
Second Wife of Hugo Hernesto Krebs

This is typical of the wills of well-to-do Catholic French people on the Gulf Coast during the 1700-1800 time period. The date of this will is July 30, 1799 - during the Spanish period of rule.

Translated in 1976 by Evalie S. Cuadrado of Metairie, La., Legal Translator, it is valuable as a family history research item because it describes relationships and locations of property and other important facts.

Except for separating into paragraphs and capitalizing names, the will is printed here as translated from the original will in French by Ms. Cuadrado:

LAST WILL

In the Name of God Almighty and of the Ever Virgin Mary His Blessed Mother who was conceived without the original sin, Amen.

Let it be known that I, MARIANA CHAUVIN, a native of the Illinois Territory in this Province, an inhabitant of the other side of the Lake on Bayou Chifuncte, at present residing in this City, the Widow of Hugo Hernesto Krebs, being ill, but having my full judgement, memory and natural understanding that God has been kind to give me, believing as I firmly believe in the mystery of the Most Holy Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, three different persons and one true essence, in the mystery of the Incarnation of the Divine Word made flesh for our redemption in the most pure womb of the Virgin Mary Our Lady Most Holy, and in all the other articles, mysteries that believes, teaches and preaches Our Most Holy Catholic Apostolic Church of Rome, administered and governed by the Holy Spirit, under which faith and belief I have lived and intend to live until I die, as a Catholic and true Christian; fearing death which is natural, not knowing its uncertain hour, forseeing that mine will come, I therefore want to make my last will, which with the divine guidance that I have summoned I order in the following manner:

I offer my Soul to the same God that gave it to me, created and redeemed it with the courage of His Most Precious Blood, Passion and Death, and humbly beg to His Divine Majesty to forgive it and to take it to the eternal resting place with His chosen ones, the place where it was destined when it was created; the Body I send to the earth which formed it, and when I die I request to be buried with the blessing of the Church in the plot chosen for the faithful, leaving my funeral and burial to the disposition of my Executor to be carried out according to his wishes, as this is my will.

Following my death I order that thirty Masses be said immediately for my Soul with the usual alms, giving the amount of two reals to each of the forced bequests.

I declare to have been married according to the rites of Our Holy Mother the Church with HUGO HERNESTO KREBS, of whom I am the Widow, and from which marriage we had the following children:

HUGO, BACILIO, CECILIO AND TERESA who are living;

RAFAEL AND CARIDAD who died; leaving the former a daughter named BRIGIDA who is about ten years of age;

And the latter leaving five children named FRANCISCO BERNARDINO who is twenty years of age, EUGENIO IGNATIO who is eighteen years of age, GENOVEBA ISABEL, who is sixteen years of age, MARIA LEONORA, who is fourteen years of age, and CILBANO BACILIO who is thirteen years of age; having the remaining children that I have not mentioned died without succession, on account of which I do not have the need to make particular mention.

That following the death of my aforementioned husband inventories are being made before FRANCISCO BROUTIN and no judicial distribution of his estate has taken place, and I have already delivered to my children BACILIO, TERESA, CARIDAD, HUGO AND RAFAEL KREBS certain amounts:

To the first, five hundred and fifty pesos, as evidenced by a receipt executed before Francisco Broutin;

To the second, four hundred and ninety-three pesos in the form of a negro and of a negress;

To the third, four hundred and twenty-four pesos in the form of a negro and of a female mulatto;

To the fourth, five hundred and fifty pesos according to a receipt that he issued in Mobile;

And the fifth, four hundred and sixty-eight pesos in the form of a negro and furnitures, of which no receipt was given, as in the case of the aforementioned TERESA and CARIDAD;

Pending receipt of her share is the aforementioned CECILIA, who has not received anything, and therefore I am making it known that the portion corresponding to her is due her since she became of age which I have been holding in my possession as previously arranged; in order that her share, together with amounts that the aforementioned CECELIA has given to me to meet my needs, together with her deeds and personal attentions have accumulated to the amount of five hundred pesos which I want to be paid to her, together with the inheritance portion that I owe her.

I declare that my step children from the first marriage that my deceased husband had are not only satisfied with me as to the portions that were given to them following the death of their father, but that they are indebted to me for amounts received in excess of what actually corresponded to them, on account of which we have had legal actions before Francisco Broutin, reference of which appears in the succession of my aforementioned husband, and therefore I make mention of same in order that the corresponding amounts be collected from my aforementioned step children.

I declare as my estate a plantation that I have in the other side of the Lake, together with various pieces of slaves of both sexes and different ages, animals and furniture, which is a fact well known to my children and therefore I omit the details.

I declare that I am indebted to Mr. JUAN VENTURA, the Intendant of the Royal Treasury in the amount of two hundred pesos; to Mr. SANTIAGO MOULON in the amount of ninety peses; having other small indebtedness which I order that they be paid with any other debts that may exist as legitimate.

I appoint as my Executors, custodians of my estate, my son BACILIO KREBS and my brother-in-law FRANCISCO DUBUISON, and to all together and to each in solidum I grant the power and authority that I have to carry out this my disposition, without the intervention or knowledge of the courts of Justice, and to which effect they shall carry out the inventories, appraisal and partition of my estate, seeking to proceed in this manner to avoid problems and delays that could result otherwise.

And from the remainder portion of my estate, rights and interests that should belong to me for whatever reason, I appoint and institute as my only and universal heirs my aforementioned children HUGO, BACILIO, CECELIA and TERESA, had with my aforementioned husband;

As well as in the same terms my grandchildren, BRIGIDA, daughter of my deceased son RAFAEL;

Also FRANCISCO BERNADINO, EUGENIO IGNACIO, GENOVEBA ISABEL, MARIA LEONORA, and SILBANO BACILIO, the children of my deceased daughter CARIDAD, in order that they may find them and inherit them with the blessing of God.

I hereby revoke and annul any other last wills, supplements to last wills, powers of attorney, briefs and dispositions to will, which I might have previously executed in writing or verbally before this deed, which is my desire that they have no legal force in court or outside of court, except this will, which I hereby order that it be carried out, recognized and executed as my last and final will in the best manner and form as it is required by Law.

In witness whereof this deed is executed in the City of New Orleans on the thirtieth day of July of the year seventeen hundred and ninety-nine years; I, the Notary, certify that I know the grantor who appears to be in the full exercise of her judgement, that in said manner she declared and granted same through PEDRO DERBIGNY, Public Interpreter who signed with the undersigned, in the presence as witnesses of FRANCISCO RAMON CANES, LUIS LANDREAU, and Second Lieutenant BERNARDO MOLINA, all residents of this city and present.

= a correction = four hundred and sixty-eight pesos in the form of a negro and furniture, who have not granted a receipt = correction made.

2. Cecilia, born abt 1771 (died August 3, 1799). She is not found in the baptismal records of Arch of N.O. Sac Rds book for that time period. But there is a listing for Cecilia Kreps in the burial records for 1799 – with parents listed as Hugo & Mariana Chauvin: Cecilia (Hugo and Mariana Chauvin), native of this province, 28 yrs, unmarried, interred Aug 3, 1799. (SLC, F4, 68) (Arch of N.O. Sac Rds, Volume 6, 1796-1799)

Need to try to identify where these fit:

Juan Baptiste Deflandre & Margaritae Kreps

From studying the following sacramental records, I find that the Juan Bautista Deflandre who married Margarita Kreps was brother to the Maria Theresa Deflandre who married Josef Raby. Parents of both Juan Bautista and Maria Theresa (Deflandre) are given as (Juan Bautista & Maria Juana Miche),

Also a sibling:

Felicitas De Flandres (Juan Bautista & Maria Juana [omitted], native of this parish, married Pedro Berlucheau, Apr 26, 1798 (Arch of NO Sac Rds, Vol 6 1796-1799 (page 79), SLC, M5, 118)

In the will of Mariana Chauvin (dated July 30, 1799), Second wife of Hugo Hernesto Krebs, she states the names of the children she had with Hugo Krebs:
Hugo, Bacilio, Cecilio and Teresa who were living at that time
Rafael and Caridad who died

Rafael left a daughter named Brigida, at that time about 10 years of age.
Caridad left 5 children (at time of will):
Francisco Bernardino – 20 years of age
Eugenio Ignatio – 18 years of age
Genoveba Isabel – who is 16 years of age
Maria Leonora – who is 14 years of age
Cilbano Bacilio – who is 13 years of age
Some of Caridad's children died before the time of the will and not mentioned by name in will.

Sherry's note: Anne Charite Krebs is sometimes referred to as "Caridad" in sacramental records and is so called in her mother's will. Her son Bacilio Krebs and Francisco Dubuison were executors – Francisco Dubuison is named as her "brother-in-law," but we would think of him today as her son-in-law.

Balderas connection

From the entries here on Balderas, I learn that the person listed here as Genoveva Dubuisson (and also as Isabel Du Buisson) is the sister of Francisco Dubuisson who married Anna Charite Krebs. Both of their parents are given as Guillermo and Ursula Trepanie. Also children of Guillermo Balderas & Ursula Trepanie are Jeanne and Martin (NO Sac Rds, Vol 3 1772-1783, page 107 in Sac Rds Volumes in PPL, SLC).

Ignacio Balderas (Antonio & Theresa Rodrigues, natives of Salamanca), natives of Salamanca), native of Salamanca, sergeant of the Louisiana Battalion, married Isabel Du Buisson, June 10, 1778, w. Pedro Blanco, sergeant of the same battalion, Joseph Miler, sergeant of the same battalion, Genevieve Du Buisson (NO Sac Rds, Vol 3 1772-1783, SLC, M4, 26)

I believe this is probably Marie Pichon, dau of Francois Pichon & Genevieve Dubuisson. The age matches considering her birth year of 1816. There is a Camille Pichon buried in Old Dubuisson Cemetery in St. Tammany Parish, LA. The dates on the tombstone match the birth date (Sacramental record) and death date (Old Dubuisson Cemetery, St. Tammany Parish, LA) for Marie Pichon. Anatole Cousin is listed in the cemetery – apparently next to Marie according to listings of the cemetery headstones.

Seems to be a relationship between the Baham family and the Dubuisons – could the ____ Barron mentioned in Jean Hypolitte Avenel Pichon's baptismal record have been Baham instead of Barron?

Other Pichons in Sacramental Records:

Pichon, Juan Alfonso (Francisco and Maria Juana Bouquie), native and resident of this parish, married Maria Adela Millon, Feb 11, 1819, witnesses Juan Quessart, Francisco Lugra, and Carlota Dessilest, bride's cousin (Arch of NO Sac Rds, Vol 13, 1818-1819, SLC, M6, 227)

KREBS: Johann Ludwig Krebs 1713 - 1780 German organist and composer, born at Buttelstedt, Thuringia on Oct, 1713. He studied music first with his father and in 1726 entered the Thomasschule at Leipzig, where he became a pupil of J. S. Bach. He later held post as organist at Zwickau, Zeitz and at Altenburg, where he died in Jan. 1780. Kreb's organ music is composed in the forms used by Bach mxxx and leans heavily on his masters style. It is technically very accomplished and includes some especially fine trio sonatas. He also wrote sonatas for flute and harpsichord and some sacred vocal music. C.P Co.

Krebs: Sir Hans Adolf Krebs - 1900 - British biochemist, born in Hildesheim, Germany. On Aug. 25, 1953 he was a nobel prize winner for medecine. Discovered the Citric-Acid Cycle. M.D. degree at Hamburg Germany University in 1925. Was knighted in 1958.

Early maps- "Modern" maps (tabulae Novae) were early added to Ptolemaic Atlas, both in Manuscripts and printed editions. The earliest was a map of the north drawn at Rome in 1427 by the Dane Claudius Claussön Swart, known as Claudius Clavus. Cardinal Nicholas Krebs (1401 - 64) of Cusa (Cues, on the Moselle) drew the first modern map of Germany, which was engraved in 1491.

Nickolas of Cusa (Kū'sa) German, Nikolaus Von Cusa; Latinized, Nicolaus; original name, Nikolas Chrypffs (or Cryfts) or KREBS. b. at Kues (Cusa), nearTrier, Germany (1400 Or 1401) d. at Todi, Italy, Aug. 11, 1464. German Churchman and scholer. At the troubled council of Basil (1431 - 49) he worked earnestly for unity of the Christan Church, and promoted reform of the Calendar. Pope Eugene IV bestowed the red hat of a Cardinal upon him in 1448, and in 1450 he was named bishop of Brixen (Bressanone) Italy. Eminently a diplomat, he was appointed in Monasteries and sees, convoking synods, labering to restore discipline and doctrine, trying to compose the Hussite schism, promoting a Crusade against the Turks, mediating for peace between the Roman and Byzantine Churches. He was active in exposing the False or Isidorian Decretals. Before Copernicus he received that the earth moves around the sun, and his philosophy was humanistic, with pantheistic tendencies that anticipated Giordano Bruno. He wrote mathemical and philosophical treaties; his chief work was De docta ignorantia

PASCAGOULA'S CHEVALIER OF THE LEGION OF HONOR

The latest acquisition to the growing collection of historical relics in the Museum of the Old Spanish Fort at Pascagoula is this medal of the French Legion of Honor pictured here.

It once belonged to Louis Augustus Frederic de St. Ferol, a courageous Corporal under the famous "Little Corporal" himself, and who, after Napoleon's exile to St. Helena, finally found his way across the sea to East Pascagoula. There Louis died in 1840, having met and married Marie Emelie of the historic Delmas family eleven years before and having left five children to carry on his name.

From the very moment of his birth his destiny was dramatic for he was born on the river Rhone in 1794 at Lyons, France, on the very day it was besieged by the Republicans in the French Revolution.

His parents were Royalists and his father was in the army. Both the one-hour-old infant and his mother were hurriedly hidden by friends in a coal mine which belonged to the Frederics. There they were forced to remain in furtive safety for two years, before they were found by the father who had been forced to exile himself.

Louis himself was taken from school at 16 and put into Napoleon's vast army where he quickly became a Corporal and was decorated with this medal of the Legion of Honor at 18.

He and a small group were scouting in the mountains when a patrol of Russians far outnumbering them were observed approaching. Louis shouted to his men "Let us not be captured like cowards. Charge!" Their boldness completely threw the Russians off balance, who scattered and abandoned a valuable cannon. For this act of bravery Napoleon personally decorated Louis Frederic in the presence of his regiment.

After the fall of Napoleon the 26-year-old jobless ex-soldier sailed for America, arriving on the same day the first steamboat was launched by Robert Fulton.

From New York, by way of Gainsboro, Alabama, and various jobs and adventures, he finally arrived at Pascagoula where he has gone down in local history as its first postmaster. Those were the primitive days of postal service when the mail was brought to Pascagoula in row boats which met the steamboats that operated on regular mail schedule between New Orleans and Mobile but which could not come close to land in the shallow channel.

THE MEDAL OF THE LEGION OF HONOR—This award for courage and service, identified by the famous gold badge with its five double pointed rays, was established by Napoleon in 180 as a civil and military order of merit for both men and women—and it is still one of the highest honors France can bestow upon an individual.—(Photo by Watson Studio, co[illegible] Old Spanish Fort).

Henry G. Humphries was a successful cotton man here before the war. He was a member of the secession convention in Montgomery, from Mobile county in 1861; provost marshal at Mobile, 1862-3; and enrolling officer, 1864-5. He had a long line, beginning with Sir John Humphries, a native of Dorsetshire, England, who was a member of the illustrious House of Bohun. Sir John's wife was Lady Lucy, daughter of Baron Clinton, eleventh earl of Lincoln. Sir John was deputy-governor of Massachusetts. A descendent, John J. Humphries, moved to Columbus, Mississippi, and there engaged largely in cotton planting. His son, Dr. W. N. Humphries, was a trustee for the Mississippi College for Women, and his son, Henry G., settled in Mobile in 1819.

Mr. Humphries built the handsome house now standing at the southwest corner of St. Louis and Conception streets, and it was there his daughter, Marie, became the wife of the Hon. Marion Gaines of Austin, Texas. It is now the home of Mrs. Nina Hood Foykin, a daughter of the late O. J. Hood.

It may be mentioned that the old Krebs house, northwest Conti and Hamilton streets, lately removed, was occupied in 1865 by Louis D. Krebs; in 1866, by Mrs. M. Krebs; in 1878, by L. D. Krebs, and in 1886, by Miss Florida B. Krebs, by whom, in 1901, it was sold to the Mobile Library Association.

A few stray ends may now be knotted up and the woek will be as complete as the material at command permits it to be. There is a note about Chevalier de Belle Isle, whose lovely daughter Sieur Francis or Francois Krebs married. The chevalier arrived in these parts June 4, 1721, on the good ship Portefaix from France, along with DeGuillorie and DeJosieuse, whose names play some part in this narrative, and Dubas, Senac, Petat and Vivia, whose names do not. The archives in Paris record a grant under the charter of the Western Company September 7, 1717, to Count M.A. de Belle Isle, chevalier at the court of Louis of France and general of the marine in Louisiana (in 1730). Belle Isle appears to have come over to occupy his grant and grow up with the country.

BARON FRANZ VON KREBS

Baron Franz von Krebs was born in Castle Cachem, whose towers rise above the gently flowing waters of the Mosel River in the Rhine province of Germany. What persuaded him to leave his ancestral home and become a pioneer in America is not disclosed, but in 1730 he took ship and arrived eventually in Mobile, which from that time on was his home or chief residence, though he lived in Pascagoula also, where he owned and operated the first cotton gin of which there is any local record.

The Baron dropped his title and the "von" into the ocean as he came over, and became known as Sieur Francis Krebs. He married a daughter of Joseph Simon de la Pointe and Jeanne Puluot of Canada; he had a son, Hugo, and one daughter, Marie Josephine Krebs.

Francis Krebs married Marie Louise de Belle Isle, daughter of Moreau Augustine de Belle Isle and Marie Louise de Guilorie de Isle a Guillory, his wife.

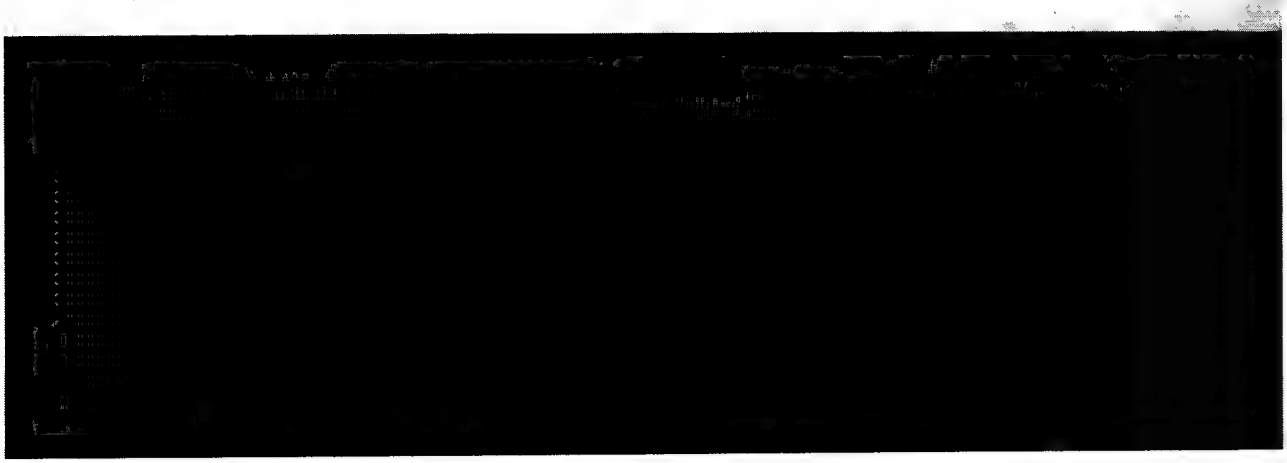
Pierre Krebs married Aline Peteet, of Pascagoula, and it is said that from that marriage are descended the Sandses and Rapiers of Mobile.

Hugo Krebs married Marie de Josieuse, of New Orleans.

Marie Josephine Krebs was married to Captain Antiome Narbona, mentioned as belonging to the French Navy. Their daughter Ana (also spelled Anna) Narbona, became the wife of Sig. Don Enrique Grimarest, the most distinguished figure in the whole ghostly company; for in the Archives of the Indies at Seville is a copy of a letter signed by Don Bernardo de Galvez, the governor of Louisiana, proposing to the King of Spain that Don Enrique, Captain in the regiment of Navarre, be made governor of Mobile. The date of this document is May 26, 1781. There are in the same archives two other papers relating to Grimarest. One announces his promotion to be lieutenant-colonel for "distinguished merits contracted at the capture of Mobile, and the other is the royal license granted Grimarest to marry Dona Ana Narbona.

Hamilton's Colonial Mobile registers Grimarest's title as "Political and Military Governor of the Town of Mobile and its District." The town is sometimes called in the Spanish documents "Plaza de la Movila", says Hamilton. It appears that Grimarest began his governorship in 1783. It was in that year, on December 26, that he lost his wife Ana, and the burial took place in the public cemetery, possibly the one just west of Jackson Street.

A descendent of Hugo Krebs and Marie de Josieuse, but whether immediate or not is not stated, was Joseph Krebs, who, as related in the family records, married William Fisher's daughter, and it was Joseph Krebs' daughter, Corinne Krebs, who was married in great state, July 15, 1850, to Henry G. Humphries, in her father's house, Conti and Hamilton Streets.



Henry G. Humphries was a successful cotton man here before the war. He was a member of the secession convention in Montgomery, from Mobile County in 1861; provost marshal at Mobile, 1862-3; and enrolling officer, 1864-5. He had a long lineage, beginning with Sir John Humphries, a native of Dorsetshire, England, who was a member of the illustrious house of Bohun. Sir John's wife was Lady Luch, daughter of Baron Clinton, eleventh Earl of Lincoln. Sir John was deputy-governor of Massachusetts. A descendent, John J. Humphries, moved to Columbus, Mississippi, and there engaged largely in cotton planting. His son, Dr. W. N. Humphries, was a trustee for the Mississippi College for Women, and his son, Henry G., settled in Mobile in 1819.

Mr. Humphries built the handsome house now standing at the southwest corner of St. Louis and Conception streets, and it was there his daughter, Marie, became the wife of the Hon. Marion Gaines, of Austin, Texas. It is now the home of Mrs. Nina Hood Boykin, a daughter of the late O. J. Hood.

It may be mentioned tha t the old Krebs house, northwest Conti and Hamilton streets, lately removed, was occupied in 1865 by Louis D. Krebs; in 1866, by Mrs. M. Krebs; in 1878, by L. D. Krebs, and in 1886 by Miss Florida B. Krebs, by whom, in 1901, it was sold to the Mobile Library Association.

A few stray ends may now be knotted and the work will be as complete as the material at command permits it to be. There is a note about Chevalier de Belle Isle, whose daughter Sieur Francis or Francois Krebs married. The chevalier arrived in these parts June 4, 1721, on the good ship Portefaix from France, along with DeGuillorie and DeJosieuse, whose names play some part in this narrative, and Dubas, Senac, Petat and Vivia, whose names do not. The archives in Paris record a grant under the charter of the Western Company, September 7, 1717, to Count M. A. de Belle Isle, chevalier at the court of Louis of France and general of the marine in Louisiana (in 1730). Belle Isle appears to have come over to occupy his grant and grow up with the country.

[illegible] WILL AND [illegible]

OF

EXECUTED BEFORE JUAN BAUTISTA [illegible]RIC, NOTARY PUBLIC AT NUEVA ORLEANS, PROVINCIA de la LUISIANA, SEPTEMBER 21, 1776

[illegible]ared and Commented upon by: George Senac Rapier

FOREWORD

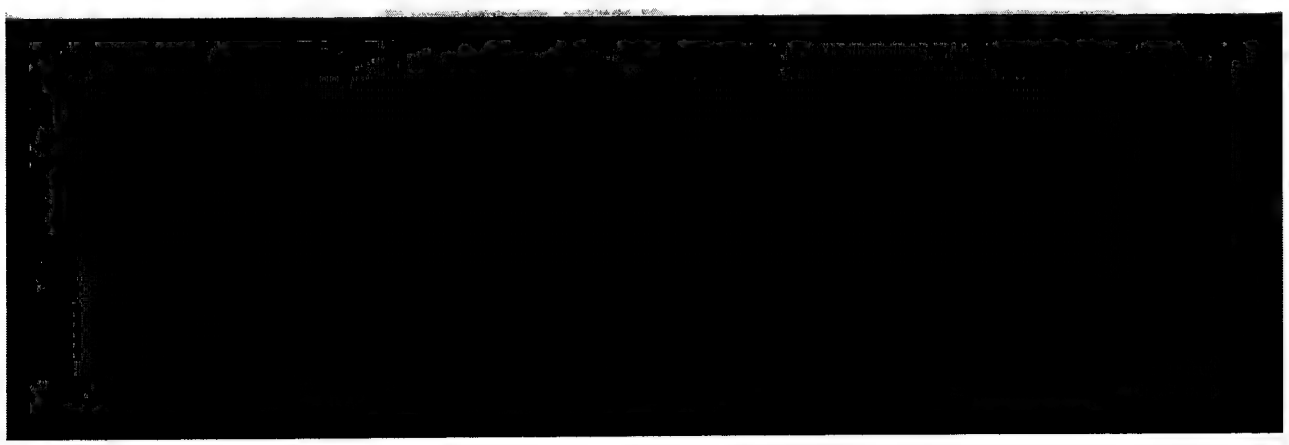
[illegible]ofessor J. Hanno DEILER referred to the will of HUGO ERNESTUS KREBS, and even [illegible] names of his children by [illegible] first and second marriages. However, since his death [illegible] has seemed to be [illegible] Miss Regina RAPIER had urged me to institute a search for it in public records, but it simply stayed on my cluttered agenda.

A few months ago, Mr. Hewitt L. FORSYTH, Editor of NEW ORLEANS GENESIS told me that a Dr. (academic, not M.D.) SANDOZ, a lady and a professor at one of our universities, had discovered the will; so, a search for Dr. SANDOZ was added to my list of 'things to do when---'. Then, out of a clear sky, a facsimile arrived from Miss RAPIER, in Spanish handwriting of the XVIII century.

Casually perusing this quaint document, it was impossible to miss the error in arithmetic when KREBS lists the children of his first marriage who were to receive 200 Pesos each; and to whom he had already given 150 each, leaving a balance of 100! This, then, required more than a translation; it required a thorough and meticulous study, which I undertook myself. This one document could be the subject of a dissertation.

[illegible] coincidence, when I had completed my rough draft Mrs. Dugue BENDERNAGEL [illegible]le JARREAU) visited us, to see what I had on KREBS, because she, too, descends from him. Mrs. B. Frank ESHLEMAN was there also; her daughter married my nephew, so some of her grandchildren also descend from KREBS. When I read aloud (see p. 1 of will following) that the youngest child of the first marriage, named Marie, had married a man named GARDINIJO, Mr BENDERNAGEL objected, saying that it was her ancestress, Margarite, who contracted that marriage; moreover, the man's name is GRADENIGO, not GARDINIJO!! Mrs. BENDERNAGEL went even further. She had with her the coat of arms of this Venetian nobleman and proof of the said marriage.

This accidental but fortunate meeting made me re-evaluate the entire document. It is interesting to note the last line which acknowledges two 'borradas' but there are no erasures or places where words were struck out. After two hundred years, nobody will ever know which part would have been invalidated, but I strongly suspect that the 'de Bai-' after the name of his oldest child, and the correction of the wife of GRADENIGO may have been them. Further more, when he tells how many Pesos he has given his children by the first marriage, he does note that Margarita is the wife of GRADENIGO and says nothing about Maria. Could this daughter have been Margarita Maria?



Ordinarily, I would have been well impressed with the repeated expressions of faith loyalty to his Church, had I not read (Villere, N. O. Genesis, Vol. VI, No. 22, Marc 1967, p. 117) that in 1764 he had taken the Oath of Allegiance to the British King George III at Mobile. This is the same oath, acknowledging the British King as head of the Catholic Church instead of the Pope; the same oath that the Acadiens refused to take the year before and were banished with the loss of all their worldly goods. But I feel sure that KREBS put his tongue in his cheek when he took the oath, and attribute his desire to make his will in New Orleans and to be buried there to his fear that the British would discover his loyalty to the Roman Church and even after his death deprive his heirs of their property. Note, too, that he asserts that both of his marriages were contracted under the 'laws of Paris', not of France.

Wouldn't you love to have been present? He describes himself as a native of the 'Diocese of Treves' not of 'Lorraine'. But, we know that in blood and mother-tongue he was German. GARIC, the Notary, was a Frenchman, and had been a Royal French Notary until the Spanish took over. Here we have a very sick German, 62 years old, who had spent most of his adult life as a French subject, in a recently ceded Spanish province but a citizen of a recently captured British colony, trying to dictate a complicated will in Spanish. Can you not excuse the errors?

There are many other things worthy of note. KREBS spells his second wife's name as Marianne CHAUVIN, but you will see on the following baptismal records that she spelled her own name Marie Anne CHAUVAIN. He also calls her 'alias' Joyeuse. The use of the word 'alias' intrigues me, and I much prefer it to the French word 'dit' so often used. This supports the belief that many of the Louisiana colonists had not in fact received titles of nobility in a formal manner, but simply arrogated to themselves additional surnames, which, in many cases, were used instead of their real original surnames, which latter disappeared.

In closing, let me attach behind the will, which follows, the 1756 baptismal record from the St. Louis Cathedral of his son, Raphael, born that same year, which indicates the father stated his age correctly in the will. Here you have the interesting signatures of KREBS his second wife and as a witness another of my ancestors, MAXENT. It was destined that 118 years would pass before their descendents, my parents, would marry.

I also attach three consecutive baptismal records, all three ceremonies performed on the same day, September 16, 1776, just 5 days before his will. This bears out my belief that it was probably difficult, if not impossible, to practice the Roman religion in British West Florida from 1764 until GALVEZ retook the Floridas in 1780, four years after KREBS died.

THE LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT
OF

EXECUTED IN SPANISH BEFORE JUAN BAUTISTA GARIC, NOTRARY PUBLIC, AT NEW ORLEANS, PROVINCE OF LOUISIANA, SEPTEMBER 21, 1776.

In the name of God our Lord and of the Most Holy Virgin, his Blessed Mother, advocate of all sinners, conceived without stain or shadow of original sin from the first instant of her most pure and natural being:

Let it be known by this public testamentary writing, last and voluntary will, that I, HUGO ERNESTUS KREBS, a resident of (the province of) Mobile, but presently in this city, a native of Neumagen, Archbishopric of Treves, legitimate and natural son of the late Juan KREBS and of Anna Charite FRITZ, husband and wife; being infirm because of bodily illness; fearful of death, which is natural; hoping for divine clemency; with my free judgement, understanding and will, recollection and memory, and in possession of my faculties and senses, which is apparent to the undersigned witnesses and Notary (that I) undoubtedly am able to dispose of my goods and to order my last testament, of which, by this instrument, I give faith.

I firmly believe in the most holy mystery of the Most Blessed Trinity, Father, Son and Holy Spirit - three persons distinct but only one God; I confess our Holy Mother, the Roman Catholic Church, in which I humbly believe, although an unworthy son, in the belief of which (Church) I have lived, profess that I will continue to live and die, wishing to save my soul I prescribe my testament in the following form:

First, I order and commend my soul to God our Lord, who created it and redeemed it with the inestimable price of his Blood; imploring of His Divine Majesty that He take it with Him to His Glory, for which it was created. And I bequeath my body to the earth from which it was formed.

Item: I order that when it shall be the will of God our Lord to take me from this life my body shall be interred in the hallowed ground of this city, and I leave my funeral arrangements to the disposition of those named in this testament.

Item: I declare that I have contracted two matrimonies according to the rites of the Holy Mother Church. The first with Maria Simon LAPOINTE, deceased, from which marriage I had and still have (the following) legitimate and natural children:

Joseph de Bai, aged 33
Pedro, aged 30
Francisco, aged 32
Augustin, aged 29
Maria Joseph Narbona, aged 28
Margarita, aged 27*

and another named Maria GARDINIJO, aged 26*

*The spelling is GRADENIGO, and he was the husband of Margarita; see "Foreword".

And the second marriage was contracted with Marianna CHAUVIN, alias Joyeuse, and from this marriage we have the following children:

Hugo, aged 20 years
Raphael, aged 19 years
Theresa, aged 16 years
Anna Charite, aged 14 years
Bazilio, aged 12 years
Maria Roza, aged 10 years
Cecilia, aged 9 years

Item: I declare that before contracting the second marriage I had an inventory taken of all the goods that remained at the death of my first wife, including appreciation in value, which amounted to 9,000 Pounds, one-half of which belonged to me and the other half to my children of the said marriage as heirs of their mother, and by agreement reached before the Justice of Mobile I consented to give to each one of my said first children 200 Pesos. I have given to:

Francisco 150 Pesos; to
Joseph the same amount; to
Augustin the same; to
Pedro another 150 Pesos;

so that these do not have to receive on account of their mother but another 100 Pesos each, which amounts shall be paid out of my succession.

I also declare that no accounting has been made of the portion which belongs to Maria Josepha NARBONA, she having been given nothing.

I also declare that I have paid to Margarita, wife of GARDINIJO, the portion above-mentioned (to the sons) and an additional 100 Pesos should be accounted for out of the corpus of my estate at my death.

Item. I declare that the second marriage which I contracted with Marianna CHAUVIN was, as the first one, contracted under the laws and customs of Paris; and that Dona Marianna CHAUVIN brought as her dowry 100 Pesos in conformity with our marriage contract, and that afterwards I received 240 Pesos which she received as her inheritance from her mother, totalling the sum of 340 Pesos in accordance with the terms of the said marriage contract, of all of which one-third belongs to the community. Consequently, my said wife shall not take but 226 Pesos, 1 1/2 Reales before the partition. She will also have to take 300 Pesos which are assured for the Vicar and 100 Pesos for the principle; all of which is contained in said marriage contract.

The balance of my goods shall be divided in two equal parts, one for my said wife and the other for my children; my wife acting as trustee, pending the final partition, for the children of my first marriage. Besides that which belongs to my present wife, she will also have to take 900 Pesos accrued during this marriage of the half which belongs to me out of the first inventory and these present accounts. The balance shall be divided in two equal halves, one for all my children and the other for my wife. And to the part that belongs to the children shall be added the 900 Pesos that shall be procured out of the corpus of my estate. Then the total shall be divided among all my children of the first and second marriages and partitioned among them in equal parts; thus discharging my conscience and in compliance with the laws under which we have contracted matrimony and to which we have subscribed.

Item: To the extent that my children of my aforementioned second marriage are minors, twenty-five years of age, and for this reason are incapable of administering their estates, in case of their death, I name and appoint as Curator M. CHASTAN, the Major, because of the confidence I have in him, and believing that he will take care of this charge and for this purpose I give to him all the power that I possess and which he may need under the Royal laws.

Item. In all matters that it may be necessary to administer this, my testament, I name and elect my wife, Mariana CHAUVIN, giving her all the power necessary and that may be required.

Item: I desire, and it is my wish, that all my debts be paid, not only those that are recorded by public writings, but all others that are debts in conscience. And of the remaining goods, rights and actions which belong to me and can be enforced I name as my legitimate and universal heirs my aforementioned children of my first and second marriages so that they may have and inherit equally with the blessing of God, and mine.

This is my last will and testament, which I wish defended and executed. I hope for the mercy of God our Lord and that he will take me to himself. And moreover, I hereby revoke and annul any and all wills and codicils that I may have heretofore made, by word of mouth or in any other manner; so that faith may be had in this (will) which I now sign.

Signed in the City of New Orleans, where I am ill, this the twenty-first day of September, Seventeen Hundred and Seventy-six, the witnesses being Don Joseph Adrien de la PLAZA, Don Luis LIOTEAU and Don Antonio REBOUL, inhabitants of this City, present, and I will sign this document which I understand and sign.

that a Mobilian and his wife were visiting relatives in France, and there the husband died. Under the French law the deceased had to be buried there, as the body could not be taken out of the country for a certain number of years. The widow sailed for home not long after her bereavement, taking passage on a wine vessel. On the arrival of the vessel, Mr. Pastel, the importer of the cargo, delivered to the undertaker a cask of wine that the undertaker had ordered shipped for him. A few days thereafter the burial of the deceased gentleman took place with all due ceremony, and his grave is in the Old Cemetery to this day. Not until after the death of the widow did the story come out that the remains had been secretly brought from France, pickled in a cask of good French wine.

THOS. S. JAMES, ARCHITECT

An interesting character in the old day was Thomas S. James, who left monuments to himself all about the city in the handsome public and private edifices erected by him. In a short history of the Government Street Presbyterian church the late Alfred R. Murray wrote of the construction, saying, "plans and estimates by Thomas S. James, who was a resident of Mobile for many years and was the architect of several other prominent buildings, among which is Barton Academy."

Thos. S. James

Mr James was architect of the Southern Market; also of the branch bank on the northwest corner of Royal and St. Francis streets; of the Odd Fellows Hall, now the house of Adam Glass & Company, Inc.; the stately residences of James Battle and Dr. George H. Ketchum, on Government street, of Judge John Bragg, on Spring Hill avenue, of C. K. Foote, northeast St. Louis and Conception.

Mr. James' activities were not limited to this locality. He did much work for New Orleans, Jackson, Natchez and in the plantation region; and about half his time was spent away from home, attending to this business.

THE KREBS FAMILY

Since I wrote about the Old Library, in an article printed July 1, 1928, the owners of the ancient and picturesque relic have seen fit to pull it down, and allow a big bill-board to be erected in its place, thus depriving my article of its interesting basis. It is of no use to print now a long story of a building that has completely vanished from the eyes of man, but I cannot afford to lose, and hardly can my readers afford to lose, what I found to say about the occupants of that house, the distinguished and honorable Krebs family.

The Krebs' Home

Baron Franz von Krebs was born in Castle Cachem, whose towers rise above the gently flowing waters of the Mosel river in the Rhine province of Germany. What persuaded him to leave his ancestral home and become a pioneer in America is not disclosed, but in 1730 he took ship and arrived eventually in. Mobile, which from that time on was his home or chief residence, though he lived in Pascagoula also, where he owned and operated the first cotton gin of which there is any local record. See Colonial Mobile, page 256.

The baron dropped his title and the "von" into the ocean as he came over, and became known as Sieur Francis Krebs. He married a daughter of Joseph Simon de la Pointe and Jeanne Puluot of Canada, his wife. From this union there were three sons: Francis, Pierre and Hugo, and one daughter, Marie Josephine Krebs.

Francis Krebs married Marie Louise de Belle Isle, daughter of Moreau Augustine de Belle Isle and Marie Louise de Guilorie de l'Isle a Guillory, his wife. (What wonderfully high-sounding names they had!)*

Pierre Krebs married Aline Peteet, of Pascagoula, and it is said that from that marriage are descended the Sandses and Rapiers of Mobile.

Hugo Krebs married Marie de Josieuse, of New Orleans.

Marie Josephine Krebs was married to Captain Antoine Narbona, mentioned as belonging to the French Navy. Their daughter Ana (also spelled "Anna") Narbona, became the wife of Sig. Don Enrique Grimarest, the most distinguished figure in the whole ghostly company; for in the Archives of the Indies at Seville is a copy of a letter signed by Don Bernardo de Galvez, the governor of Louisiana, proposing to the king of Spain that Don Enrique, captain in the regiment of Navarre, be made governor of Mobile. The date of this document is May 26, 1781. There are in the same archives two other papers relating to Grimarest. One announces his promotion to be lieutenant-colonel for "distinguished merits contracted at the capture of Mobile," and the other is the royal license granted Grimarest to marry Dona Ana Narbona.

Hamilton's Colonial Mobile registers Grimarest's title as "Political and Military Governor of the Town of Mobile and its District." The town is sometimes called in the Spanish documents "Plaza de la Movila," says Hamilton. It appears that Grimarest began his governorship in 1783. It was in that year, on December 26, that he lost his wife, Ana, and the burial took place in the public cemetery, possibly the one just west of Jackson street.

*Little Dauphin island, formerly called Isle a Gillori.—"Colonial Mobile," p. 136.

A descendent of Hugo Krebs and Marie de Josieuse, but whether immediate or not is not stated, was Joseph Krebs, who, as related in the family records, married William Fisher's daughter,* and it was Joseph Krebs' daughter, Corinne Krebs, who was married in great state, July 15, 1850, to Henry G. Humphries, in her father's house, Conti and Hamilton streets.

Henry G. Humphries was a successful cotton man here before the war. He was a member of the secession convention in Montgomery, from Mobile county in 1861; provost marshal at Mobile, 1862-3; and enrolling officer, 1864-5. He had a long lineage, beginning with Sir John Humphries, a native of Dorsetshire, England, who was a member of the illustrious house of Bohun. Sir John's wife was Lady Lucy, daughter of Baron Clinton, eleventh earl of Lincoln. Sir John was deputy-governor of Massachusetts. A descendent, John J. Humphries, moved to Columbus, Mississippi, and there engaged largely in cotton planting. His son, Dr. W. N. Humphries, was a trustee for the Mississippi College for Women, and his son, Henry G., settled in Mobile in 1819.

Mr. Humphries built the handsome house now standing at the southwest corner of St. Louis and Conception streets, and it was there his daughter, Marie, became the wife of the Hon. Marion Gaines of Austin, Texas. It is now the home of Mrs. Nina Hood Boykin, a daughter of the late O. J. Hood.

It may be mentioned that the old Krebs house, northwest Conti and Hamilton streets, lately removed, was occupied in 1865 by Louis D. Krebs; in 1866, by Mrs. M. Krebs; in 1878, by L. D. Krebs, and in 1886, by Miss Florida B. Krebs, by whom, in 1901, it was sold to the Mobile Library Association. (See vignette, head of this article).

A few stray ends may now be knotted up and the work will be as complete as the material at command permits it to be. There is a note about Chevalier de Belle Isle, whose lovely daughter Sieur Francis or Francois Krebs married. The chevalier arrived in these parts June 4, 1721, on the good ship Portefaix from France, along with DeGuillorie and DeJosieuse, whose names play some part in this narrative, and Dubas, Senac, Petat and Vivia, whose names do not. The archives in Paris record a grant under the charter of the Western Company September 7, 1717, to Count M. A. de Belle Isle, chevalier at the court of Louis of France and general of the marine in Louisiana (in 1730). Belle Isle appears to have come over to occupy his grant and grow up with the country. * * * *

ADDIN LEWIS, FIRST MAYOR

The first mayor of Mobile was Addin Lewis, and he was the leading man of his day: first mayor, first postmaster, first banker, and came close to being the first collector of customs for the port of Mobile. Nominally, he was the third collector, but both the first, Gen. Edmund P. Gaines, and the second, Dennison Darling, his successor when Gaines resigned in 1811, served their time at Fort Stoddert, the Spanish being in possession of Mobile. Col. George S. Gaines' Reminiscenses state that Darling continued until after the office was moved to Mobile; but it is seen that Lewis' appointment antedated the American occupation of this city.

Addin Lewis was a Connecticut man, born in what is now Walcott, in that state, the son of Captain Nathaniel and Sarah Gridly Lewis, the date of his birth being January 4, 1780. He was graduated, B.A., at Yale, in 1803, and, as was the custom of young men of the time, began life as a teacher, remaining for some time as tutor in the University of Georgia, at Athens. So great was the reputation gained by him in this position that he was appointed, March 16, 1811, without solicitation, to the office of collector of customs at the port of Mobile, as aforesaid. The office offered small compensation, but the position of chief representative of the United States government had attraction for him, opening, as it did, the opportunity for the exercise and development of his powers.

Mr. Lewis was postmaster, 1818-24. As collector in 1818 he assisted in giving official welcome to the members of the Vine and Olive colony when they arrived that year in Mobile, on their way to the locality near Demopolis, where they expected to make themselves a new home. It was in that year the Bank of Mobile was chartered, the third banking institution in the state, the first being in Huntsville and the second in St. Stephens, and Mr. Lewis was selected as its first president. The year following, Mobile, which had had a town government dating from January 20, 1814, obtained a city charter, dated December 19, and early in 1820 a corporate government was organized, with Addin Lewis as mayor. Upon this government devolved the duty of constructing the communal machinery and the services of Mr. Lewis proved of great value. He was already rated as one of Mobile's most useful and substantial citizens. He served two terms and then, after one interval, the part of a term, resigning April 19, 1823.

Unfortunately, what with his labors or the effect of the climate, his health began to fail. He sought his native state each summer for restoration, spending only his winters in the south; but was forced in 1827 to retire from active life. He lived a considerable time thereafter in New Haven, dying April 7, 1842, in his sixty-third year. He bequeathed $10,000 to the public schools of Wolcott, $15,000 to the town of Southington for the building and maintenance of an academy, and $5,000 to the Yale

In 1720 Admiral de La Pointe was appointed by the French Government to build a fort on Lake Catahoula (now Krebs Lake) for a defense against the Indians. In 1721 he returned to settle in Pascagoula. Vice Admiral Du Mont was appointed to succeed him. The concession of Mississippi was made in 1721 to Madame the Duchess de Chaumont, who was Admiral de La Pointe's sister. She was a widow.

There came to Missippi with Madame de Chaumont her daughter, a widow Mrs. de la Prade and several French families, amongst whom were Ranserve, Juellory, Senac, Jants, Penibet, Durez, Laurendine, Dubac Fayard, Ladenier, Petat and Vivis. Petit Baron Hugue Von Krebs arrived shortly after. He was from Neumagen, on the Mosel, Germany. He was an officer and came to Pascagoula from Canada in 1722. He married Marie Simone de la Pointe, the Admiral's daughter. They had seven children, Hugue, Indwig, Joseph Pierre, Marie and Innocente. Marie Simone, his wife, was the first of the French settlers to die. She was buried in the cemetary which was established by the settlers on Lake Krebs and is still called Krebs Cemetery. Hugue Krebs married a second time to Marie de Joyeuse of New Orleans. They had five children: Pierre, Raphael, Francois, Augustin and Cecile. Francois and Augustin died young. Raphael married in Louisiana and lived there. Pierre married Miss Aline Petet. PETIT PETIT They had eight children: Nazile, Hilaire, Antonna, Paul, Amie, (Mrs. Latady, who lived in Mobile), Hypolite (who married Mr. Fitz-Gerald), Madelen, who remained single, and Agnes, who married Pierre Senac at the age of thirteen and lived in Mobile, but all the children were born in Pascagoula. This is doubtful. The marriage took place in [illegible] [illegible] all official records [illegible]

In 1742 Vice Admiral Du Pont married Madame de Laprade. Their daughter Marie Louise married Joseph Krebs, son of Hugue Krebs. They had three sons, Antoine, who died at the age of 20, Joseph ~~who lived~~ in Mobile, and René. Joseph married twice. He had two sons by his first wife, who was a widow- Madame Josephine Elinora Aldinourgh nee Larlo, who had nee daughter, Carmelite. His two sons were Opust and Sidcine. By his second marriage with William Fisher's daughter he had three sons, Dickson, William and Rene and two daughters, Corinne and Florida. Rene married Marie DuPont and had eight children; Edmond, Zulime, Louise, Cecile, Marcelete, Virginia, Joseph and Aime. Marcelete is still living and is Mrs. J. P. Sarrazin and lives in New Orleans. They had three daughters, Cecile, Agnes and Josephine. Josephine married Delmas and had eight children, three sons John, Carlos and Armant, and five daughters, Camile Lisa, Henriette, Laura, Hermina, and Celeste, who is Mrs. Randall and is still living in New Orleans. Agnes died young.

" Mobile, two hundred years ago, was under the Fleur de Lys, and was known as Fort Louis de la Mobile, capital of the French territory, in that part of America.

The French province of Louisiana was under control of the Western Company of France.

Important events occured in Mobile at that time, chiefly the arrival of a fleet, from France, sent by Duchess de Chaumont, for the colonization of Louisiana, and destined for her concession at Pascagoula.

In 1711 the concession of Pascagoula, to Madame de Chaumont, was made under the corporation - " The Western Company" , and was registered by parliament, in Paris, on the 7th of September, 1717.

In 1718 Colonel Joseph de la Pointe was commissioned by the French government to build a fort on Lake 2 Catahoula (now Ereba Lake), to protect the concession of Pascagoula to Madame de Chaumont.

In 1697 Joseph de la Pointe, accompied La Savole and De Iberville, explorers and founders of the Mississippi French Colonial Company of Louisiana.

In January 1721, the frigate Charles (a war vessel), under commandate Joseph de la Pointe, and flying the Fleur de Lys, dropped anchor in the Bay of Mobile, at Fort Louis de la Mobile. Her Passengers included Madame, Duchess de Chaumont; her daughter, Baroness de la Prode; Count Captain Seumard de Bellille; Sieur Gregris de Guillory and his wife, Jeanne de Guillory; and the Dubas', Semane, Petats and Vivias.

In the year of 1721 at Fort Louis de la Mobile, there arrived, the ships La Volga, Balone, La Girande, La Meride, La Portefaix. La Africaine (a war vessel), for ,adame de Chaumont.

December 1721, Madame de Chaumont returned to France.

September 15, 1721, Baroness de la Prode married in the French fort at Pascagoula, under the French flag the Fluer de Lys, Captain Seynard de Bellille, of the Royal Marines of Louisiana.

Baroness de la Brode, the daughter of Madame de Chaumont - the colonist - had a daughter, Marie Louise, who married Francis Krebs, the so of Baron von Krebs and Marie Josephine de la Pointe.

Madame Duchess de Chaumont was lady-inwaiting to Princess Henrietta, at the court of Louis XIV, at Fontainebleau palace. She was the daughter of Comte General Gramount, of the French army and lady Elizabeth Hamiliton of England, and a renowned beauty at the court of Charles the Second.

Madame de Chaumont (Lady Marie Louise Montemart), daughter of Comte and Countess de Gramount, of France, married Le Chevalier de Chaumont, who was Duke de Crequin, Chevalier de St. Louis, et de la Legion d'Honneur, of France.

The late Corinne Krebs Humphries, widow of Major Henry Gordon Humphries, and her late sister, Miss Florida Krebs, came from this line of personages, through their late father, Joseph Krebs, of Mobile. The descendants of this distinguished line are three splendid young persons, namely; Mrs Marvin Sproles, of Mobile, daughter of Chas. W. Humphries Jones, son of Mrs. Corinne A. Humphries (ex Jones), Mobile's "Daughter Under Five Flags".

Miss F. Marguerite Griffin, daughter of Mrs. F. Humphries Griffin, Mobile's " Daughter Under Five Flags ".

Miss Herminia Earnest
2100 St. Charles Ave. Apt. 9A
New Orleans, La. 70130

Dear Miss Earnest:

In response to your letter, I checked our genealogical records and was able to learn a few facts about Sieur Joseph de la Pointe, Admiral of Pienville 's fleet. He arrived in the Bay of Biloxi in 1710. His wife was Madame la Marquise Marie Louise de Belle Isle. His mother-in-law was Madame la Duchesse de Chaumont. His daughter, Marie Louise (also called Marie Jeanne at another point in the D. A. R. records), married Baron Hugh (or Hugue) von Krebs of the House of Husse (from Neumagen on the Meale, Germany). (They had four children: two sons and two daughters.) I could find no reference to his parents or to other children.

We appreciate so much your donation of Carnival items plus the xerox copies of French colonial documents and their translations, and we are happy to be of assistance to you. If we can help you again, please do not hesitate to write.

Yours sincerely,

Mary L. LeBlanc

EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT

Fetter's Monthly.

DEVOTED TO "DIXIE-LAND."

LOUISVILLE, KY., April 22, '92.

Mrs. Louis Frederic,
Scranton, Miss.-

Madame,

Having been informed that you were fully informed in regard to the history of the Krebs family and the old "Chateau Krebs" on the Pascagoula River, as well as with the traditions of the locality, would be very much obliged if you would give us the facts in the matter, as we wish to embody them in an article on the "Chateau Krebs" which will be published in the forthcoming (May) number of our magazine.

The late Mrs. Corinne Krebs Humphreys, of Mobile, Ala., and her sister, Miss Florid Krebs, stated some years ago that you knew more about the legends of the locality than any living person. We will be glad to compensate you for your trouble. We desire from you only the facts, as the article will be written by one of our editors.

We would be obliged if you would give us the truth on the following points:

Who was the Duchess de Chaumont? Where was she born and how did she get the grant from the French government? In what year did she get the grant and when did the colonists sail for America? Give the name of the ship and that of the port from which she sailed? Who was the commander of the expedition? Who was de la Pointe and whom did he marry? State what you know of him and his position. Who was Hugo Rixi Krebs?

Where was he born, who were his family and whom did he marry? What position did he hold in France and to Mme. Chaumont? What position did he hold in the colony and how did he get possession of the old place? Did Mme. Chaumont ever visit the old house? When did Krebs die and who were his children? Have the Krebs family always lived in the house?

What material is the house made of? and describe it as nearly as possible. Describe the bridal Chamber, the garden in front of the house, the peculiar orange tree and century plants. Also Krebs lake, how high the house is above it and what the foundation of the house is. Please give a description of the old graveyard, some of the old graves and any traditions you may know concerning it. What the tombs are made of and how old they are. Can you give the names of any distinguished people who have visited the place since it was built? What do you know of Admiral Farragut and his life at the Krebs house? Please give all you can about.

If there is a good photographer in Scranton will you ask him to take photos of the front, back and sides of the house, the garden in front and the graveyard, also the lake. We will, of course, pay for these. By answering the questions in order given you will find it easy to give the facts in the matter. We will publish a series about old Southern houses and every one to whom we have written has politely given us all the information in their power; and among them were some Louisiana Creoles. We are great admirers of the Creoles and are glad to know all we can of them. Awaiting your early answer and hoping that you will comply with our request, we are Madame,

Most respectfully yours,

Fetter & Shober

THE WILL OF JEAN BAPTISTE BAUDRAU DIT GRAVELINE

Submitted by: Brother Jerome Lepre, S.C.

Shortly before the summer of 1981, Mr. Darrell Helton of Washington, D.C. was searching in the National Archives for material on Jean Baptiste Baudrau for Mrs. Mary Louise Adkinson of Ocean Springs, Mississippi. To the delight of Baudrau buffs, he located several papers with reference to Jean Baptiste, who had originated in Canada and came to Biloxi, Mississippi, with d'Iberville in 1700. The will was written in 1750 when Baudrau was about seventy-nine years old. The will has been slightly retouched in the original translated French, so as to make it a bit more readable.

(Source: National Archives: Reference Division "D" - Miss. Item 126, Volume 203, pp. 473-74.)

WILL OF JEAN BAPTISTE BOUDREAUX DE GRAVELINE
SEPTEMBER 16, 1750

This sixteenth day of September, one thousand seven hundred and fifty, before the Royal Notary of the Province of Louisiana, dwelling in New Orleans, and in presence of the undersigned witnesses, personally appeared John Baptiste BOUDREAUX of Graveline, generally residing at a place called La Belle Fontaine at Old Beloxy. He has declared and said that he has come here expressly to arrange and finally adjust his affairs, temporal as well as spiritual. He appeared to us this day at nine o'clock in the morning, in good health, and enjoying sound mind and memory. He is of a very advanced age, and fearing to be overtaken by death in (paper worn out) remote from all assistance, he would wish to put in order a sufficient portion of his worldly affairs, whilst he is of sound mind. He has said and declared to us that he was born in Montreal, Canada, and that he came to this colony with Mr. Iberville. He says that he believes that out of a hundred who came with him, he is the only living person. He states that he had carnal communication with a squaw of the Indian Nation (a daughter of a great chief) and had a son, who is about thirty years of age at the present time. It is this consideration which compels him to marry the said squaw (or Indian woman) in presence of our Mother, the Roman Catholic and Apostolic holy church, acting the part of a true Christian with the intention of doing good to his son (paper torn), named John BOUDREAUX. The severe language and bad conduct which his son has shown him puts him under the necessity of disinheriting him. The son attempted to take his life many times by putting his fist upon his father's throat, threatening to kill him, along with other threats, calling him an old "Buggar," and daily seeking his destruction. His whole aim is tending to his father's ruin, as he has been doing to the present time. He has rendered his father considerable injury, being vexed to see him yet on this earth to be able to enjoy and consume the little property which remains out of his holdings barely saved. He says that he has a god-son named John Baptiste Brasillier, son of Jean Baptiste Brasillier, assisting him in all his necessities and aiding him in everything, without whom he would undergo a miserable death. He has no other means than to stay with him, his god-son, for his unfortunate son never comes to his house but to pillage and threaten his life, compelling him this day (not wishing to place his unfortunate son in the hands of justice, as he could do) to abjure him as his son. He wishes and desires that the said Brasillier, Jr., his god-son be and remain his general legatee and enjoy generally all his property, that he may have either in this colony or elsewhere. For sufficient reasons, the said John BEAUDREAUX (BOUDREAUX) is to be looked upon as a miserable wretch, who does not deserve all the property that has been accumulated for him since he came into the world; no more than his wife, who has ill treated him and does daily misuse him when she has an opportunity of doing so. Both of them are unnatural and without any sentiment of Christianity. This instrument breaks and annuls all other wills and codicils that he may have made prior to this one, wishing and desiring that the present one only remain in force notwithstanding the want of formality, which might be required in regard to the disinheritance of the said John BEAUDREAUX. He wishes for this reason that the present instrument be, in this place, a declaration in justice (missing words) to the repugnance he feels in letting the said son perish, leaving moreover to God the Father Almighty to punish him according to his merits. If Divine Providence does not (words missing), his conscience beseeching the Lord to be pleased to convert him, without which he will despair of his coming to a good end; that as he has before made some gifts in writing, he declares them null and void, that it was an act of weakness on his part to sign deeds of gift. He desires that the present instrument only remain to be executed according to its form and tenor, not regarding from henceforth the said John BOUDREAUX, any more than his wife and their children, as but a degenerate race, having never merited any of the attentions which he paid to them. Their names up to the present day only tended to his total ruin by the frequent pillage they made of his house and from which they never profited. This was occasioned by their great dissipation, especially BEAUDREAUX's, who is confirmed in every vice, in all sorts of debauchery, which is well known, unfortunately, by the whole colony. Graveline begs also of his general legatee, in whose favor he bequeaths his property at his decease, to pray to God for the repose of his soul, which he leaves to His prudence and generosity. He knows his goodness, which is all he has said and repeated after several amendments, without wishing to increase or diminish anything, it being his last will and testament.

Lenormant, sheriff, witness, here dwelling, has read this paper and understood that it is BOUDREAUX's last will, without making any alteration in it.

He has signed it as well as BEAUDREAUX.

Chantalou, Lenormant and the undersigned Notary.

that a Mobilian and his wife were visiting relatives in France, and there the husband died. Under the French law the deceased had to be buried there, as the body could not be taken out of the country for a certain number of years. The widow sailed for home not long after her bereavement, taking passage on a wine vessel. On the arrival of the vessel, Mr. Pastel, the importer of the cargo, delivered to the undertaker a cask of wine that the undertaker had ordered shipped for him. A few days thereafter the burial of the deceased gentleman took place with all due ceremony, and his grave is in the Old Cemetery to this day. Not until after the death of the widow did the story come out that the remains had been secretly brought from France, pickled in a cask of good French wine.

THOS. S. JAMES, ARCHITECT

An interesting character in the old day was Thomas S. James, who left monuments to himself all about the city in the handsome public and private edifices erected by him. In a short history of the Government Street Presbyterian church the late Alfred R. Murray wrote of the construction, saying, "plans and estimates by Thomas S. James, who was a resident of Mobile for many years and was the architect of several other prominent buildings, among which is Barton Academy."

Thos. S. James

Mr James was architect of the Southern Market; also of the branch bank on the northwest corner of Royal and St. Francis streets; of the Odd Fellows Hall, now the house of Adam Glass & Company, Inc.; the stately residences of James Battle and Dr. George H. Ketchum, on Government street, of Judge John Bragg, on Spring Hill avenue, of C. K. Foote, northeast St. Louis and Conception.

Mr. James' activities were not limited to this locality. He did much work for New Orleans, Jackson, Natchez and in the plantation region; and about half his time was spent away from home, attending to this business.

THE KREBS FAMILY

Since I wrote about the Old Library, in an article printed July 1, 1928, the owners of the ancient and picturesque relic have seen fit to pull it down, and allow a big bill-board to be erected in its place, thus depriving my article of its interesting basis. It is of no use to print now a long story of a building that has completely vanished from the eyes of man, but I cannot afford to lose, and hardly can my readers afford to lose, what I found to say about the occupants of that house, the distinguished and honorable Krebs family.

The Krebs' Home

Baron Franz von Krebs was born in Castle Cachem, whose towers rise above the gently flowing waters of the Mosel river in the Rhine province of Germany. What persuaded him to leave his ancestral home and become a pioneer in America is not disclosed, but in 1730 he took ship and arrived eventually in Mobile, which from that time on was his home or chief residence, though he lived in Pascagoula also, where he owned and operated the first cotton gin of which there is any local record. See Colonial Mobile, page 256.

The baron dropped his title and the "von" into the ocean as he came over, and became known as Sieur Francis Krebs. He married a daughter of Joseph Simon de la Pointe and Jeanne Puluot of Canada, his wife. From this union there were three sons: Francis, Pierre and Hugo, and one daughter, Marie Josephine Krebs.

Francis Krebs married Marie Louise de Belle Isle, daughter of Moreau Augustine de Belle Isle and Marie Louise de Guilorie de l'Isle a Guillory, his wife. (What wonderfully high-sounding names they had!)*

Pierre Krebs married Aline Peteet, of Pascagoula, and it is said that from that marriage are descended the Sandses and Rapiers of Mobile.

Hugo Krebs married Marie de Josieuse, of New Orleans.

Marie Josephine Krebs was married to Captain Antoine Narbona, mentioned as belonging to the French Navy. Their daughter Ana (also spelled "Anna") Narbona, became the wife of Sig. Don Enrique Grimarest, the most distinguished figure in the whole ghostly company; for in the Archives of the Indies at Seville is a copy of a letter signed by Don Bernardo de Galvez, the governor of Louisiana, proposing to the king of Spain that Don Enrique, captain in the regiment of Navarre, be made governor of Mobile. The date of this document is May 26, 1781. There are in the same archives two other papers relating to Grimarest. One announces his promotion to be lieutenant-colonel for "distinguished merits contracted at the capture of Mobile," and the other is the royal license granted Grimarest to marry Dona Ana Narbona.

Hamilton's Colonial Mobile registers Grimarest's title as "Political and Military Governor of the Town of Mobile and its District." The town is sometimes called in the Spanish documents "Plaza de la Movila," says Hamilton. It appears that Grimarest began his governorship in 1783. It was in that year, on December 26, that he lost his wife, Ana, and the burial took place in the public cemetery, possibly the one just west of Jackson street.

A descendent of Hugo Krebs and Marie de Josieuse, but whether immediate or not is not stated, was Joseph Krebs, who, as related in the family records, married William Fisher's daughter,* and it was Joseph Krebs' daughter, Corinne Krebs, who was married in great state, July 15, 1850, to Henry G. Humphries, in her father's house, Conti and Hamilton streets.

Henry G. Humphries was a successful cotton man here before the war. He was a member of the secession convention in Montgomery, from Mobile county in 1861; provost marshal at Mobile, 1862-3; and enrolling officer, 1864-5. He had a long lineage, beginning with Sir John Humphries, a native of Dorsetshire, England, who was a member of the illustrious house of Bohun. Sir John's wife was Lady Lucy, daughter of Baron Clinton, eleventh earl of Lincoln. Sir John was deputy-governor of Massachusetts. A descendent, John J. Humphries, moved to Columbus, Mississippi, and there engaged largely in cotton planting. His son, Dr. W. N. Humphries, was a trustee for the Mississippi College for Women, and his son, Henry G., settled in Mobile in 1819.

Mr. Humphries built the handsome house now standing at the southwest corner of St. Louis and Conception streets, and it was there his daughter, Marie, became the wife of the Hon. Marion Gaines of Austin, Texas. It is now the home of Mrs. Nina Hood Boykin, a daughter of the late O. J. Hood.

It may be mentioned that the old Krebs house, northwest Conti and Hamilton streets, lately removed, was occupied in 1865 by Louis D. Krebs; in 1866, by Mrs. M. Krebs; in 1878, by L. D. Krebs, and in 1886, by Miss Florida B. Krebs, by whom, in 1901, it was sold to the Mobile Library Association. (See vignette, head of this article).

A few stray ends may now be knotted up and the work will be as complete as the material at command permits it to be. There is a note about Chevalier de Belle Isle, whose lovely daughter Sieur Francis or Francois Krebs married. The chevalier arrived in these parts June 4, 1721, on the good ship Portefaix from France, along with DeGuillorie and DeJosieuse, whose names play some part in this narrative, and Dubas, Senac, Petat and Vivia, whose names do not. The archives in Paris record a grant under the charter of the Western Company September 7, 1717, to Count M. A. de Belle Isle, chevalier at the court of Louis of France and general of the marine in Louisiana (in 1730). Belle Isle appears to have come over to occupy his grant and grow up with the country. * * * *

ADDIN LEWIS, FIRST MAYOR

The first mayor of Mobile was Addin Lewis, and he was the leading man of his day: first mayor, first postmaster, first banker, and came close to being the first collector of customs for the port of Mobile. Nominally, he was the third collector, but both the first, Gen. Edmund P. Gaines, and the second, Dennison Darling, his successor when Gaines resigned in 1811, served their time at Fort Stoddert, the Spanish being in possession of Mobile. Col. George S. Gaines' Reminiscenses state that Darling continued until after the office was moved to Mobile; but it is seen that Lewis' appointment antedated the American occupation of this city.

Addin Lewis was a Connecticut man, born in what is now Walcott, in that state, the son of Captain Nathaniel and Sarah Gridly Lewis, the date of his birth being January 4, 1780. He was graduated, B.A., at Yale, in 1803, and, as was the custom of young men of the time, began life as a teacher, remaining for some time as tutor in the University of Georgia, at Athens. So great was the reputation gained by him in this position that he was appointed, March 16, 1811, without solicitation, to the office of collector of customs at the port of Mobile, as aforesaid. The office offered small compensation, but the position of chief representative of the United States government had attraction for him, opening, as it did, the opportunity for the exercise and development of his powers.

Mr. Lewis was postmaster, 1818-24. As collector in 1818 he assisted in giving official welcome to the members of the Vine and Olive colony when they arrived that year in Mobile, on their way to the locality near Demopolis, where they expected to make themselves a new home. It was in that year the Bank of Mobile was chartered, the third banking institution in the state, the first being in Huntsville and the second in St. Stephens, and Mr. Lewis was selected as its first president. The year following, Mobile, which had had a town government dating from January 20, 1814, obtained a city charter, dated December 19, and early in 1820 a corporate government was organized, with Addin Lewis as mayor. Upon this government devolved the duty of constructing the communal machinery and the services of Mr. Lewis proved of great value. He was already rated as one of Mobile's most useful and substantial citizens. He served two terms and then, after one interval, the part of a term, resigning April 19, 1823.

Unfortunately, what with his labors or the effect of the climate, his health began to fail. He sought his native state each summer for restoration, spending only his winters in the south; but was forced in 1827 to retire from active life. He lived a considerable time thereafter in New Haven, dying April 7, 1842, in his sixty-third year. He bequeathed $10,000 to the public schools of Wolcott, $15,000 to the town of Southington for the building and maintenance of an academy, and $5,000 to the Yale

Antoine de la Motte Cadillac Governor of the Province of Louisiana, and John Baptiste Duclos E. Demontigny, Esqr. King's Counsellor and Commissary of Marine commanding the Province aforesaid.

Whereas by a representation to us made by Joseph Simon de la Pointe an inhabitant residing at Dauphin Island, he prays a grant to a certain tract of land which fronts on the Sea Shore, containing one league in width be it more or less, by one league in depth, running its course due North, bounded on the South by Fish River, ~~on the West by the Sea Shore fronting the Grand Bay~~, and on the East by its depth, for the purpose of placing a stock of cattle and to establish a plantation thereon.

Now therefore, in virtue of the powers conferred upon us by his Majesty the King, our Lord, we do hereby grant and confirm and by these presents have granted and confirmed with the above named Joseph la Pointe, the tract of land above described and designated, for himself his heirs and assigns, in order that he may enjoy, possess, sell, alienate or dispose of the said tract of land at his will and pleasure, as his lawful property acquired by legal right, on condition, that he will place and put on the said tract of land some cattle, and shall cultivate same two successive years; and he, the said Joseph la Pointe, in failing to comply with the conditions above stipulated, the land so granted shall fall back to the King's Domain, to be disposed of as if such grant was never made; subject however at all times to the payment of Royal dues, should (1 ends) any such be hereafter established or reserved in the Province of Louisiana. We moreover reserve for the use of his Majesty our Lord and in his behalf, the power and authority, to take on the said land, all and every kind and description of Timber which may be required for the constructions of Forts, Magazines and other publick works, which his Majesty now has or hereafter may order to execute; also such timber and other conveniences as may be necessary in repairing and careening Ships, as well as such part of the said land as it may become necessary to erect fortifications; on condition, that Cedar Place which is said to be near Fish River, shall not be included in the tract of land above granted, in all or any part thereof. In faith whereof we have signed these presents and ordered to be registered in the office of the Supreme Counsel of the Province aforesaid, within two months from this date. Done at Dauphin Island on the twelfth day of November in the year of our Lord, one thousand seven hundred and fifteen.

Explanation to examining genealogist

During the Depression in the 30's, the W.P.A. in New Orleans, La. hired a number of people who read, wrote and spoke the French language fluently to translate old French and Spanish documents found in the Archives of th Louisiana State (Library) Museum. (Now in the Cabildo Archives.)

The translations were typed on loose-leaf notepaper and put in black covers. In time these black note books were referred to, for want of a better name, as the "Black Books". People doing research in the Museum were often told to look in the row of "Black Books" to check whether or no the information they needed could be found in them

It was in one of these "Black Books" the succession of Sieur LaPorte was found, showing the deposition by Dr. Krebs regarding the treatment of the said LaPorte.

Succession of Sieur V. LaPorte

Deposition and certificate of Dr. Krebs regarding the health and death of Sieur V. LaPorte. I, the undersigned personally appeared before Attorney General of the King to make a deposition regarding the death of Mr V. LaPorte who was brought to my plantation at Pascagoula (Miss) on September 25 in a carriage by seven Englishmen for treatment. LaPorte was very sick and refused to answer questions or give any information regarding his past life. On the third day, while having his shirt changed I noticed a large contusion on his right arm. He told me it was a putrid Anthrox which he had in New Orleans. I certify he urinated and spat blood I opened the contusion and syringed it with wine and brandy.

Joseph Ducros, Attorney for Vacant Estates, petitions for permit to dispose of the effects of Laporte at judicial sale.

Petition to Monsieur Foucault, Commissioner of the Marine, Councillor of the Superior Council of New Orleans, acting Intendant of Louisiana:

Joseph Ducros, Attorney for Vacant Estates, humbly prays and represents: That Sieur Pierre Laporte, a native of Pau, in Bearn, died intestate at the residence of Sieur Kreps, inhabitant of the River of the Pascagoulas, who brought to this city the deceased's personal effects, which were deposited in the Registry; that, at the request of the Procureur General of the King, an inventory was made at once of the said effects, which were entrusted to the keeping of petitioner; that said effects consist of wearing apparel and various odds and ends, which could deteriorate and lose value if kept locked up too long.

Wherefore petitioner prays that it may please Your Excellency to allow petitioner to dispose of said effects by judicial sale, to be held before the Commissioner that it may please Your Excellency to appoint, and in the presence of the Procureur General of the King.

New Orleans, 1763. (Signed): Ducros.

Petition granted and sale ordered.

October 31, 1763.—Let the prayer of of the foregoing petition be granted and let the sale be held before Monsieur de La Lande, Councillor of the Superior Council, and in the presence of Monsieur the Procureur General of the King.

BARON FRANZ VON KREBS

Baron Franz von Krebs was born in Castle Cachem, whose towers rise above the gently flowing waters of the Mosel River in the Rhine province of Germany. What persuaded him to leave his ancestral home and become a pioneer in America is not disclosed, but in 1730 he took ship and arrived eventually in Mobile, which from that time on was his home or chief residence, though he lived in Pascagoula also, where he owned and operated the first cotton gin of which there is any local record.

The Baron dropped his title and the "von" into the ocean as he came over, and became known as Sieur Francis Krebs. He married a daughter of Joseph Simon de la Pointe and Jeanne Puluot of Canada; he had a son, Hugo, and one daughter, Marie Josephine Krebs.

Francis Krebs married Marie Louise de Belle Isle, daughter of Moreau Augustine de Belle Isle and Marie Louise de Guilorie de Isle a Guillory, his wife.

Pierre Krebs married Aline Peteet, of Pascagoula, and it is said that from that marriage are descended the Sandses and Bapiers of Mobile.

Hugo Krebs married Marie de Josieuse, of New Orleans.

Marie Josephine Krebs was married to Captain Antione Narbona, mentioned as belonging to the French Navy. Their daughter Ana (also spelled Anna) Narbona, became the wife of Sig. Don Enrique Grimarest, the most distinguished figure in the whole ghostly company; for in the Archives of the Indies at Seville is a copy of a letter signed by Don Bernardo de Galvez, the governor of Louisiana, proposing to the King of Spain that Don Enrique, Captain in the regiment of Navarre, be made governor of Mobile. The date of this document is May 26, 1781. There are in the same archives two other papers relating to Grimarest. One announces his promotion to be lieutenant-colonel for "distinguished merits contracted at the capture of Mobile, and the other is the royal license granted Grimarest to marry Dona Ana Narbona.

Hamilton's Colonial Mobile registers Grimarest's title as "Political and Military Governor of the Town of Mobile and its District." The town is sometimes called in the Spanish documents "Plaza de la Movila", says Hamilton. It appears that Grimarest began his governorship in 1783. It was in that year, on December 26, that he lost his wife Ana, and the burial took place in the public cemetery, possibly the one just west of Jackson Street.

A descendent of Hugo Krebs and Marie de Josieuse, but whether immediate or not is not stated, was Joseph Krebs, who, as related in the family records, married William Fisher's daughter, and it was Joseph Krebs' daughter, Corinne Krebs, who was married in great state, July 15, 1850, to Henry G. Humphries, in her father's house, Conti and Hamilton Streets.

Henry G. Humphries was a successful cotton man here before the war. He was a member of the secession convention in Montgomery, from Mobile County in 1861; provost marshal at Mobile, 1862-3; and enrolling officer, 1864-5. He had a long lineage, beginning with Sir John Humphries, a native of Dorsetshire, England, who was a member of the illustrious house of Bohun. Sir John's wife was Lady Luch, daughter of Baron Clinton, eleventh Earl of Lincoln. Sir John was deputy-governor of Massachusetts. A descendent, John J. Humphries, moved to Columbus, Mississippi, and there engaged largely in cotton planting. His son, Dr. W. N. Humphries, was a trustee for the Mississippi College for Women, and his son, Henry G., settled in Mobile in 1819.

Mr. Humphries built the handsome house now standing at the southwest corner of St. Louis and Conception streets, and it was there his daughter, Marie, became the wife of the Hon. Marion Gaines, of Austin, Texas. It is now the home of Mrs. Nina Hood Boykin, a daughter of the late O. J. Hood.

It may be mentioned tha t the old Krebs house, northwest Conti and Hamilton streets, lately removed, was occupied in 1865 by Louis D. Krebs; in 1866, by Mrs. M. Krebs; in 1878, by L. D. Krebs, and in 1886 by Miss Florida B. Krebs, by whom, in 1901, it was sold to the Mobile Library Association.

A few stray ends may now be knotted and the work will be as complete as the material at command permits it to be. There is a note about Chevalier de Belle Isle, whose daughter Sieur Francis or Francois Krebs married. The chevalier arrived in these parts June 4, 1721, on the good ship Portefaix from France, along with DeGuillorie and DeJosieuse, whose names play some part in this narrative, and Dubas, Senac, Petat and Vivia, whose names do not. The archives in Paris record a grant under the charter of the Western Company, September 7, 1717, to Count M. A. de Belle Isle, chevalier at the court of Louis of France and general of the marine in Louisiana (in 1730). Belle Isle appears to have come over to occupy his grant and grow up with the country.

The Old Spanish Fort is situated on Krebs Lake in the northern part of the city. The name "Old Spanish Fort", is a misnomer, as the fort was built, not by the Spanish, but by the French in 1721, under Sieur Joseph de la Pointe, as a protection against the Indians and Spanish troops.

De la Pointe was an admiral in Bienbille's fellt which was maintained on Chatahoula Lake, now Krebs Lake, to protect the royal concessions of the Duchess de Chaumont at Pascagoula. He arrived in the bay of Biloxi in 1710, and established a naval base on Dauphine Island, where he resided with his wife, Medame la Marquise Marie Louise de Belle. In 1721 de la Pointe was commissioned by the French government to erect the fort as a protection against incursions of the Indians.

In the same year, the Duchess de Chaumont, mother of de la Pointe's wife, sent a fleet of five vessels with colonists and slaves for the colonization of the French Province of Louisiana, of which the Gulf Coast section of Mississippi was then a part. During the period of Spanish domination of this section, the fort was taken by the Spanish government and was occupied both as a fort and as a chateau by de Grinarest, a lieutenant of the royal armies of Apain, and who afterwards married a granddaughter of de la Pointe. It is presumed that here is where the fort received the name of Spanish Fort, although it had been built by the French.

At this time, the lake on the shores of which the fort had been erected, was called Lake Chatahoula. Upon the arrival from German of Baron Hugh von Krebs, who became possessed of the land surrounding the lake, the name of the lake was changed to Krebs Lake and has been known ever since. The exact date of Hugh Krebs arrival is not known to this writer. He was married to Marie Jeanne, a daughter of de la Pointe, and was the progenitor of the long line of Krebs that have lived and reared families in this section for those two hundred odd years. Many descendants of Baron von Krebs are still living here and all over the South.

Old historical narratives relate that Baron Krebs lived on these shores like a feudal lord. He had a splendid plantation, had slaves by the hundreds, raised cotton, rice, and indigo and other products for export, and was surrounded by every luxury that a country gentlement of that day and time could have.

It is said that Baron von Krebs and his wife moved from Pascagoula to Mobile and erected a dwelling there which is still standing, a quaint old building at the northwest corner of Conti and Hamilton Streets. It was in this old colonial home that General Andrew Jackson is said to have been entertained while stationed at Mobile, by Joseph Krebs, a descendant of Baron Krebs.

The Old Spanish Fort is a comfortable, hospitable looking home. Few changes have been made in its appearance all these years, and it stands as a testimonial of the thoroughness with which houses were erected in those days, and to the durability of the material of which it was constructed. Many houses that were built after it have rotted and fallen apart, but its old cement walls and hewn timber beams may be as enduring as the everlasting hills. Many generations of the Krebs family have lived within its walls, hallowed by the memory of a romantic past, and until very recently it was used as a residence by descendants of that hardy pioneer Baron whose name is perpetuated by Krebs Lake and the name of a business throughfare of this city, Krebs Avenue.

of

HUGO ERNESTUS KREBS

Executed in Spanish before Juan Bautista Garic, Notary Public, at New Orleans, Province of Louisiana, September 21, 1776.

- o O o -

In the name of God our Lord and of the Most Holy Virgin, his Blessed Mother, advocate of all sinners, conceived without stain or shadow of original sin from the first instant of her most pure and natural being:

Let it be known by this public testamentary writing, last and voluntary will, that I, Hugo Ernestus Krebs, a resident of (the province of) Mobile but presently in this city, a native of Neumagen, Archbishopric of Treves, legitimate and natural son of the late Juan Krebs and of Anna Charite Fritz, husband and wife; being infirm because of bodily illness; fearful of death, which is natural; hoping for divine clemency; with my free judgement, understanding and will, recollection and memory, and in possession of my faculties and senses, which is apparent to the undersigned witnesses and Notary (that I) undoubtedly am able to dispose of my goods and to order my last testament, of which, by this instrument, I give faith.

I firmly believe in the most holy mystery of the Most Blessed Trinity, Father, Son and Holy Spirit - three persons distinct but only one God; I confess our Holy Mother, the Roman Catholic Church, in which I humbly believe, although an unworthy son, in the belief of which (Church) I have lived, profess that I will continue to live and die, wishing to save my soul I prescribe my testament in the following form:

First, I order and commend my soul to God our Lord, who created it and redeemed it with the inestimable price of his Blood; imploring of His Divine Majesty that He take it with Him to His Glory, for which it was created. And I bequeath my body to the earth from which it was formed.

Item: I order that when it shall be the will of God our Lord to take me from this life my body shall be interred in the hallowed ground of this city, and I leave my funeral arrangements to the disposition of those named in this testament.

Item: I declare that I have contracted two matrimonies according to the rites of the Holy Mother Church. The first with Maria Simon Lapointe, deceased, from which marriage I had and still have (the following) legitimate and natural children: — [illegible] de Edad = "of age"

Joseph de Bai, aged 33
Pedro, aged 30
Francisco, aged 32
Augustin, aged 29
Maria Josepha Narbona, aged 28
Margarita, aged 27 *
and another named Maria Gardinijo, aged 26 *

* The spelling is Gradonigo, and he was the husband of Margarita; see "Foreword".

1870

And the second marriage was contracted with Marianna Chauvin, alias Joyeuse, and from this marriage we have the following children:

Hugo, aged 20 years
Raphael, aged 19 years
Theresa, aged 16 years
Anna Charite, aged 14 years
Bazilio, aged 12 years
Maria Roza, aged 10 years
Cecilia, aged 9 years

Item: I declare that before contracting the second marriage I had an inventory taken of all the goods that remained at the death of my first wife, including appreciation in value, which amounted to 9,000 Pounds, one-half of which belonged to me and the other half to my children of the said marriage as heirs of their mother, and by agreement reached before the Justice of Mobile I consented to give to each one of my said first children 200 Pesos. I have given to:

Francisco 150 Pesos; to
Joseph the same amount; to
Augustin the same; to
Pedro another 150 Pesos;

so that these do not have to receive on account of their mother but another 100 Pesos each, which amounts shall be paid out of my succession.

I also declare that no accounting has been made of the portion which belongs to Maria Josepha Narbona, she having been given nothing.

I also declare that I have paid to Margarita, wife of Cardinijo, the portion above mentioned (to the sons) and an additional 100 Pesos should be accounted for out of the corpus of my estate at my death.

Item: I declare that the second marriage which I contracted with Marianna Chauvin was, as the first one, contracted under the laws and customs of Paris; and that Dona Marianna Chauvin brought as her dowry 100 Pesos in conformity with our marriage contract, and that afterwards I received 240 Pesos which she received as her inheritance from her mother, totalling the sum of 340 Pesos in accordance with the terms of the said marriage contract, of all of which one-third belongs to the community. Consequently, my said wife shall not take but 226 Pesos, 5½ Reales before the partition. She will also have to take 300 Pesos which are assured for the Vicar and 100 Pesos for the principle; all of which is contained in said marriage contract.

The balance of my goods shall be divided in two equal parts, one for my said wife and the other for my children; my wife acting as trustee, pending the final partition, for the children of my first marriage. Besides that which belongs to my present wife, she will also have to take 900 Pesos accrued during this marriage of the half which belongs to me out of the first inventory and these present accounts. The balance shall be divided in two equal halves, the one for all my children and the other for my wife. And to the part that belongs to my children shall be added the 900 Pesos that shall be procured out of the corpus of my estate. Then the total shall be divided among all my children of the first and second marriages and partitioned among them in equal parts; thus discharging my conscience and in compliance with the laws under which we have contracted matrimony and to which we have subscribed.

Item: To the extent that my children of my aforementioned second marriage are minors, under twenty-five years of age, and for this reason are incapable of administering their estates, or in the case of their death, I name and appoint as Curator M. Chastan, the Major, because of the confidence I have in him, and believing that he will take care of this charge and for this purpose I give to him all the power that I possess and which he may need under the Royal laws.

Item: In all matters that it may be necessary to administer this, my testament, I name and elect my wife, Mariana Chauvin, giving her all the power necessary and that may be required.

Item: I desire, and it is my wish, that all my debts be paid, not only those that are secured by public writings, but all others that are debts in conscience. And of the remaining of my goods, rights and actions which belong to me and can be enforced I name as my legitimate and universal heirs my aforementioned children of my first and second marriages so that they may have and inherit equally with the blessing of God, and mine.

This is my last will and testament, which I wish defended and executed. I hope for the mercy of God our Lord and that he will take me to himself. And moreover, I hereby revoke and annul any and all wills and codicils that I may have heretofore made, by word of mouth or in any other manner; so that faith may be had in this (will) which I now sign.

Signed in the City of New Orleans, where I am ill, this the twenty-first day of September, Seventeen Hundred and Seventy-six, the witnesses being Don Joseph-Adrien de la Plaza, Don Luis Lioteau and Don Antonio Reboul, inhabitants of this City, present, and I will sign this document which I understand and sign.

Sehr geehrte Miss Rapier!

Die Stadtverwaltung Trier hat Ihr Schreiben vom 16.1o.67 an uns zur Erledigung weitergeleitet. Wir haben festgestellt Die Eltern Ihres Vorfahren,Johann Kriebs und Anna Charitas Fritsch,heirateten am 14.2.17o2 in Neumagen. Leider ist der Heiratseintrag ohne Elternangaben. Die Taufe des Johann Kriebs kann ohnehin nicht mehr festgestellt werden,da die frühesten Kirchenbücher von Neumagen 1688 beginnen.Anna Charitas Fritsch ist als Tochter der Eheleute Reiner Fritsch und Catharina .... am 24.3.1682 in Trittenheim /Mosel geboren. Aus der Ehe Johann Kriebs- Anna Charitas Fritsch gingen die nachstehenden Kinder hervor:

22. 1.17o3	Susanna	15. 3.1712	Anna Maria Catharin
18. 3.17o5	Gertrud	15. 5.1713/4	Hugo Ernst
1. 5.17o6	Johann Reinard	27. 8.1716	Maria Anna
15. 5.17o8	Johann Gerlach	28. 2.1721	Johann Peter
18.1o.17o9	Catharina

Der Vater Johann Kriebs starb am 12.1o.1751 (Ohne Altersangabe Die Mutter starb erst am 4.3.1773. Angaben über Erziehung,Ausbildung,Militärzeit von Hugo Ernst sowie über den Beruf des Vaters sind aus den Promotionslisten der Universität Trier sowie aus den Kirchenbüchern Neumagen nicht zu ersehen. Vielleicht kann man annehmen,dass der Pate von Hugo Ernst, der Canonicus vom Stift St.Paulin in Trier, Hugo Ernst Braun etwas für die Erziehung und Ausbildung seines Patenkindes getan hat.

Dear Miss Rapier:

The City Administrator of Trier forwarded to us your letter of October 16, 1967. We confirm the following. The parents of your ancestors Johann Kriebs and Anna Charitas Fritsch were married on the 14th of February, 1702 in Neumagen. Regret to advise that the marriage license made no mention of the parents of the couple. The christening of Johann Kriebs can therefore not be confirmed because the earliest church books from Neumagen only started in 1688.

Anna Charitas Fritsch was born on the 24th of March in 1682 in Trittenheim/Mosel as the daughter of Reiner Fritsch and Catharina. Out of the marriage from Johann Kriebs and Anna Charitas Fritsch the following children were born:

22nd Jan.,1703 Susanna
18th Mar.,1705 Gertrude
1st of May,1706 Johann Reinard
15th of May,1708 Johann Gerlach
18th of Oct.,1709 Catharina
15th of Mar.,1712 Anna Maria Catharina
15th of May,1714 Hugo Ernst
27th of Aug.,1716 Maria Anna
28th of Feb.,1721 Johann Peter

The father, Johann Kriebs, died on October 12, 1751 (without record of his age). The mother died on March 4, 1773.

Specifics about the upbringing, the education and military service of Hugo Ernst, as also the profession of his father, cannot be found out of the promotion list from the University in Trier or out of the church books from Neumagen. Perhaps we can assume that the godfather of Hugo Ernst, Mr. Hugo Ernst Braun, the Canonicus from Stift St. Paulin in Trier, looked after the upbringing and education of his godchild.

Best regards,.

Dear Ruby,

Dear Krebs Relatives:
(and particularly those interested in establishing the correct line for Pierre and Louis Augustin Krebs) (Hope you can fit that into the "tree"

I am making this a joint letter to you all in order to avoid having to repeat the information outlined herein a number of times.

Thanks to the current issue of the New Orleans Genesis, the archivist of the St. Louis Cathedral, and to a letter sent me some months ago by Mr. Francis Latady of Birmingham, I am able to state with certainty that the two children listed as Ynes Crepa and Estefana Crepa in the Baptismal Records in that issue are in fact Agnes Krebs, who married Pierre Sonic, and Emerante (or Amie) Krebs, who married Mariano Latady. This can be done because of the actual birth records which are given in the Spanish record of baptism. The two children were brought to New Orleans by their parents, Pedro Crepa and Juana Durif, for baptism on the same day (about 1780--unfortunately the Xerox copy I have did not go back far enough for the date at the beginning of that day's baptisms) and the birth date of each child is given: Ynes was born Jan.12, 1778 and Estefana was born Jan. 15, 1780.

The latter date is important in establishing that Estefana was later known as Emerante, whom we know from all family records to have been Agnes Krebs' sister.

Mariano Latady, husband of Emerante Krebs, wrote down that very date, Jan. 15, 1780, as his wife's birth date, and Mr. Francis Latady, his great-grandson, wrote several months ago that he has that date written down in Mariano Latady's original handwriting.

Therefore, Emerante Krebs was the child of Pierre Krebs and Jeanne Durif, born 1-15-1780, and Agnes Krebs was the Ynes (Spanish for Agnes) born two years earlier, 1-12-1778, also the child of Pierre Krebs and Jeanne Durif.

Translated, the entry from Baptismal Book 1 (Entry 544) 1777-1786, reads as follows:

Item, the same day, I baptised solemnly Ynes, born the 12 of Jan. 1778 and Estefana, born the 15 of Jan. 1780, legitimate daughters of Pedro Crepa and Juana Durif, his wife. Godparents of the first, Augustin Crepa and Juana Durif, and of the second, Pedro Crepa and Juana Crepa. --

The next entry, #545, translated: Item, the same day I solemnly baptised Madalena, born the 26 of October 1779, legitimate daughter of Augustin Crepa and Madalena Durif, his wife. Godparents, Pedro Crepa and Juana Durif, -

Also of interest is the preceding item, #543: Item, the same day I solemnly baptised Jose Crepa, born 15 September, 1779, legitimate son of Franco Crepa and Elena Moro, his wife. Godparents were(Sr?)Moro and Enfrancia Lami.

That child of Francis Krebs and Helene Monrau de Belleisle must have died young, as Francis is known to have left Louis Augustin's children as his heirs.

And just before that, #542, names Hugo Crepa (evidently Daniel Hugo) and Maria Anna Chauvin, as godparents for one of the Labat children.

Incidentally, the birth date for Agnes (Ynes) Krebs is verified closely by her tombstone record, for she died in 1848, and her age is given to be 71. I still have not found any Alline Petit, and unless Pierre Krebs married a second time before he died in 1810 and named her in his estate records, we will have to ascribe her to an erroneous tradition. Best wishes, and hope this will help complete the "tree." Sincerely your cousin,

Regina Kepler

To whom it may concern:

I would like to know if you have any information on my family.

They lived there around 1840-1850. My ggg grandfather, William C. Seaman was a clerk in the probate court. He died somewhere between 1849 & 1850 (he signed) Because I have a deed dated 1849 and a census 1850 and he doesn't show up. So between 10-22-1849 and 9-7-1850 he possibly died, or 3/24/1845 and 9/7/1850 he died. The last deed I have is dated 3/24/1845, the one dated 10/22/1849 is including my gg grandfather Plina (Pliny) Seaman.

The rest of my family:

be most appreciated.

My ggg grandfather owned ~~two~~ quite allot of land in Biloxi and in 1844 sub-divided certain areas to his children.

Please advise me of the charge when you find anything.

Thank you for any and all of your help.

Sincerely,

Old statues to grace halls of archives

By NELL BURKS
Special to the Press Register

Eight statuesque maidens, wearing the chiton, will greet visitors to the Mobile Municipal Archives at its new location to be dedicated at 4 p.m. Thursday.

Renamed the Charlotte and Samuel Eichold Building, the two-story brick building, 457 Church St., formerly was the Mobile Police Department Annex. Prior to that, it was the unemployment office for Mobile.

Dr. and Mrs. Eichold gave the funds to renovate the building. The archives formerly were located at the Brookley Complex.

Four of the maidens hold lamps of learning; one, the Roman goddess Ceres, holds a sheaf of grain in one hand and a cluster of olives or grapes in the other, and a sixth gestures with one hand outstretched. Two are positioned, one on each side of the door to the conference room, with their heads bowed and their arms folded modestly.

If they seem familiar, yet unfamiliar, and give the guest a feeling of eerie "deja vu," it is because they graced Bel Air Mall when it opened in the late 1960s, creating a beautiful decor.

Made of iron, they then were painted white and many thought them made of plaster.

Not so. The maidens were cast of iron at the "Founderies du Val D'Osne, 58 B.D. (for Boulevard) Voltaire, Paris," and two of these foundry labels are still attached. When they were in Bel Air Mall, one could still read, on additional attached pedestals, "Arrondissement" with a Roman numeral, an administrative subdivision of Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. Jay Altmayer, who acquired them from a New Orleans antique dealer for the Bel Air Mall Corp., with an additional three for themselves, believe they were created during the reign of Napoleon III.

History described his 19-year court as the "most glittering court in Europe."

Some believe the statues were created for the first Paris International Exposition in 1855, then moved to the gardens of the Palace of Versailles, outside Paris.

During the second restoration of Versailles, between the two world wars, and understood to have been financed by Rockefeller money, it was decided not to restore the entire gardens. These statues were acquired by Walter Chrysler, according to Altmayer, and graced his gardens on Long Island.

They then were given to the Archdiocese of New York, which sold them.

What would such goddesses as Ceres, goddess of Mother Earth and agriculture, be doing in such a place?

Her sister, Venus, graces the Altmayer's residence, Palmetto Hall, in Spring Hill, and two are in the Altmayer garden.

In 1982, the statues were removed from the mall and given to the city of Mobile by the Bel Air Corp.

An editorial in the then Mobile Magazine described them as a "munificent gift for the city of Mobile."

"Langan Park, Mobile's municipal outdoor retreat, is to have an amphitheater," reads the editorial.

"What a perfect setting for these statues," the editorial says, and suggests that a statue on each side of the planned theater could delineate the action. Other statues, positioned on pedestals, could be arranged with an avenue of shrubbery as a dramatic promenade to amphitheater seating.

"Another opportunity for Mobile to have something unique,' it reads.

Altmayer asked, "What happened to the chandelier?"

It too, graced the entrance to the mall.

Reads the editorial, "Too bad the chandelier is leaving town. We would have wished it for Mobile's Municipal Theatre."

The statues, which seemed to have disappeared, were discovered in an old shed and under water in Magnolia Cemetery by Jay Higginbotham, director of the archives. The statues have elicited interest. Don W. Wilson, archivist of the United States of America, and Edwin C. Bridges, director of the Alabama Dept. of Archives and History, will speak at the ceremonies.

DeJUZAN-HOLLINGER-INNERARITY FAMILIES

AND

GENEALOGY AND HISTORY NOTES ON:

COLON, ROCHON, TROUILLET, DeMOUY AND VON KREBS FAMILIES AND CONNECTIONS

1882

The introduction of the name of Innerarity on the Gulf Coast at both Pensacola and Mobile was when the firm of Panton, Leslie & Co.,[1] opened for business. Panton divided with Mather the commerce of West Florida, and Pensacola became their head business before extending to Mobile, and after doing so, Mather & Strother disappear, and John Joyce (their successor) turned contractor. As merchants of Mobile, Panton, Leslie & Co. petitioned for a vacant lot on Royal Street running back from the river, bounded north by the land of Miguel Eslava, south by vacant land. As granted September 16, 1795, the lot had 60-foot front and according to Olivier, the Spanish governor of Mobile, was eligibly situated for commercial purposes. It was the northeast corner of Royal and Government Streets, extending eastwardly to the river.

Panton, Leslie & Co. had not been long in possession before they determined on a great improvement. At that time Royal Street was the front street, and Panton, Leslie & Co.'s lot was only one of a number of lots extending from the east side of Royal Street toward the river. Their motive was to improve the shallow lagoon that ran between a shell bank that ran the entire length of Royal Street near the shore and created in summer a stagnant and offensive odor. It also interfered with ready access to water of loading depth. The firm determined to fill the marsh out to the shell reef, and therefore filed a petition in due form. It was warmly endorsed by the Spanish governor Olivier, and on April 25, 1798, was granted by Gayoso.

The firm of Panton, Leslie & Co., which began this reclamation, was destined under that and the later name of John Forbes & Co.,[1] to attain to great importance at Mobile and Pensacola. It was composed at first of John Forbes, William Panton and John Leslie.

Panton was born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and, moving to America, he acquired property in South Carolina and Georgia. The American Revolutionary War made him a refugee, and by 1785, if not before,[2] he was in business in Pensacola. He made a specialty of the Indian trade, in which the firm was aided by the celebrated chief Alexander

[redacted]

McGillivary, who is said to have been a silent partner. By 1789 Panton, Leslie & Co. are said to have carried at their chief store a stock of $50,000, for they had extensive skin-houses and employed clerks. Their fleet at one time consisted of fifteen schooners, and they had branch stores at St. John's, St. Mark's, St. Augustine, Mobile, and a trading establishment at Chickasaw Bluff (near modern Memphis, Tenn.) on the Mississippi. John Forbes was once in their house at New Providence, but in 1793, when he was twenty-four years old, he was in Mobile with a home and testifying he was a member of the firm. In this proceeding he is spoken of as an Englishman of Tensaw (Ingles de Tinza). In 1799 when Ellicott visited Mobile and the vicinity, found him residing in Mobile. The change of name of the firm was in 1804, on the death of Panton, who lived at Pensacola. John Forbes was the son of James Forbes and Sarah Gordon of Scotland, and at least two sisters outlived him in the old country. In the latter part of his life John Forbes was to live at Matanzas, Cuba. It is said he never married, but left two daughters.

On the withdrawal of the interests of Panton & Leslie, the brothers John and James Innerarity took their places. All were related by blood or marriage. John and James were the sons of John Innerarity and Henrietta Panton, the sister of William Panton of this Indian trade firm. John Innerarity was born at Aberdeen, Scotland, November 11, 1783. The date of James Innerarity's bith is not given.

The old Custon House in Mobile, St. Francis and Royal Streets, marks the site of the stores of Forbes & Co., whose property also included St. Francis Street, and even beyond to the north, for in Spanish times this was no thoroughfare, says Hamilton. The southernmost 90 feet was bought October 12, 1801, by Panton, Leslie & Co. from the widow Augustin Rochon. It extended back 213 feet to St. Charles Street (present St. Joseph Street). William Simpson, on behalf of the firm, paid $800 in drafts on the royal treasury. From here the main business of Panton & Forbes was done.

The American Historical Review (Vol. 2, pp.701) gives the following on James Innerarity:

"James Innerarity, native of Scotland, came to the United States in 1796, and was leading clerk in the celebrated trading establishment of Panton, Leslie & Co., who had been engaged in a mammoth trade with with the Souther Indians from the year of 1783 This firm had six houses besides its principal establishment at Pensacola. In 1803, James Innerarity became a partner. He resided in Mobile and took great interest in all public matters, and in 1817 was president of the commissioners of the town of Mobile. The members of this firm in all periods of existence were Scotsmen and all related. They were influential with the government under which they lived, and exercised unmeasured control over the Indian tribes with which they dealt."

[redacted]

The Rev. John Davidson in his "Inverarie and the Earldom of Garioch", published at Edinburg, Scotland, by David Douglas (and at Aberdeen by A. Brown & Co.) in 1878, gives extensive references to the Leslies and the Pantons, the connections of the Innerarity family.

Marquis James, the writer whose novel "Andrew Jackson and the Border Raider" was published in the early 1830's, wrote to Mr. Lewis A.R. Innerarity (2 Rector Street, New York) the following of James Innerarity, the head of Forbes & Co. of Pensacola:

"Innerarity spent his time alternately between Pensacola and Mobile, in both of which places Forbes & Co. maintained a trading house..... There is very little in print on Innerarity. Paron & Bassett's biographies of Jackson mention him... It is possible that R.L.Campbell's "Historical Sketches of Florida" may have something to say about him, but in main my vague picture of this interesting man was put together from casual references here and there, derived from the study of a vast number of manuscripts, and from my perusal of General Jackson's report to the Secretary of State on the Vidal Incident. This is printed in the American State Papers (Foreign Relations 4, and Misc. 2) and is voluminous. In full I would say that it runs as long as my entire book. Reference to Panton, Leslie & Co. and its successor Forbes & Co., and to Innerarity and various others I have found in copies of the Spanish archives in the Lawson-McGhee Library in Knoxville; retired classified files, Creek and Seminole, in the Indian Bureau at Washington, Etc..."

A letter of Mr. Lewis A. R. Innerarity (2 Rector Street, New York) gives the following later valuable Innerarity notes:

"My grandmother Johnstone was the youngest daughter of Dr. James Brown Johnstone of Kircaldy, Scotland. He was, I am informed, a distinguished professor at the University of Edinburg. He married a Miss Green, the daughter of William Green, a banker of Dublin, Ireland. Dr. Johnstone had eight sons, one of whom (James T. O.) was knighted by Queen Victoria for distinguished services. He was a surgeon of the 33rd Foot Regiment, and, I am told, saw service in the Crimean War.

"My grandfather, John Forbes Innerarity, was educated at Oxford University, and took his medical degree at the University of Edinburg. I believe my father now (1934) has his diploma. My grandfather's bible contains the following entries:

1. James Francis Hamilton Wemyss Innerarity....28 September 1838 Kircaldy
2. John Williams Gillespie Innerarity....8 October 1839 - La Heloisa
3. Elizabeth Jane Marie Louise....31 May 1841 - La Heloisa, Mantazas (Cuba)
4. Heloisa Henrietta....12 December 1842 - Coffee Plantation at Plantonia..near San Juan de los Remedios (Cuba)
5. Fanny Charlotte....27 March 1844 - Mobile, Alabama
6. James Johnstone....3 December 1845 - St. Joseph Street, Mobile, Alabama
7. Albert Hamilton Wemyss....10 January 1847 - Ann Street, Mobile, Alabama
8. Emanuel Swedenborg....7 December 1849 - Mobile, Alabama
9. Margaret Isabel....3 December 1851 - Mobile, Alabama
10-11. Boy and Girl (Twins)....3 October 1853 (in the 6th month). Girl died in 14 hours, boy in 8 hours. Mother had Yellow Fever.
12. Helena Victoria....30 December 1854 - Ann Street, Mobile, Alabama
13. Lewis Minor Innerarity.... ? ....Ann Street, Mobile, Alabama (Died).

"My father tells me that his grandfather (James Innerarity) married a Spanish countess, who owned very large coffee and sugar plantations in Cuba. He does not know her name. There are a number of court records involving litigation over land owned by the family. I am sorry I haven't the citations available here. One was decided by the U. S. Supreme Court (circa 1908) and is reported (I think) in 203 U. S. Reports. The title is Forbes et al vs. Dalcour. It gives a very long list of heirs. One million nine hundred odd thousand acres of land in Florida were involved. My father was one of the defendants. Another suit in the Alabama courts was decided sometime between 1910 and 1913, involving the land comprising substantially all of the business district of the City of Mobile. There are two other Supreme Court cases in which the Innerarity's figure. One is reported (I think) in 11 Wall.

"I understand that there is a Fred Innerarity (the Rector in charge of the Episcopal Cathedral of Toronto, Ontario) who has a full family history; but I have never communicated with him.

"Douglas' Baronage, printed in about 1760, shows seven Barons of Innerarity...in a straight line originating in about 1260, the original ancestor being the ancestor of the present Duke of Argyll (or Airlie) family. This publication contains extensive references to the Innerarity (or Inverquharity) family, and shows a number of family trees in which John and James Inverquharity appear. I procured a copy of this work (intwo volumes) from London for about $12.50. Douglas' Baronage is out of print, but I procured Photostats of the pages (Four) for $2.50 from the New York Public Library....."

"My cousin Mrs. Joseph Alfred Blythe (586 Walnut Street, New Orleans) can doubtless give.....a great deal more information about the family than I. In fact I have never made any effort to compile any data; and the information I have, outside the Bible record, resulted from my inquiry of the Librarian of the New York Public Library (after I had read of the exploits of the 'Knight of Inverquharity' in Sir Walter Scott's 'Quentin Durward'. As you doubtless know, the letters 'nn' and 'NV' are used interchangeably in Scottish nam The letters 'quh' are pronounced as 'wh' in 'where'.

"Mrs. Blythe is the daughter of my aunt Mrs. Leslie DuCros (nee Helena Victoria Inner -arity) of New Orleans..now deceased.

"My father (L. M. Innerarity of Laurel, Maryland) advises me that Messrs. Hamilton, Kinnear & Beaton, Q. C., of Edinburg were trustees under my Grandfather's will, and should be able to give all desired information.""James Innerarity married beautiful Louise Trouillet, and in his own or her name (says Hamilton) acquired land."

The government of the Mobile district was, of course, military at first..with a general in charge.....During the Creek war the territorial legislature of Mississippi (on January 21, 1814 - after the battle of the Holy Ground) passed an act for the incorporation of the Mobile citizens. Under it, on March 11, 1814, a meeting of the inhabitants was held at the house of M. McKinsey with Josiah Blakely in the chair, and it was resolved to hold the election at the dwelling house of Wilson Carmon. These residences cannot be identified, but were no doubt like the few Spanish one-story buildings (or story and a half with dormer windows) still remaining in Mobile. Lewis Judson, James Innerarity and B. Dubroca were appointed commissioners (inspectors we would now call them), and Inner-..ity and Samuel Acre (the Lawyer) formed a committee to prepare a few translations of the act into French, to be posted up conspicuously in public places. These peaceful affairs were contemporaneous with General Jackson's march to Horse Shoe Bend. The polls were accordingly opened at Carmon's on Monday, March 14, from ten to four o'clock. Lewis Judson, James Innerarity, B. Dubroca, P. H. Hobart, T. Powell, A. Robesbow, and S. H. Garrow were duly elected Commissioners of the town of Mobile: Miguel Eslava treasurer, Michael McKinsey collector, and Dominique Salles assessor....a mixture (says Hamilton) of the old and the new stocks. How many property owners were there to vote we do not know, but three years later at a similar election, only seventeen voters were mentioned, although we have the names of over a hundred male residents.

The next day the Commissioners were sworn in to office by Josiah Blakeley, as one of the justices of the quorum of Mobile County. James Innerarity was elected President, and McKinsey clerk. On March 16th, a business meeting was held, its first acts being the appoint-..nt of a committee on rules on motion of S. H. Garrow, and then a resolution establishing the boundaries of the town and of the three wards, and also one fixing the tax rate at twelve and a half cents on the hundred dollars. The town limits began at Choctaw Point, then ran due west to where a perpendicular line due north would strike Murrell's Ford over Bayou Chateauguay (Three Mile Creek), thence down that creek to the east side of th river, thence south to the beginning. These are substantially what the boundaries have now long been; but an act of the legislature of December 1, 1814, made them triangular, running from Choctaw Point to a place 200 yards above the Portage on Bayou Chateauguay, thence down the bayou to its mouth, thence down the river and bay to the place of beginning.[1]

1888

The above information shows with the beginning of Mobile as a town at the beginning of American times and places James Innerarity as a prominent and responsible asset by his [illegible] election to the first City Commission as "first commissioner executive. He was often referred to by his previous business connections as the managing man for Forbes & Co., and Zadek's old corner (SW Dauphin and Royal Streets) was owned by that progressive firm. It can be noted that the progressiveness of James Innerarity was a "go further" spirit, and that from the gabled Church of the Immaculate Conception at NW Conti and Royal Streets to Dauphin Street and thus including Van Antwerpt's corner, was later the property of James Innerarity, who seems to have acquired it from John Joyce.[2]

James Innerarity was elected president of the new or second board of Commissioners o Mobile (1815), although Lewis Judson was also a member. During Innerarity's incumbency o the board, the construction of Water Street took place from Government to the market place at Dauphin Street. This great improvement, giving Mobile its first street east of Royal Street, was accomplished during this and the next year (1815-1816), largely by the cooperation of John Forbes & Co. and Lewis Judson, who moved their fences voluntarily and contributed to payment of expense in consideration of a grant claim to lands between the projected street and their fence to the west.[1]

Appearing in The Mobile Daily Commercial Register and Patriot (July 11, 1838) is the following notice published in both Spanish and English, and among the oldest of the later records of American Mobile, with which James Innerarity had a part:

A LITERAL TRANSLATION OF THIS NOTICE INTO ENGLISH:

R89

"This Society was organized the 16th of June last, by a very large meeting of Spanish subjects and citizens of Mobile, held at the dwelling place of Don Miguel de Eslava (#92 Royal Street). The object of the meeting was stated by the Vice-Consul of Spain, and the following officers were unanimously elected:

President: Don Miguel de Eslava
Vice-President: Don Jayme (James) Innerarity
Secretary: Don Bartolome Lopez
Treasurer: Don Eugene Latady[1]

Directors: Rev. John Bazin, Don Claro Fernandez, Dr. Don Fernando Moreno, and Don Ramon Soto

The Rt. Reverend Bishop M. Portier was elected an Honorary Director, with the privilege of a vote and of the Chair.

The object of this Society is to promote the prosperity of the Spanish citizens residing in Mobile; to extend the hand of beneficence to their fellow-countrymen who may immigrate hither, and to relieve generally the necessities of the unfortunate, the orphan and the widow."

Note: The Don Miguel de Eslava (correctly Don Miguel de Siderio de Eslava - or, as he always signed himself: M. D. Eslava) was the eldest son of the Great Don Miguel de Eslava, who figured as Spanish Commissary of Mobile, and who died before 1824.

The French dramatist Marc Antoine Jacques Rochon de Chabannes, who was born in Paris January 25, 1730, and died there on May 15, 1800, was a connection of the Mobile Rochon family.[1] Rochon de Chabannes wrote a great number of successful comedies, published under the titles: "Theatre"(1786), also "Slowful Nobility"(1756) and "Philosophic and Moral Discourse (1768). A rare copy of his "Le Jaleux" (comedy in five acts in free verse) sold for a high price at the American Art Association - Anderson Galleries, Inc., New York City, on Tuesda November 27, 1934.

The above shows that as both d'Iberville and de Bienville were both titles added to the sur-name of LeMoyne (e.g. "Sieur d'Iberville", "Sieur de Bienville", "Sieur de Chateaugue", "Sieur de Ste. Helene", and the other titles on the brothers Lemoyne); so "de Chabannes" was added to the name of Rochon. The Coat-of-Arms of Rochon de Chabannes, if located through records in Paris, could be added and incorporated into the Coat-of-Arms of the families of Preau, Colin (or Colon), Troillet (originally de Trouillet), DeMouy (or De Muys) and the later in-marriages of de Juzan and Hollinger, etc., and even the Irish family or clan of Powers. These families all had coats-of-arms, some retaining and some dropping their inheritance and marks of rank.

HISTORICAL FAMILIES OF ROCHON, COLON AND TROUILLET

The family of Rochon went early with the first settlers to Canada in the 1600's from France; and, on the colonization of the vast Province of Louisiana by Iberville and Bienville, Charles Rochon (a native of Montreal) came with the first settlers to Fort Louis de la Mobile at Twenty-seven Mile Bluff, and then later at the second site (or present Mobile). He married Henriette Colon, who died at Mobile on March 1, 1733. Their son Pierre Rochon became the master contractor of Mobile. Family tradition says that Charles Rochon was a tall and stately man with a friendly personality and disposition.

Of the children of Charles Rochon and his wife Henriette, we trace in the Mobile Catholic Church records:

(1) Therese Rochon - who married Pierre Brossard (a habitant of Mobile), and whose first son (Pierre) was born June 18, 1708 at the first Mobile. A second son (Francois) was baptized on February 19, 1710.

(2) Marie Therese Rochon - who married Jean Crespoau, and had a daughter (Marie Josephe) born March 20, 1719.

(3) Charles Rochon - born at present site of Mobile January 5, 1716, and baptized January 6, 1716.

(4) Pierre Rochon I - (the master contractor of Mobile) born October 14, 1717, at Mobile, and died in the late summer of 1771 (perhaps of yello fever). He married at the age of 21 the beautiful Catherine d la Rochelle(the daughter of Andre Pierre de la Roahelle and h wife Jeanne de l'Isle de Cèvan). Their son Pierre Rochon II succeeded to his father's contracting business at the latter' death in 1771.

(5) Henriette Rochon - born February 17, 1720.

(6) Marie Josephe Rochon - born March 17, 1722...Baptized April 6, 1722.

(7) Louis Augustin Rochon - baptized May 14, 1724.

(8) Constance Rochon - (perhaps) married Jacques de la Soussaye.

(9) Marguerite Rochon - born April 23, 1731.

(10) Olivier Rochon - born February 1733...baptized March 2, 1733.

Pierre Rochon II, son of Pierre Rochon I and Catherine de la Rochelle, married Catherine Pauz (or Panx or Pons). Their children were: (1) Pierre Rochon III - baptized October 9, 1739; (2) Charles Rochon - baptized July 9, 1741, his godfather being his uncle Charles Rochón.

The Colon family is mentioned many times in the Catholic colonial records of Mobile. There are Louis Colon, Anne Renee Colon, Marianne Rouvielle Colon, and Marguerite Colon (who first married Francois Siamaon, and then Joseph Barbeau - the master tailor of Mobil Those may be sisters and brothers in immediate line to Henriette Colon (the wife of Charl Rochon), but at any rate they are of very close kinship. The old Catholic records are sor meagre in giving us definite proof. There is also Jean Colon - born November 5, 1709; and a daughter (unnamed) - baptized September 19, 1709; also a son (unnamed) - baptized Septe ber 19, 1709 (these two latter way have been twins). There was also another son (Antoine Colon) - born December 20, 1712....and another daughter (Marie Therese Colon) - born & baptized on January 11, 1715....and also another unnamed daughter - born and baptized on July 10, 1722. All these latter children named here (from Jean Colon on) were tl children of Jean Colon, who married Marguerite Prot (or Preau).

We find next in this line that the Rochon blood passed into the Trouillet blood by t marriage of Marguerite Rochon (born April 23, 1731) - the daughter and ninth child of Charles Rochon I and his wife Henriette - to Charles Trouillet. The ceremony was perform in the little church of La Notre Dame de la Mobile, near or about the present intersecti of Monroe and St. Emanuel Streets, outside the southwest bastion of Fort Conde de la Mob Family tradition[1] says this was a unique and lovely wedding: the slaves all dressed in li ery and brass buttons and plumed hats followed the family and wedding procession of frie to the little church, and later served the many guests, many from both New Orleans and B loxi, at the long improvised tables in the flower garden of the Rochon home.

Reference to the judicial records of Mobile gives much valuable information on prope ty ownership and belongings, and Hamilton tells us the Spanish Commandant had some dutie much pleasanter to read of, and it is hoped pleasanter to perform, than taking possessio of other peoples' property. An instance is found in the matter of contract for marriage between Monsieur Pierre Trouillet and Demoiselle Isabelle Narbonne[1] on May 18, 1786.

Hamilton further states it recites the groom's father and mother, Charles Trouillet & Marguerite Rochon - and the Bride's, Antoine Narbonne and Marie Josephe Krebs. Friends participated in the arrangement, such as Jean Chastang and Narcisse Brortin, Valentine Dubroc and Louis Dubroca - besides the bride's parents (she being a minor). The instrument provides for a Catholic marriage to occur as soon as either requests it; that neither is liable for the ante-nuptial debts of the other, but that they shall hold in common all property (movable and immovable) according to the customs of Spain...all other customs[2] being renounced. The estate of the bride consisted of a ten-year old negress named Julie (worth 300 hard dollars); while Trouillet brought into the community 8,000 piastres in money, slaves, etc., of which he gave a dower of 750piastres (hard money). In case of death of either without children, the survivor should receive the whole property. All was executed before Commandant Favrot.

From the Mobile judicial records as well as the Church records, we find Monsieur Pierre Trouillet (son of Marguerite Rochon and Charles Trouillet) marries Demoiselle Narbonne (Narbona in the Spanish records) on May 18, 1786, the daughter of Antoine Narbonne and Marie Joseph Krebs - which brings the Krebs family and connections into the Trouillet family and blood. Another son Jean Trouillet marries Isabelle Chastang, while another daughter Louise Trouillet married James Innerarity. The former were the parents of Marguerite Trouillet - born in Mobile on the 6th of November, 1785, and baptized July 7, 1786. Some of the Trouillet family members went back to Canada or to reside in New Orleans, when the British took over Mobile. However, it is found that these today spe the name in two forms: the old and also "Troullier" or "Trouillier" (pronounced the same the old and original name.

The Krebs' blood comes into the connections of this family history by the marriage, a we have seen, of Demoiselle Isabelle de Narbonne (Narbona) to Pierre Troillet. The following family history of Baron Frans von Krebs and his connections bring into light many not ble people:

[redacted]

1893

Baron Franz von Krebs (born in Castle Cashem), whose towers rise above the flowing waters of the Mosel River into the Rhine province of Germany). He married a daughter of Joseph Simon de la Pointe and Jeanne Puluet of Canada (his wife). From this union were three sons:

(1) Francois Krebs - who married Marie Louise de Belle Isle, daughter of Moreau Augustine de Belle Isle and Marie Louise de Guilorie de l'Isle a Guilory (his wife).

(2) Pierre Krebs - who married Aline Peteet (Petite ?) of Pascagoula. It is said that from this marriage are descended the Sandses, Senacs, Frys, Demouys and Rapiers and descendants of Mobile.

(3) Hugo Krebs - who married Marie de Josieuse, of New Orleans. Marie was the cousin of Madame Jan Diard (nee Francoise de Mau), plantation owner and army officer in Haiti. M. Diard & Mlle. Diard were the parents of Francois Diard, who came to New Orleans at the turn of the 18th century and married Eugenie Rapicault, the daughter of Therese Billeron (the cousin of Bienville) and her husband Renee Rapicault, of Ste. Genevieve and New Orleans. M. & Mme Renee Rapicault were also grandparents of Joseph Krebs Diard (of New Orleans and later of Mobile), who married Adeline Jourdan. The latter couple were the parents of Charles Diard - who married Sarah Antonia Parker (of Mobile), the daughter of Louise Adelaide Delage (of Mobile) and Robert Monell (a native of Albany, N.Y.).

(4) Marie Josephine Krebs - who married Captain Antoine Narbonne (or Narbona)...mentioned as belonging to the French Navy. Their daughter Anna Norbona (she spells her name the Spanish way) became the wife of Don Enrique Grimarest..the most distinguished figure in the whole ghostly company. For, inthe archives of the Indes at Seville is a copy of a letter signed by Don Bernardo de Galvez (the governor of Louisiana) proposing to the King of Spain that Don Enrique, Captain in the Regiment of Navarre, be made governor of Mobile. The date of this document is May 26, 1781. There are in the same archives two other papers relating to Grimarest. One announces his promotion to be lieutenant-colonel for "distinguished merits contracted at the capture of Mobile" (in 1780); and the other is the royal license granted Grimare to marry Dona Ana Narbona.

A descendant of Hugo Krebs and Marie de Joyieuse (but whether immediate or not is not stated) was Joseph Krebs. As related in family records, he married the daughter of William Fisher..the owner of the Fisher Tract and other property in Mobile. His (J. Krebs') sister Josephine Krebs became the progenitress of the Delmas Family of Pascagoula and Mobile. Another sister, Emarante Krebs, married Eugene Latady.

Corinne Krebs was married in great state (July 15, 1850) to Henry G. Humphries, in ho father's house at NW corner of Conti and Hamilton Streets in Mobile. She had for her bride's maid her stately sister Miss Florida Krebs, long an early socialite of Mobile.

Henry G. Humphries was a notable man of Mobile (said to be very handsome), and was a successful cotton man before the War Between the States. He was a member of the secession convention in Montgomery (from Mobile County) in 1861; provost-marshal at Mobile, 1862-63; and enrolling officer, 1864-65. He had a long lineage beginning with Sir John Humphries, a native of Dorsetshire, England..who was a member of the illustrious House of Bohun. Sir John's wife was Lady Lucy, daughter of Baron Clinton, 11th Earl of Lincoln. Sir John was deputy governor of Massachusetts. A descendant, John J. Humphries, moved to Columbus, Mississippi, and there engaged largely in cotton planting. His son Dr. W.N. Humphries was a trustee for the Mississippi College for Women. And his son, Henry G. Humphries, settled in Mobile in 1819.

One of the handsomest edifices and residences was the house that stood on the southwe corner of St. Louis&Conception Streets in Mobile (until torn down and built over by the first Greyhound Bus station). And it was there his daughter Marie Humphries became the wife of Hon. Marion Gaines of Austin, Texas. This beautiful old Humphries home for many years before demolition became the home of Mrs. Nina Hood Boykin (daughter of the late O.J. Hood).

RE the old Krebs home, NW corner of Conti and Hamilton Streets: It was occupied in 1865 by Louis D. Krebs; by Mrs. M. Krebs in 1866; in 1878 by L.D. Krebs; and in 1886 by Miss Florida Krebs, by whom (in 1901) it was sold to the Mobile Library Association..and became the site of the first Mobile Public Library. When the Library was moved in 1926, the old home became the property of J. Howard Wilson...and still later by H. Hoffman.

.....There is a note about the Chevalier de Belle Isle, whose lovely daughter married Sieur Francois Krebs? The chevalier arrived in these parts June 4, 1721, on the good ship Portefaix from France, along with DeGuillorie and DeJoyieuse (whose names play some part in this family history and narrative) and Dubas, Senac, Petat (Petcet ? or Petite ?) and Vivia (whose names do not). The archives in Paris record a grant under the charter of the Western Company (September 7, 1717) to Count M.A. de Belle Isle, chevalier at the court of Louis XIV of France, and general of the marines in Louisiana (in 1730). Belle Isle appear to have come over to occupy his grant and grow up with the country.

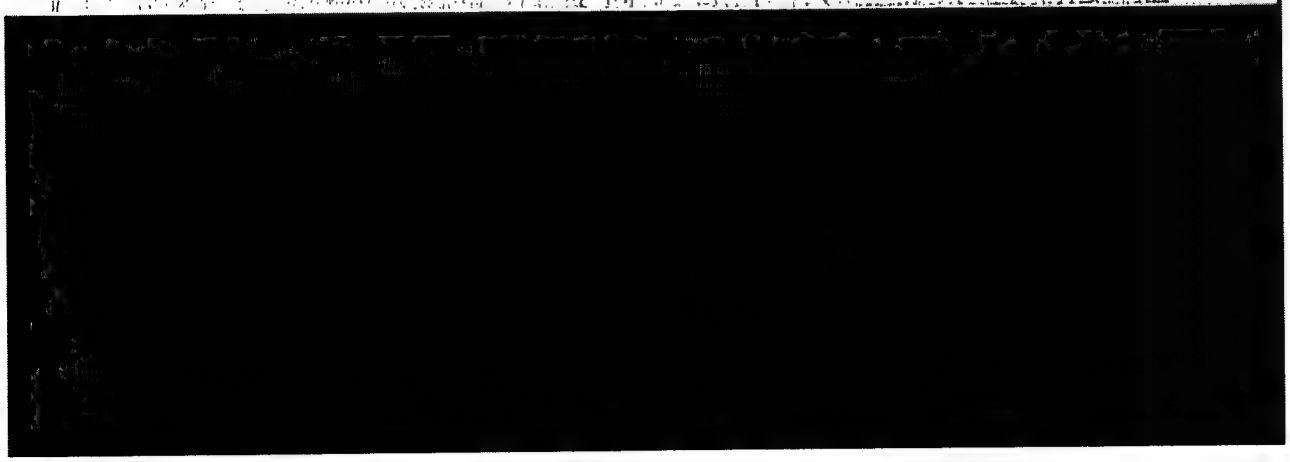
Going further back into the judicial records of Spanish times in Mobile, we find for the first few years transactions are in French (or in both French and Spanish). But as the hold of Spain grew stronger, here became the sole official language. The Trouillet divisio of 1786, before Commandant Favrot, was in French, but others were altogether in Spanish.

On March 15, 1786, we find Pierre Trouillet petitioning for the dissolution of the partnership with his brother Jean Trouillet, and for division of the property...Pierre wishing to leave for New Orleans. Jean Trouillet was the husband of Elizabeth Chastang, and they were parents of Marguerite Trouillet, born in Mobile on November 6, 1785, and baptized July 7, 1786.

The neighborhood of old Fort Louis de la Mobile (the first Mobile settlement at 27-Mile Bluff on Mobile River) was not deserted, for in 1792 the Widow Rochon obtained the very site, named "The Bluff", described as "land 12 arpens front by 40 deep, being a piece of land called 'the Old Fort', distant about nine miles from this place, situated on Mobile River". A short distance below this James Innerarity established a cotton plantation on which to work the negroes of his wife, Eloise Isabelle Trouillet, as she owned a number accustomed to agriculture. He applied for a tract "40 arpens on the river by 30 deep, situated on both sides of a small spring (bottom) commonly known by the name of Fond de Lourse (otherwise the Old Fort Spring)". It was situated between the plantation belonging to Dubroca and St. Philip and that of Rochon's at the Old Fort on the river. B. Dubroca and Peter Chastang testify that the tract is vacant, and Peres grants it April 6, 1809, the intendancy being closed. Two years later we find a grant to Isabelle Narbonne bounded on the north by (James) Innerarity's habitation and on the south by that of St. Philip.[1]

A map of Township #2 North Range East Land District Southern Part of Alabama, ... examined and approved January 26, 1849 (and signed by James H. Weakley, Surveyor of the Public Lands in Alabama)....shows us 240acres with a full frontage on the Tom... marked "4" owned by Augustin Rochon (next south of the land of James Caller..#3' ... erty was several miles above the meeting of the Tombigbee and the Alabama (to fo... bile River).



Biloxi, near Mobile, always continued a settlement, even if across its bay to the east the memory of Fort Maurepas was lost in the oaks and pines of that promontory. Piernas early made a grant to the widow of Baptiste Christian, who had lived at Biloxi since her birth; and a little later Mathurin and Careaux obtained land at Dumanon Point, bounded south by the sea and east by "the mouth of the Bay of the Old Fort", for cultivation and other uses. James Innerarity in 1809 became the owner of Round Island, once the property of Frances Krebs.[2]

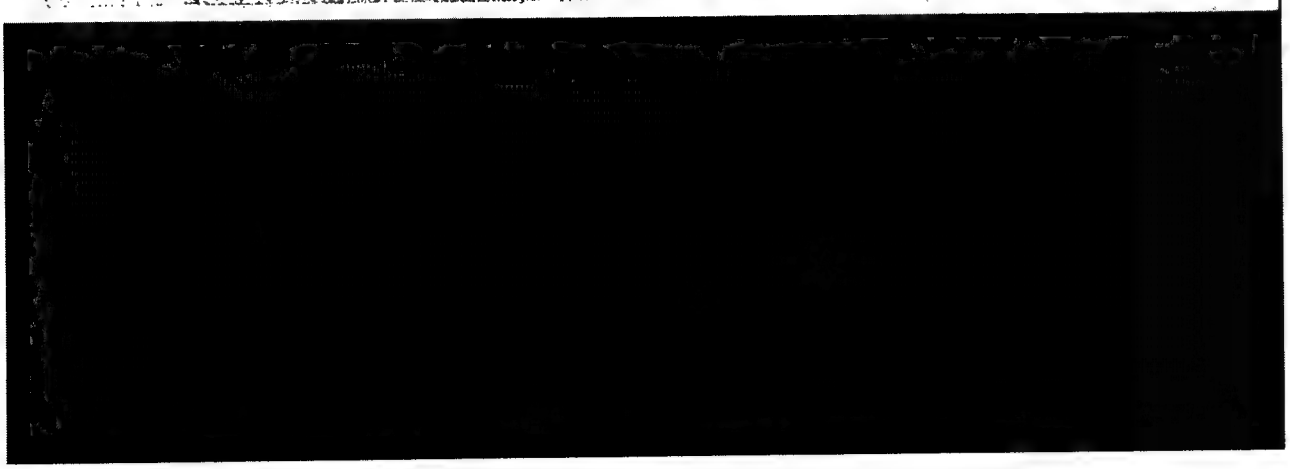
Few documents survive in the Mobile Archives of the later English period in Mobile, and the one deed in the Translated Records is so indefinite, says Hamilton,[3] in description as not to be of much aid. But its form of "grant, bargain, sell" and the rest of it, with the "to have and to hold" is at least a reminder of English Procedure. One paper is dated February 2, 1775, and by it Augustin Rochon buys three lots (for $100), with a house all falling to pieces. The sellers are Margaret Belluque, Francis Fleurs (Fievre ?), Martonne (Martha) Dubroca and Louisa Rochon. The property is a double lot, that is, extending east and west from street to street, bounded on the south by Henry Driscol, and on the north in part by the vacant lot also conveyed and the lot of J.B. Lefleaux...the vacant lo in turn being bounded on the north and west by unnamed streets.

This same property became the subject of litigation in American times between the omnivorous Kennedys (Joshua and William) and the heirs of Rochon; and in this way we learn its location to have been at the southeast corner of Conception and Government Streets. It seems that the original grantee was B.F. Fievre, probably the ancestor to the parties selling to Rochon. Augustin Rochon married Louisa Fievre, and she as his widow resided there...with the yard, fruit trees and park overlooking the common - at least until 1789, the year the Spanish under Galvez conquered Mobile from the British. Whether Madame Rochon was there later or not was the point in the suit, which depended on whether U.S. Commissior. or Crawford reported in 1814 that she had lived there "36 years" or "36 years ago"[4] Marie Jeanne Lapointe, the mother of the wife of Orbanne DeMouy[5] must have been the first wife



-rest of Dauphin Island to Joseph Moro - the origin, in fact, of the existing title to that historic spot. Moro's petition of July 31, 1761, is dated at New Orleans, and says that he is an inhabitant of that city. Galvez the next day directs Grimarest to investigate the matter, and if the land is vacant to put Moro in possession...and return the proceedings made out "in continuation" with the comissioners - a substitute for the indorsement on the original papers by officials in our practice. September of the same year there was a report by Charles Parent, Arbana (Arbanne) DeMouy, Dubroca, and Louis Caxriere, who had been called on for evidence.

St. Francis Street east of Royal, like Dauphin and even Conti Streets, was represented only by a lane to the river. In 1811 the free mulatta Mary Jeanne was living with her children in a little house at what is now the ## NE corner of St. Francis and Royal Stree This was next south of another place of Simon Andre which crossed on St. Michael Street. John Forbes & Co. desired the Mary Jeanne place, as it extended 26 toises eastwardly, and was bounded on the south by the lane going th the river. So they exchanged with her, givin her a place twelve toises front, somewhere on the south side of Church Street in the rea of the town. There they obligated themselves to build her a house 26 by 18 (French) feet "like the house of Peter Lorandine (Pierre Laurendine), with a double chimney of Bricks"; And they paid her $40 cash besides.[1] Thus these merchants got an outlet to the river from their main house. North of Forbes, on the west side of Royal, the residents are not so ea to make out, except that the site of the northwest corner of Royal and St. Michael was th residence of Arbanne (DeMouy) by 1802.[2]

St. Michael is a Spanish name but one of the curiosities of Mobile is that it is not in the surviving records applied to that street, says Hamilton. It did not extend east of Royal, and west to our St. Joseph it is called St. Jago at first, and later St. Francis; while west of St. Joseph it was in 1811 known as Orbanne Street, from the residence of "Misieu' Orbanne" DeMouy at the NW corner corner of Royal. Hugo Krebs came next north of of Rochon.[1] At the time (February 5, 1780) when Galvez was sieging Mobile, the British burned the home of the widow Augustin Rochon at the SE corner of Conception and Government Streets, no doubt to enable the fort the better to command the neighborhood.[2]

During the occupancy of Mobile by the Spanish there were 13 pastors of the little Church of the Immaculate Conception until American times. The first entries during this period in the church records are by Father Salvador de Esperanza, who describes himself as "parish priest of the Mercedarian Order". Almost his first duty was to enter Augustin .....(there must be a page or so missing).....

The energetic Pierre Rochon, the master contractorof Mobile during British times, (and the son of Charles Rochon and Henriette Colon) according to Lorimer's report in 1771, made all necessary repairs on the barracks and stockade at Fort Charlotte and on boats to be sent to Haldimandat Pensacola, as well as at Croftown on the eastern shore of Mobile Bay. Lorimer's Report hints the effect of the abandonment of the fort for residence of troops. By April 1771, the work at Croftown was finished.

It is pleasand, says Hamilton,[3] to turn to the side lights in the correspondence between Pierre Rochon and the general (Haldimand). Rochon was compelled by his wife's illness in April (1771) to remain at Mobile, and from there he sends a few dozen fowls as a compliment. He was then building boats, one a schooner for the government, but had to wait until the middle of May for a sail maker from New Orleans. His own schooner was taken for carrying guns, but he has the policy to express himself as satisfied about it. He asks that his white workmen have rations at the royal tariff, which he will repay if not allowed. To Pensacola he sends over diables (despite the name, the peaceful articles we call log carts) and two pairs of oxen. Once Pierre Rochon expresses the intention of coming to Pensacola after finishing his work at Mobile, which would be June 20, 1771. He was anxious to obtain further employment "in order to refit his house spoiled by the bad conduct of his children" but he does not let us into the particulars of this domestic affair. This home may have been at Dog River, whence his later letters are dated.

Pierre Rochon was also a slave holder, and his clear, bold signature to the negro baptismal entries contrasts strangely to the cramped hand of Pere (Father) Ferdinand, the Acadian, who was parish priest. This good father continues his ministrations during English times in Mobile. The same forms, the same words all in French as before, continue in this record, in the same thin book that had been paged and issued to him in 1757 by the French commandant. Forneret, R. Roi (the Indian interpreter), Montelimart, Lusser, Trouillot, Girard, A. Rochon, as well as Pierre Rochon, Chastang, DeMouy, Grelot, Carriere, Badon, Monlouis and others, bring their children and slaves to Pere Ferdinand for baptism as in the old days, or to attest his entries as they chat with the good father of French times and friends. The inhabitants of Mobile were not able to support him, however, and about 1771 he retired to New Orleans. 26 of them earnestly petitioned next year for his recall, and Governor Chester warmly recommended it, and that a salary be allowed him. He soon returned to Mobile, although Lord Hillsborough refused the salary and we can imagine the good priest's welcome home.[1]

Sir Robert Farmer, the English governor of Mobile for many years, first found 98 Frenc families, and of these almost 40 remained, withdrawing largely to their river and bay home and there raising cattle. Lt. McLellan was sent to New Orleans to induce the French to mov to Mobile and Pensacola, but in this he was unsuccessful. Pierre Rochon, who was to be the master contractor of Mobile, and who did most of the fort repairs in later French times wa of the Mobile inhabitants who remained. A great many of the French having relatives and friends in New Orleans on the founding of that city in 1718 followed Bienville there. Many of the French inhabitants as well could not subject themselves to be ruled by the British, entertaining the thought that the treaty of Paris would deprive them of both home and land and living.

The British, however, set to work the first thing to improve Mobile and much construction work and repairs was done.... The receipt of Pierre Rochon of April 9, 1763, for payment for all the labor performed by him has also come down in the Haldimand Papers. It is stated he did the work by order of Major Farmer of the 13th Regiment, and Farmer's account shows that Rochon received in all 2232 Pounds. A certificate dated April 13th, of officers of the 34th and 22nd Regiments, shows that the work was satisfactory. A note says Lt. Pitt man connected with the great survey of Mobile in British times, on April 8, 1765, paid

[redacted]

Pierre Rochon 22½ pounds for repairing a boat for Pittman "to survey the lakes with".[1] Family as well as Mobile history records tell us that Pierre Rochon grew so popular (and we can readily imagine he was now in great demand) that after a short while the patriotic British at Pensacola were up in arms about this Frenchman's taking their business away.

1900

In the summer of 1771, we read of only a small amount of sickness in Mobile and the garrison of the fort proper. And in November (1771) we find Haldimand corresponding with Pierre Rochon II at Pensacola, who speaks of the death of his father. The mantle, says Hamilton, had descended on worthy shoulders, and the young man announces that he will carr on his father's agreements and intentions..... The last letter from Pierre Rochon I was dated July 11, 1771, from Mobile. Haldimand no doubt missed his old friend when, on November 28, 1771, he was in Mobile to attend a congress of the Chickasaws.

The Eslava Bay Tract below Arlington or Garrow's Bend on Mobile Bay (which is different from the Eslava Mill Tract) was by the Spanish Commandant Osorno granted Michael Ardaz as a cotton plantation on March 26, 1803. The Diego McVay Tract of 4, 374.09 acres was a claim of Cornelius McCurtain, who seems to have purposes. 20 acres at the mouth of Dog River was in 1798 the property of John (Jean) Trouillet at a place called Bateau Panche. He wanted it for cattle, of which he had a large stock.

Across Dog River was where lived Pierre Rochon I, Hamilton says, for much of Hollinger Island stood in Rochon's name, the origin of its modern titles. The 800 arpens which Powell was to get from James Innerarity as the executor of Troillet's widow (nee Isabelle Rochon), his mother-in-law, was probably south of Deer River, and not on the island.

Mary Rochon, widow of Arbanne DeMouy, for $400 sold John Murrell 1,200 arpens situated "by the junction of Dog River, about three leagues south of Mobile, belonging to her deceased husband, acquired by grant of Corondelet. It was bounded on the north by Monlimar Creek and lands of Charles Lelande, on the south by another creek (Cedar, in a later deed) and the same estate, on the west by public lands, and on the east by Dog River. Four month later Murroll sold the tract to Eliphalet Beebe, and he in 1810 conveyed half of it to Asa Beebe for $300. This is the Beebe Tract at the mouth of Hall Mill Creek.[2]

The most prominent re-grant of the Mobile territory was that made by Governor Orima-

Andre (or Andry) on Royal (with the title confirmed in 1842 to his heirs[3]), and beyond him was George Tucker, the English carpenter of Pantan, Leslie & Co. In 1804 James Innerarity was granted what is now the SE corner of Royal and St. Louis Streets, bounded on t north by that unopened street.

The first known sale of land ascertained by the new line to be within the United States was that of C.U. DeMouy..for$250 (October 23, 1800) to John Brewer of 20 by 40 arpens between lands of said Brewer and Dubroca. C.U. DeMouy was the ancestor of the Mobile family of that name.

Across Mobile Bay a Spanish map shows settlements above the old French Village[2] (Aldea), but none at modern Howard's; and about Montrose have been found silver coins and antiquities more likely of this than DeSoto's time. J.B. Lorandine had six or seven arpens with house and kitchen on it, at Red Bluff, about the site of the British summer camp of Croftown; and Lt. Perriet was to buy it in 1805 for $120[3]. This neighborhood near Rock Creek in later times was the site of kilns. Isabelle Narbonne, the widow Campbell, obtained a tract of 20 arpens front at the Bluff in order to put her slaves at making brick and tile. And we have already seen the judicial proceedings by which Forbes & Co. purchased the Trouillet yard there (in 1811).[4]

This ends the writing and recording of the family history of the descendants and connections of the Chevalier de Juzan. This family history includes many notable people, who were the makers of the history of the Gulf Coast Territory under the five flags flown over the country now known as the State of Alabama...a family history to be proud of, which is not only a gift to posterity but a monument to its people and to the South!

Hon. E.A. Khayat,
Moss Point, Miss.

Dear Eddie:-

Have finally gotten around to sending you copy of bill of sale from Levi Fenn to G.W. Rankin, conveying 1 negro girl, about fifteen years of age, named "Amelia Slave", at and for the sum of $900.00, which he warrants to be sound of "boddy and mind." Perhaps you will find it a little difficult to read but a little care and you can translate completely.

Levi Fenn was my great-grandfather and G.W. Rahkin was my maternal grandfather, neither of whom I had the privilege of seeing, they dying before my birth. The instrument bears date of December 27, 1856, and my mother was born on July 12, 1856, so I am assuming that grandfather bought this girl to nurse and take care of my mother, the first child of the family.

Rahter interesting and does throw light on what our people were up against when the slaves were freed without any remuneration to the owners. Terrific financial loss.

Glad to pass it on to you and with kindest personal regards, I am,

Sincerely yours,

Sebe Dale

1903

Baron Franz von Krebs was born in Castle Cachem, whose towers rise above the gently flowing waters of the Mosel River in the Rhine province of Germany. What persuaded him to leave his ancestral home and become a pioneer in America is not disclosed, but in 1730 he took ship and arrived eventually in Mobile, which from that time on was his home or chief residence, though he lived in Pascagoula also, where he owned and operated the first cotton gin of which there is any local record.

The Baron dropped his title and the "von" into the ocean as he came over, and became known as Sieur Francis Krebs. He married a daughter of Joseph Simon de la Pointe and Jeanne Puluot of Canada; he had a son, Hugo, and one daughter, Marie Josephine Krebs.

Francis Krebs married Marie Louise de Belle Isle, daughter of Moreau Augustine de Belle Isle and Marie Louise de Guilorie de Isle a Guillory, his wife.

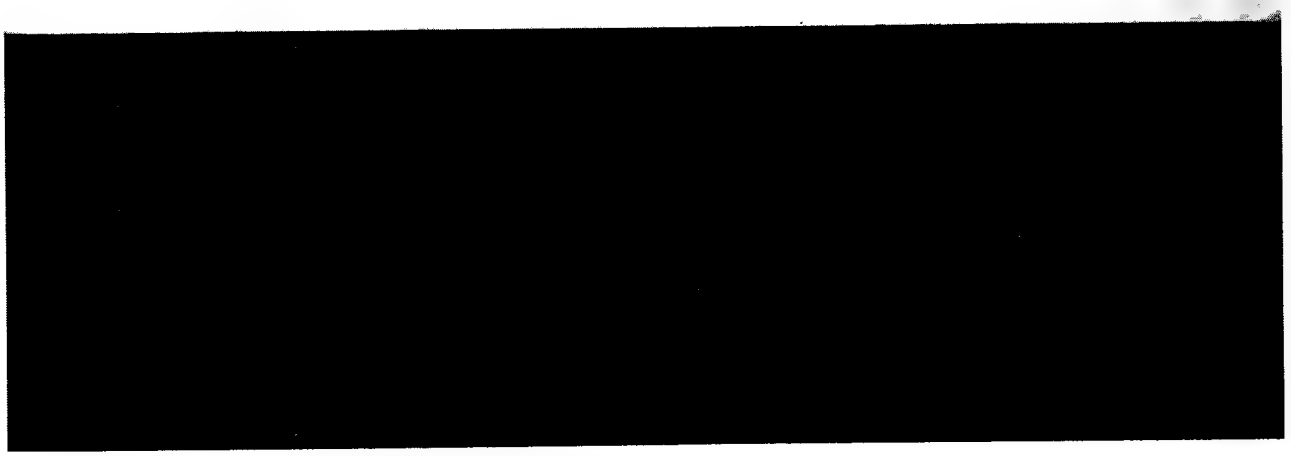
Pierre Krebs married Aline Peteet, of Pascagoula, and it is said that from that marriage are descended the Sandses and Rapiers of Mobile.

Hugo Krebs married Marie de Josieuse, of New Orleans.

Marie Josephine Krebs was married to Captain Antione Narbona, mentioned as belonging to the French Navy. Their daughter Ana (also spelled Anna) Narbona, became the wife of Sig. Don Enrique Grimarest, the most distinguished figure in the whole ghostly company; for in the Archives of the Indies at Seville is a copy of a letter signed by Don Bernardo de Galvez, the governor of Louisiana, proposing to the King of Spain that Don Enrique, Captain in the regiment of Navarre, be made governor of Mobile. The date of this document is May 26, 1781. There are in the same archives two other papers relating to Grimarest. One announces his promotion to be lieutenant-colonel for "distinguished merits contracted at the capture of Mobile, and the other is the royal license granted Grimarest to marry Dona Ana Narbona.

Hamilton's Colonial Mobile registers Grimarest's title as "Political and Military Governor of the Town of Mobile and its District." The town is sometimes called in the Spanish documents "Plaza de la Movila", says Hamilton. It appears that Grimarest began his governorship in 1783. It was in that year, on December 26, that he lost his wife Ana, and the burial took place in the public cemetery, possibly the one just west of Jackson Street.

A descendent of Hugo Krebs and Marie de Josieuse, but whether immediate or not is not stated, was Joseph Krebs, who, as related in the family records, married William Fisher's daughter, and it was Joseph Krebs' daughter, Corinne Krebs, who was married in great state, July 15, 1850, to Henry G. Humphries, in her father's house, Conti and Hamilton Streets.



Henry G. Humphries was a successful cotton man here before the war. He was a member of the secession convention in Montgomery, from Mobile County in 1861; provost marshal at Mobile, 1862-3; and enrolling officer, 1864-5. He had a long lineage, beginning with Sir John Humphries, a native of Dorsetshire, England, who was a member of the illustrious house of Bohun. Sir John's wife was Lady Luch, daughter of Baron Clinton, eleventh Earl of Lincoln. Sir John was deputy-governor of Massachusetts. A descendent, John J. Humphries, moved to Columbus, Mississippi, and there engaged largely in cotton planting. His son, Dr. W. N. Humphries, was a trustee for the Mississippi College for Women, and his son, Henry G., settled in Mobile in 1819.

Mr. Humphries built the handsome house now standing at the southwest corner of St. Louis and Conception streets, and it was there his daughter, Marie, became the wife of the Hon. Marion Gaines, of Austin, Texas. It is now the home of Mrs. Nina Hood Boykin, a daughter of the late O. J. Hood.

It may be mentioned tha t the old Krebs house, northwest Conti and Hamilton streets, lately removed, was occupied in 1865 by Louis D. Krebs; in 1866, by Mrs. M. Krebs; in 1878, by L. D. Krebs, and in 1886 by Miss Florida B. Krebs, by whom, in 1901, it was sold to the Mobile Library Association.

A few stray ends may now be knotted and the work will be as complete as the material at command permits it to be. There is a note about Chevalier de Belle Isle, whose daughter Sieur Francis or Francois Krebs married. The chevalier arrived in these parts June 4, 1721, on the good ship Portefaix from France, along with DeGuilloric and DeJosieuse, whose names play some part in this narrative, and Dubas, Senac, Petat and Vivia, whose names do not. The archives in Paris record a grant under the charter of the Western Company, September 7, 1717, to Count M. A. de Belle Isle, chevalier at the court of Louis of France and general of the marine in Louisiana (in 1730). Belle Isle appears to have come over to occupy his grant and grow up with the country.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, COUNTY OF JACKSON

In the name of God amen. I, René Krebs living in the county and state above mentioned and possessing perfectly both my judgement and all my memory, I make, order dictate and declare my testament in the following manner and in the form hereinafter descreed expressing my last will.

I resign my soul to allmighty God, hoping that my sins will be forgiven through the merit and the mediation of our Lord Jesus Christ and my body I resign to the earth to be buried there according to the preferences of my testamentary executors hereafter named and the goods of this world that God has confided to me I have disposed and I give the, as follows, to be divided, shared, distributed and alotted after my death in the manner I have desired. (I have desired... It looks as though this were intended. But the form is ungrammatical and unintelligible)

1. I will, I order and declare and my will is that the three slaves; Zepherin, Constance and Bonne shall belong to Marie, my wife, as property coming from her mother, Madame Dupont.

I wish, I order and my will is also that the property known as the residence of Mme Dupont, mother of Marie my wife, belongs also to Marie, my wife, as property descending from her mother; the sale of the said three slaves and of the said residence having been passed to my name at the time of probate of the estate of Mme Dupont.

2. I will, I order and my will is that my residence on the banks of the Pascagoula river, which I occupy at present, be given in a life estate (en jouissance) for her life time to Marie my wife.

3. I will, I order, and my will is that my boat Zulime not be sold for a year after my death or longer, if my executors think that the said boat con continue to navigate with advantage and my will is that the income from the boat during this extent of time be remitted to Marie, my wife.

4. I will, I order and my will is that all the rest of my property be sold, the half of the product of that sale I bequeath and I give to Marie, my wife, as having two children to rear of whom I leave her guardian and tutrice. The other half of the said property, I will and my will is that it be divided equally among all my heirs. I wil also and such is my will, that Marie, my wife be guardian of Nathalie, my grand-daughter (daughter of my son) of whom I am the guardian.

5. I will and I order that on the properties of which I make disposition in the preceding articles there be levied the sum sufficient for my executors to acquit, pay and liquidate all my just debts and every sort of expense which they will have been obliged to incur for the execution of this my present will and testament.

6. I will and I order that the executors of this my present will and testament (which contains my last will relatively to the division and the distribution which I intend, is to be made of my property and which my executors will carry out immediately after my body is consigned to the earth.

By virtue of

The formalities required by the law of this state concerning wills and by these precents I choose and name my two sons-in-law Hilaire Krebs and J. E. Sarrazin executors of my last will and testament.

Dear Regina:

They arrived! I mean the Xerox copies of certain records in the St. Louis Cathedral, which I mentioned in my letter to you of July 14, 1971.

The net result is that I am more confused than ever. I was anxious to learn the name of the maternal grandmother of Agnes Krebs, so I ordered the baptismal records of two of her brothers, which I sent you July 14. As you already know, one of the records does not show the name of the maternal grandmother, whereas the other is written in such a manner that it can be taken two ways, St.Pé, which is a La. name, or Sarpí, which is the old way of spelling the prominent family name Sarpy.

Mrs. Forsyth, in her very coöperative manner, as usual, dug up several baptisms of Agnes' mother's siblings, and I get a confusion: Sappé, Sappè and Sapet. I therefore prepared the attached digest of these records, entitled: What's The Name, Please? and passed it around at a meeting of the Genealogical Research Society of N. O. yesterday. The only positive reply forthcoming then came from a Sarpy descendant, who says most positively that it could not be Sarpy, because they were not here in 1752, and furthermore, in all his research he has not found a Cecile or Cecille in the family in La.

So, we have another problem: What was the family name of Agnes' grandmother.

In Mrs. Forsyth's research, however, she also found a very interesting 1721 marriage of Paul Durif, "soldat, natif de Clermont en Auvergne" and Marie Curé, "natif de Paris". This couple could easily be the grandparents of Mrs. Augustin Krebs.

So, as usual in genealogy, the answer to one question is simply the raising of two or more other questions.

Sincerely,

Glen

Pascagoula, Mississippi 39567

Dear Mrs. Gautier:

I found your name in Andrews and Higgins' Creole Mobile and am seeking information concerning my paternal great great grandfather Thomas Hawkins (b. 1800 Maryland) who married Evelina Krebs about 1834 and established a family in the Pascagoula area (1850 Jackson Co. census).

I am trying to establish the following records:
Thomas Hawkins--marriage to Evelina Krebs c. 1833 death before 1880
Charles Hawkins--son of Thomas and Evelina: birth 1840
marriage to Carrie Sticker c. 1868 death c. 1873
Emanuel Alexander Hawkins--son of Charles and Carrie:
birth 21 February 1871.
All of the above supposedly took place in Pascagoula or the immediate area.

I have been to the Pascagoula (Jackson County) Courthouse, the public library there, and have written Mrs. J. E. Krebs all to no avail.

I know that Evelina, her sons Thomas and David, and Carrie with her young family were in Galveston, Texas by 1880.

Any sources of additional information or proof of the above records would be really appreciated.

Sincerely,

Norma Hawkins Kitzman

In the bosom of his family, to the members of which he was equally and tenderly attached, and between whom there exists a union of feeling and sentiment as strong as it is rare, he was seen at his best. The comfort and happiness of his wife and children were his first thought; for them he lived and for their sakes he denied himself and toiled, no burden too onerous. Indulgent to a fault his parental authority and influence were never relaxed; reproof, when necessary, was given without a trace of anger or petulance; and, as just were his commands, as gentle his way, that eager and cheerful acquiescence in his wishes was invariably yielded without murmur or cavil. Of such it can be truly said; never had children a better father, never was a father blessed with better children.

The war came, and, what with profit of mill and farm, Fernando Cartier, even if not rich, was comfortable and beyond the reach of want. His first intention was to go to the front, but seeing that he could be of more service as a provider than as a soldier, he yielded to the solicitations of his neighbors, who entreated him to remain at home and look after their families. How faithfully he performed the obligations imposed upon him the land here around and the living lamp, telling testimony, as the war continued comforts and luxury disappeared, and a hard subsistence even was not always to be had. Up country with others, Fernando Cartier, now a middle-aged man, found it a difficult matter to provide food for his family. At times a single meal of corn bread alone was all his table could afford; but no matter how small his own supply the women and children for whom he promised to provide were freely given a share. In a few years, after the war, he built the old which now stands, and, in connection with his sons, Henry and Walter, established on a strong basis the firm of F. Cartier & Sons.

His life since then is too well and favorably known, to need much comment. The spot chosen for his residence is admirably situated and had been made singularly charming by nature. If he had one weakness---a weakness, surely, free from even the shadow of a blame, it was an honest pride in the beautiful home he had secured for himself and family. Spacious grounds, thickly shaded by magnificent oaks, an numerous and close growing as to keep the heat of the summer's sun in the center of a commodious dwelling, built low and surrounded on all sides with large, covered piazzas---so typical of the old Southern homes. Directly in front, the East Pascagoula river, gliding along to the Gulf; to the south and to the left or north of the house, an orchard of orange trees, now adding rich coloring and planted and tended by himself; to the right, and somewhat to the rear down a gentle decline, a spring of clear, cool water, of unfailing supply, comes from under a hill and pours its limpid stream over a dress bed into the garden, once a combination of marsh and swamp, but now turned, through his own labor into a spot where Flora in luxuriant profusion has scattered vegetable and most brilliant flowers. A little further down to the right, fronting the river and close to the water's edge, stands the mill, that occupied his life with well-deserved success, that gave a generous hospitality to his friends, gave food and security to his wife and children, comfort and happiness to his declining years. Surely, his old eyes could not rest on a more beautiful picture, or in one of his own skillfully of his well-planned gallery; surely, it was an honorable pride, in keeping with his sturdy nature, that made gems of his beautiful home a sweet to his eyes.

And here, after an illness of a few days, he died, with his devoted wife and children, brother and sister around his bedside, smiling down nothing that affection could supply or child could perform, he sank almost as in, ended a struggle, into that last slumber, which, sooner or later, must close the eyelids of all of human born.

To his children, upon whom he was able to bestow, to a noble degree, his own estimable qualities, he leaved the precious, the priceless heritage of an unspotted name---which none of a devoted, loving, tender, indulgent husband, father and brother; the name of a true and sincere friend; the name of a good and useful citizen; the name of an honest, upright, gentle-hearted man.

Dear Mr. Ros:

I am sorry for the delay in writing you, after my phone call. The press of business as well as life on the farm in the summer managed to get in the way of my good intentions.

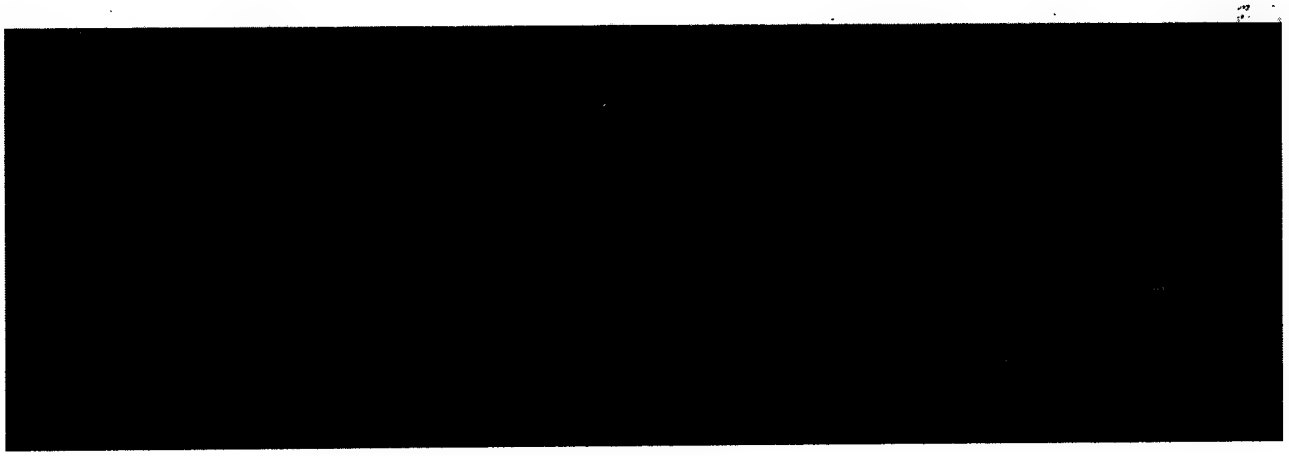
Neumagen

I am enclosing a map of the area of Germany we visited last month, also circling Numagen (Nu is pronounced like Mew). ~~Numagen~~ is in the wine growing area famouse for the white Mosel wines. In the last 4 or 5 years it has been recognized ardeological as the summer home of Constantine (he wintered down the Mosel river at Trier, which is famous for it's Roman ruins.) The economic base of the community is wine and tourism - am told fishing is good in the Mosel!

As you know Hugo Ernestus Krebs, the 7th of 8 eight children was the son of Johann Krebs (Kreibs) and Anna Charitas Fritsch, both of whom died in Numagen, the marriage, births of children and death certificates are on file at the church.

My visit to Numagen was only about 2 hours, so I did not have time to get all the exact families straight. About 30% of the town are "Krebs" (all related) and about another 35% are direct descendants. All from the same family! The area is beautiful! The people that I had a chance to meet were extremely warm, friendly and very excited about having a "famous" American connected to their family. We met briefly with the Oberbergermeister (Lord Mayor), who speaks some english, claims to read it better. We had an interpreter with us - although many of the townspeople speak some english (no doubt due to the tourism) involved conversation was difficult.

This trip to Numagen was arranged by my hosts in Zweibrucken - there is a famous Saint, hopefully I am correct that his name is Nicholas de Krebs. He is buried in a church in Rome - and his "heart" is a holy relic in the church at Kues (Numagen did not have a church of it's own at that time). This Saint is highly regarded by the Germans in the lands between the Mosel and Rhine, the population being 99% Catholic. Unfortunately, I lacked the time to further investigate Nicholas, but he should be easy to trace. As I mentioned, I am a descendant of this family through Hugo's daughter Marie Marguerite m. Juan de Gradenigo (etc. through the Voorhies, Mouton & Robichaux's in Louisiana). Since many of these people are in Louisiana history books, I grew up with discussion of various orgins - when the time came for a trip to Germany, going to Numagen seemed like an adventureous thing to do - particularly with such enthusiasm from my hosts!



By way of explanation - when Cornwallis was defeated at Yorktown, it was by the Deux Pont Brigade of Zweibrucken, then under French territory. The Zweibrucken's are proud, they claim to have been the "only German's who fought on the right side of the Revolutionary War!! " The relationship between York County & Zweibrucken was strengethened in the last 10 or so years,and they became our "Sister City". A delegation was invited, and visited our County in October -1976 during bi-centennial celebrations at Yorktown. Our visit in June, was by return invitation for the opening of their Rose Festival - Zweibrucken being famous for its roses and horses. Our delegation consisted of two members of Planning Commission (my position); 2 from School Board; 2 from Bi-Centennial Committee; and 1 member of the Board of Supervisors. A local historian accompanied us as our translator (a necessity). Some of the delegates took family, and our total was 18.

Our host in Neumagen was Oskar Krebs, Romerstr. 65, 5559 Neumagen-Dhron/Mosel, West Germany. (their numbers, address-wise are reversed compared to ours). Should you desire to write, I would suggest that the Oberbergermeister would be the appropriate person, perhaps in care of Oskar Krebs. Formality is the rule, and as we were "cautioned" many times before our visit "the chain of command is important to them"!! Also, enclosed is a copy of the brochure from where we had lunch - it also has a map.

Just noticed, I have been spelling Neumagen incorrectly on the first page!

I might also suggest that more information can be obtained from the German National Tourist Office, 630 5th Avenue,, NY,NY 10020. As I mentioned Neumagen is a popular tourist spot - particulary in July, August & September during the "wine-tasting" season.

The climate is considerably cooler than that of Mississippi - in summer! Evenings do require a jacket or sweater. Winters I have been told are milder.

Lastly, one of the delegates who accompanied me on this brief visit suggested that Pascagoula should make the wines of Neumagen the official wine of your community!

If I can answer any questions, please let me know. The translator who accompanied us has also offered to act as a go-between if that is desired.

Sincerely,

Dana R. Rist

Dear Ms. Meitz:

I am enclosing copies of pages from "Four Centuries on the Pascagoula" by Cyril Edward Cain; and this is all we can provide on William C. Seaman. Any Biloxi records would be in Harrison County, Miss. Gulfport, Miss. being that County Seat.

We do not do research and have genealogical records only hwne contained in these two volumes by Dr. Cain (a former Professor at Miss. State University, Starkville, Miss.) They are out of print and not available for purchase.

We do not have a charge but you may remit $1.50 to cover cost of copying, as we do not have a copying machine and have it done for us.

Dear Sir,

I am researching the Goff line of my family ancestry and would like to know if there would be any information available at or through the Spanish Fort Museum that would be helpful to me.

My Goff ancestors were settlers in the Jackson County area since 1825 and earlier perhaps. I will appreciate any information you may be able to supply me with or appreciate any suggestions you may make.

Thank you very much!

Dear Mrs. Stringfellow:

I am in receipt of your letter of June 15th regarding the history of the Huey family so that you may use the same in connection with joining the DAR.

Your grandmother, Mrs. Mary C. Owens, was Mary C. Huey before marriage and the youngest sister of my grandfather, Dr. Robert Emmett Huey. Your grandmother was born May 13th, 1834, and died May 14th, 1856, being only 22 years and 1 day of age at death.

Tracing from your grandmother backward I list them as follows:

Robert Davis Huey and wife, Eleanor Huey, were your great-grandparents;
James Huey and wife, Jane Huey, were your great, great-grandparents;
Hercules Huey and wife, Katherine Huey, were your great, great, great-grandparents;
James Huey and wife, Margaret Huey, were your great, great, great, great-grandparents.

the only authentic history of the family is a letter that was written by the double first cousin of my grandfather Huey, Major General James G.L. Huey, of the Confederate Army dated June 19th, 1884, to my father, George W. Huey, and which was as follows:

"Dear Cousin George Huey:

Yours of the 10th instant was received on yesterday, and as you ask for the genealogy of the Huey Family, and being the natural custodian of the history of our race, I will at once proceed to furnish the main facts as I had them from records through my father, from my grand-father, James Huey, many years ago. Premising that I am the oldest son of the oldest living sons, with issue, of the family, for nearly two hundred years, in unbroken succession, I do so now, being admonished that advanced years and feeble health counsed me to do whatever is done, quickly.
We were originally of Scotch stork, who sailed from the shores of Scotland soon after the battle of the Boyne, in Ireland in 1690, by which, the Catholics of the southern part of the island, were defeated by the forces of King William, and opening up the country to protestant immigration. The enterprising people of the adjacents coasts of Scotland availed themselves of the opening of a fine country emigrated in considerable numbers to the Emerald Isle, landing mostly in Londonderry, and spreading out in the direction of Belfast, occupied the countries of Down and Antrim, forming what was designated the Scotch-Irish population of that fertile portion of the country, where our immediate race of people became Irishmen, though of course Celtic blood and were, of course, in faith and practice, real protestants. I have in my genealogical family bible, the names of the old fathers, who I suppose were all respectable people, dating from the marriage connections formed. My great-grandfather, Hercules Huey, was the son of James Huey and Margaret Huey, the sister of Lord Hercules Ellis, and my great-grandfather in turn, married Catherine Persse, daughter of Sir Richard Persse, a gentleman of wealth and political importance in that country, and from this marriage a considerable family has sprung up. Their oldest son, Alexander Huey, was trained for military life, and through the influence of his mother's family, was made a captain of a war vessel in the British navy, and sent on a cruise to the East Indies, where he probable died more than a hundred years ago, without issue, and with no special record. James Huey, the second son and who was my grand-father, was a cabinet maker by trade, and a short time before our revolutionary war, had reached the Southern colonies, sailed to America, landing in Charleston, South Carolina, and soon after his mother and family came to America, and settled in the Waxhaw settlement in the upper part of the State, in what was afterward designated as Lancaster District, South Carolina. Grand-father joined the army under General Thomas Sumpter, and served till the close of the struggle, a part of the time under General Marion or wherever duty called him. He was in the battle of Camden under General Gates, and was there shot through the leg, but was able to get off the field after the defeat of the American Forces. I have often seen the scar. He was a good rider and an expert shot with the rifle.

His mother lost her first husband in the old country, and married a second time to a man by the name of Abram Adams, who came with her to America, where both died sometime after the peace with Great Britian, and both lie buried in the grave-yard at the old Waxhaw church, Lancaster District, South Carolina. After the war closed, grand-father married a Miss Polly Coffee, who lived a few mohths. Then he married again it was to his old sweetheart and first love, Miss Jane Walker, daughter of John Walker, and his wife, who was a Miss Boyd, and who were also immigrants from the County of Antrim, Ireland, the same from which he and family came to America. When John Walker settled in the old Waxhaw neighborhood, he opened what was then called a good country store, and soon had accumulated a large stock of cattle, while his eldest son, Andrew Walker took charge as herdsman. Being an ~~expert horseman, when the British~~ army overran the country under Lords Rawdon and Cornwallis, he organized a company of which his cowboys made a part, and harassed the enemy a good deal in their foraging raids, and at one time after desperate flight, took thirteen prisoners, and with them effected an exchange for his brother, Thomas Walker, and five others who were then in Camden jail, among whom was Andrew Jackson, the distinguished hero of New Orleans, most of them mere boys, and captured in the surrounding country. Andrew Walker's name appears with credit in several histories which I have seen, and I also remember the old man himself in his last years.

The children of the marriage of my grand-father to Jane Walker, were Alexander Boyd Huey, my father; Robert Davis, who was your grand-father; John Boyd; James and Thomas Walker, together with Jennie Huey and who married a Mr. David Walkup.

Grand-father like all our family, was a natural mechanic, and was skillful with tools, and was made useful while in the army in making and repairing wagons and after settling in life, followed that occupation in connection with his farm, where after my day, he was a good workman, using his old country tools, among which I remember the old navy barrel augers, which he always preferred to the American Screw augers. Grand-father was born in Antrim County, Ireland, May 8, 1759, and died April 6, 1836. ~~Grand-mother lived several years~~ longer.

My father and your grand-father, married sisters, daughters of William McCain, who married Eleanor Johnson of an English family whose brother's son, Richard M. Johnson, distinguished himself as an Indian fighter and with his own hand, slew the great Indian Chief Tecumseh, and was afterward made Vice President of the United States at the time that Martin Van Buren, was President. The McCains were also Scotch people with an admixture of English stock and were a quite, peaceable and industrious family, the older ones taking an active part in the struggle for independence. Our grand-father, William McCain, with his father, first settled in Pennsylvania, then removed to North Carolina and lived in Cane Creek, Mecklingburg County, and were all farmers, making themselves comfortable by tilling the soil.

In the bosom of his family, to the members of which he was equally and tenderly attached, and between whom there exists a union of feeling and sentiment as strong as it is rare, he was seen at his best. The comfort and happiness of his wife and children were ever his first thought; for them he lived and for their sakes he deemed no sacrifice too great, no burden too onerous. Indulgent to a fault his parental authority and influence were never relaxed; reproof, when necessary, was given without a trace of anger or passion; but, as just were his commands, so gentle his way, that eager and cheerful acquiescence in his wishes was invariably yielded without murmur or cavil. Of each it can be truly said; never had children a better father, never was a father blessed with better children.

The war came, and, what with profit of mill and farm, Fernando Gautier, was, if not rich, comfortable and beyond the reach of want. His first intention was to go to the front, but, seeing that he could be of more service as a provider than as a soldier, he yielded to his neighbors, who entreated him to remain at home and look after their families. How faithfully he performed the obligations imposed upon him the dead have borne and the living bear willing testimony, as the war continued comforts and luxury disappeared, and a bare subsistence even was not always to be had. In common with others, Fernando Gautier, now a middle-aged man, found it a difficult matter to provide food for his family. At times a simple meal of corn bread alone was all his table could afford; but no matter how scant his own supply the women and children for whom he promised to provide were freely given a share. In a few years, after the war, he built the mill which now stands, and, in connection with his sons, Henry and Walter, established on a strong basis the firm of F. Gautier & Sons.

His life since then is too well and favorably known, to need much comment. The spot chosen for his residence is admirably situated and had been made singularly charming by nature. If he had one weakness---a weakness, surely, free from even the shadow of a blame, it was an honest pride in the beautiful home he had secured for himself and family. Spacious grounds, thickly shaded by magnificent oaks, so numerous and close growing as to defy the heat of the summer's sun; in the center of a commodious dwelling, built low and encircled on all sides with large, covered piazzas---so typical of the old Southern homes. Immediately in front, the West Pascagoula river, gliding along to the Gulf; in the rear, and to the left or north of the house, an orchard of orange trees, just coming into bearing and planted and tended by himself; to the right, and somewhat in the rear down a gently decline, a spring of clear, cool water, of unfailing supply, gushes from under a hill and pours its limpid stream over a cress bed into the garden, once a combination of marsh and swamp, but now turned, through his own labor into a spot where flourish in luxuriant profusion the choicest vegetables and most brilliant flowers. A little further down to the right, fronting the river and close to the water's edge, stands the mill, that crowned his life with well-deserved success, that gave a generous hospitality to his friends, comfort and security to his wife and children, content and happiness to his declining years. Surely, his old eyes could not rest on no more beautiful picture, as he sat on the corner of his well-shaded gallery; surely, it was an honorable pride, in keeping with his kindly nature, that made praise of his beautiful home so sweet to his ears.

To his children, upon whom he was able to impress, in a marked degree, his own characteristics, he leaved the precious, the priceless heritage of an unspotted name---the name of a devoted, loving, tender, indulgent husband, father and brother; the name of a true and sincere friend; the name of a good and useful citizen; the name of an honest, upright, noble-hearted man.

In 1722 an English ship captain named Ross found cotton and a gin on a Pascagoula farm belonging to Hugo Ernestūs Krebs, a native of Moselle's town of Neumagen in Germany. He left fourteen grown children who settled in the Mobile District, particularly in the western portions near the Pascagoulas and Singing River around Kreb's lake. The farm house was still standing in 1906, at which time it was said to be 175 years old. As in many houses along the Gulf Coast, it was constructed of heavy cypress lumber which was in excellent condition almost two centuries after the house was built.[4] In the census rosters for the Mobile District the name of Krebs or its Spanish equivalent of Kreps appears in the person of Augustin Krebs, who lived at Pascagoula with his wife, children and slaves.[5] Francis Krebs asked the government for a title to Round Island in November, 1783, and the land grant was approved. This 43-year-old settler in 1786 was married to a 40-year-old wife, had two children, three mulatto slaves, and three Negro slaves working their two plantations on which they raised corn.[6] Hugo's son of the same name was married to Luisa LeFlau and lived on Royal Street in Mobile with his daughter Maria.[7] Joseph Krebs was 44 in 1786; he and his 23-year-old wife lived on a plantation with their two children, five mulatto and six Negro slaves and produced corn.[8] Margarita Krebs, who was probably Hugo, Jr.'s widow in 1796, rented her house to the commandant of Mobile for ten dollars a month.[9] Maria Krebs, the widow of Hugo, Sr., lived in Mobile in 1786 at the age of fifty. She had four children and eighteen slaves on her corn-producing plantation.[10] Mary Josephine (Juana) Krebs was the widow of Mobile militia commander Antonio de Narbonne. She died on her plantation, located on the American side of the Southern Boundary Line, on October 14, 1802, at the age of fifty-seven. She had various lots within the town of Mobile.[11]

The Krebs family were fiercely loyal to Spain, apparently because the Spanish government provided them with protection and, in one case, when Joseph Krebs and twelve other Pascagoulas settlers complained against the Indians killing livestock while on the road to New Orleans, the Spanish government provided the Indians with rations to prevent the practice.[54]

My dear Mrs. Gautier.

Thanks for being so sweet as to remember me, with all you have on your mind, and all the little folks you come in tact with.

Just the other day I referred a Mrs. Wilson from Kansas to you they were on their way to Mobil she was very interested in the Krebs family. Well, so many thanks to you, I'm returning the Material you sent to me, Thanks again.

Enjoyed my little visit with you and hope to see you again in the near future. If you ever get any information on Jacque Chauvin Charleville or Joseph Chauvin Charleville I will appreciate.

Have a good summer.

Dear Mrs.Gautier,

I received your letter to day and I am very happy to see that you are interested in the past history of your Family ! I made a pastime of writing about the old French settlements and colonies of North America, and even with the fact I am able to write only short biographies or notices in English (French being my native language) I will be very happy to tell you what I know about the settlement of the Soldiers of Napoléon in Alabama (1817-1821)

My main source of information was the excellent book of Mrs. Emma GELDERS STERNE "SOME PLANT OLIVE TREES " (Publishers Dodd, Mead & Cny -New York 1937. In short, the Generals Clausel, Lallemand (2 brothers) de Grouchy, having some connections in Philadelphia, through the Emigrés of the Revolution, and the French banker Stephen Girard, decided to emigrate in America, after Waterloo, when many of them were prosecuted by the French royalist government for having joined Napoléon's army during the Hundred Days. Général de Grouchy being the brother in law of Marquis de Condorcet (A French Philosopher who adopted Democratic ideals, even though he was an aristocrat) they built their first settlement "DEMOPOLIS (City of the people) after the principles of Condorcet in the "TABLEAU DE L'ESPRIT HUMAIN ". Having secured ,through their agent, Sharles Villars, a grant of the Territory of Alabama, situated at the confluence of Tombigbee and Black Warrior River, they built this town, and also Aigleville in the present Marengo County of Alabama.

Now, since your ancestor, M.Auguste Frédéric de Saint-Ferreol (I suppose the name should be so spelled because St-Ferreol was a very popular Saint of the Rhone country in France) since Monsieur de St.F came in 1820 from France, I suppose he may have wanted to join the colonists and being decouraged to do so, because at that time, they were already on the verge of disbanding. A federal survey decided against their ownership when Alabama became a state of the Union in 1819; later on, trouble with hired German emigrants who worked on their vineyards damaged the wine-harvest. Of course, these things could not be known in France, on account of the slowness of boats in that time and incertainty of the mail. If the spot where M.A.de St.F. stayed is "Greensboro " I am not able to find "Gainesboro " it will be even more probable Greensboro ~~xx~~ being situated on the "Black Warrior "river not far from Demopolis. It is only a surmise, but most likely because ,after 1821 (Death of Napoléon) the "Vine and Olive Colony "was finished.

I was very much interested by the story of your ancestor and suppose that what you call "the siege of the Republicans " means the dreadful slaughter of Royalist people in Lyons by Terrorist Fouché (Les Cannonades de Lyon) His stand against the Russians would take place during the 1812 fateful campaign of Napoléon against Alexander 1rst.

If you read French you may be interested in securing some works about the period of "White Terrorism" (1815-1822) which followed the Fall of Napolénn. I would recommend the works of A. Houssaye, the Songs of Beranger, and on the royalist side "LA RABOUILLEUSE " de Balzac, (translated in English by G.Saintbury as "A Bachelor's Establishment, -President Publish.Cny New York) Remembrances of the "SOLDATS LABOUREURS ", in wallpapers clocks, sign-shops and so on, were still numerous when I was young in Paris.

If I can be of more help for your research, I will gladly do so; since I live on the Coast with my Son 1rst Ltnt U.S.A.F. I have been fascinated by this beautiful country and its thrilling history, since its discovery by the French brothers, Iberville and Bienville. Meanwhile, thank you very much for the folder about "The old Spanish Fort ". I have been to Pascagoulas with my Son, visited "The Longfelow house " and Dockyards but we did not have time for the fort.

Very sincerely yours.

Excerpts of a song of Béranger about the Napoléon Veterans in Alabama :

LE CHAMP D'ASILE (Shelter)

..Un chef de bannis courageux
Implorant un lointain asile
A des Sauvages ombrageux Disait "L'Europe nous exile..
Heureux enfants de ces forêts,
De nos maux apprenez l'histoire,

SAUVAGES, nous sommes FRANÇAIS
PRENEZ PITIÉ DE NOTRE GLOIRE !...

DEMOPOLIS est consacré,
Elevez vous, cité nouvelle
Soyez nous un port assure Contre la fortune infidèle...

Peut être aussi, des plus hauts faits
Nos fils vous racontant l'histoire,
Vous diront "Nous sommes Français,

Copied from the diary of Mrs. Josephine Frederic Donovan, daughter of Louis Agustus Frederic de St. Ferol

Louis Augustus Frederic de St. Ferol-Born August 28th 1794 at Lyons, France on the river Rhone on the day of the siege by the Republicans.

He was the son of Jean Baptiste Athanisal Frederis de St. Ferol and Marie Antoinette Gerot.

He and his mother were taken by friends when he was less than one hour old to a coal mine down on the Rhone which belonged to the Fredericks. They remained hidder there for two years before they were found by Jean Baptiste Frederic, who was a Royalist and remained in the army only leaving when it was necessary to exile himself.

Louis was taken from school at the age of 16 and put into the army. He was a corporal under Napoleon Bonaparte. He was decorated with the Legion of Honor at the age of 18. He and a small group were in the mountains scouting when a party of Russians outnumbering them was seen approaching. Louis said to his men, "Let us not be taken as cowards. Let us charge on them," which they did frightening the Russians with their boldness, and taking a cannon from them. For this act of bravery, Napoleon decorated Louis Frederic. He remained in the army with Napoleon until his exile to St. Helena.

He came to America in 1820 arriving the day the first steamboat was launched by Robert Fulton.

From New York he went to Gainsboro, Ala. Waringo Co., and then to Pascagoula , Miss. He was the first Post Master in Pascagoula. The mail was brought to Pascagoula in row boats, which met the steamboats that were operating between New Orleans and Mobile. (The channel was too shallow for the steamboats to come into Pascagoula harbor.)

He was married in Jan. 10, 1829 to Marie Emelie Delmas of East Pascagoula, Miss. Died 1840 in East Pascagoula, Miss.

Buried in French Cemetary-Old Spanish Fort-Pascagoula, Mississippi

Surviving him was one brother, Henry and a sister Josephine who was blind.

Also 5 children-namely, Washington, Jefferson-Hermes, Armando and Josephine.

From books "David Glasgow Farragut", Our First Admiral and "Admiral in the Making" by Prof. Charles Lee Lewis of the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md. Copyright 1941:

David's father, George Anthony Magin Garragut was born Sept. 29, 1755 at Ciudadella on the island of Minorca of excellent Spanish stock. He died June 4, 1817 on his plantation in west Pascagoula, Mississippi.

His mother was Elizabeth Shine, born June 7, 1765 in Lenoir County, N. C. near Kinston. She died of yellow fever in New Orleans, near Lake Ponchatrain on June 22, 1808, where the family had settled. She had nursed Capt. David Porter's father until his death in 1808, which occurred on the same day she died.

After her death it became necessary at once to provide care for her children, who were very small. They were placed with different families because the father, George Farragut was on duty on Gunboat 13 in New Orleans and couldn't take care of them.

The oldest child, William Augustus Claiborne Farragut had become an active midshipman on the New Orleans station March 14, 1808. After his marriage his children were Glasgow, twins Fineit and Pamalee, who married brothers by the name of Raby and a daughter who married a Flotte.

James Glasgow Farragut, born Jan. 20, 1804 was taken under the wing of Capt. David Porter, who was very grateful to Mrs. Farragut for her kindness in nursing his father. James later changed his name to David, in admiration and love for his guardian Capt. Porter.

Nancy Farragut, born Jan. 20, 1804 was adopted by William Boswell and in 1826 she married Louis Gourlie and lived in Pascagoula, Mississippi, until her death on June 6th, 1883. She lived in a house picturesquely situated on the river and was known as a very gracious hostess.

Elizabeth was placed in the care of a Mrs. Dupont near Pascagoula. She married Celestin Dupont and had four children: Eugenia, Zulme, Isadore and Louis. Mrs. Dupont apparently died before the Civil War.

Both sons and husbands of the daughters were in the Confederate Service.

George Antoine Farragut, the youngest child, died at the age of ten by drowning in the vicinity of New Orleans.

The Farraguts started life in a log cabin in Tennessee and the father, George, ran a ferry. They went to New Orleans on a flatboat, which took weeks and settled near Lake Ponchatrain. This was in 1807 and shortly thereafter George, the father, bought a plantation of 900 acres in West Pascagoula on the Pascagoula River where it flowed into Mississippi Sound. It was named Point Plaquet, later Farragut's Point.

Dear Mrs. Gautier:

I acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 5th, 1970, inquiring about Mrs. G. Hardy Smith. Caroline Smith was my mother. She passed away on May 14th, 1961, as the result of a heart attack. I am sure that it is she you were looking for as Mother had told me about being in the hospital in Mobile at the time of my birth, which was just forty years ago.

My father, G. Hardy Smith is alive and well. I think your reference to the baby who died was to my mother's first son, Gerald, who was born in 1923, and who lived only a few days. I certainly appreciate your interest and I will tell my father of your inquiry.

Sincerely,

Hardy B. Smith

Dear Mrs. Gautier,

My wife is one of the many descendants of Hugo Ernestus Krebs. I have just received a very interesting letter from Mrs. J. E. (Rita) Krebs which has been quite helpful to me. She suggested that I write to you for a number of items:

1) Regina Rapier's book "Music in Mourning"
2) The chart by Bainbridge on Hugo Krebs (Chart No. 11)
3) The chart on Joseph Krebs (Chart No. 12)
4) The chart on Rene Krebs (Chart No 13)

If you will let me know the price of all of these and mailing expenses, I will send my check. If you prefer, you may send the items together with an invoice.

My wife and I hope to be in Pascagoula in the next few months and will drop by to visit and see the fort. It was only recently that we have found out about my wife's Krebs ancestry.

Thank you for your help.

Yours truly,

Dear Mrs Gautier:

I am a direct descendant of Joseph de LaPointe and his daughter, Marie Simon de La Pointe, who married Baron Hugo Ernestus Krebs. I descend from the daughter of thisc couple, Marguerite Krebs, who married Juan Gradenigo.

I have just recently returned from Mobile, Ala., where my cousin and I , Mrs C. L. Shumaker of New Orleans, tried to obtain the records from the old church there in Mobile, of the marriage of Marie Marguerite Krebs to Baron Krebs. We were told, in no uncertain terms, that we certainly could not have the records--- that we just possibly might get them if we engaged the services of a priest to do the research, and he must read and write French. We were willing to do this, but the priest was in a vile mood, and rather 'shooed' us out as tho we were insufferable nuisiances.

I have written to Louisville, Ky., to the librarian there asking if the library had the 1892 issues of Shober's Monthly Magazine--- you may know of the letter on old Spanish Fort written to Mrs Louis Fredric. Mrs Shumaker copied it from the Museum, when she visited there last year.

The Librarian replied that she was unable to find any letter (the answer to Mr. Shober's letter) printed in any of the old issues. Can you possibly straighten us out on afew facts regarding these people?

1st. What was the relationship of Admiral Joseph Simon de LaPoin to Madame Chaumont--- we have read that he was her nephew her brother--- her son-in-law.

2nd. What was the real name of Madame Chaumont? We read that Madame. la Marquise de Chaumont was the title bestowed on her by John Law

3rd. Was Marguerite Krebs the daughter of Baron Krebs by Marie Simon de La Pointe, or was she his daughter by a second wife--- Was the second wife's name, Anna Marie Chauvan?

4th. Was the wife of Admiral de La Pointe, Jeanne Puluiot of Canada? who were his parents? Hers?

5th. What was the name of Madame de la Prade, widow, who married Admiral Dupont--he succedded Admiral de La Pointe, did he not?
One account says she was the widowed daughter of Madame Chaumont, and came over with her (with the 300 engages)

6th. Where can we obtain copies of the Will of the old Baron Krebs who died in New Orleans, in 1776.
In the Cabildo Archives?

I realize this is a presumpuous letter-- please forgive me for assuming to address it to you, but I really have tried to get the information --- for years.

I am a friendof Mrs Herbert Parker of New Orleans---perhaps she will be kind enough to vouch for me.

I will be so very grateful for any help you may be able to give me regarding these people.

Most sincerely,
Doucette R. Ray

P.S. Mrs. Hull told Mrs. Shumaker she learned that Juan Gradenigo, Jr. B 1781 ran away to Egypt, etc.

If the Baron married in circa 1731, I am wondering if Marguerite Krebs Gradenigo was his Grand daughter, instead of his daughter

My dear Mrs Gautier:

I have just received your letter with the wonderful enclosures--- I am deeply grateful to you for your help.

The question that won't let me rest is: Was Madame Chaumont the mother-in-law of Admiral Simon de La Point, or his aunt, or his sister? I have read all three versions of this relationship.

Was Jeanne Juliout, of Canada, the FIRST wife of the Admiral? Mr Craighead's account of the family states my Marie Jeanne de La Point, (who married the Baron Krebs) was the daughter of this Jeanne Juliout. Mrs Shumaker (my cousin in N.O.) and I went to Mobile trying to get a copy of the marriage contract of Baron Krebs and Marie de La Pointe, but we were treated as if wewere vandals intent on destroying all their records--we were not even treated with reasonable courtesy by the ill-tempered priest who screamed and stormed at us, and practically ordered us out.

Oh, well, maybe it just wasn't his best day--maybe he had indigestion, or his feet hurt, or something.

Do you suppose the Historical Society has any record of the early marriages of those Mobile pioneers? I will gladly, even eagerly, pay for a typewritten copy of the marriage record of the old Baron and Marie Jeanne--it would show their parents.

I THINK my Marie Gradenigo, daughter of Marguerite Krebs and Jean Gradenigo was the grand daughter of the Baron. A copy of their marriage, or her birth (baptism) would be a prize.

Thank you for listening to my troubles.

I will be very glad to hear from you again.

Cordially yours,

Lucille Rayner Ray

P.S. You wouldn't be able to find your way around in El Paso now- I was born and reared there--I get lost up there these days. Thank your sister-in-law for me. D.R.

Dear Mrs Gautier :

Nice hearing from you again, am thrilled that you engineered such a splendid program honoring "HUGO ERNESTUS KREBS" to take place June 11, 1972 , it just seems "BIG TIME " and perfect in every detail, My Hats off to you.....

If possible to get my family together will try hard to be there , my two daughters , age 24, and 13 are at the age they cant get together .

My Antique Directory has been a sell out , I only want to print one a year , as my printers move& like molasses in Winter time . Its get hard to get anything done 1st class any more.

You ~~&~~ present a fine progress report on activities and attendance at the Old Spanish Fort, I am sure your sister "HATTIE" would be astounded at the manner in which you are carry on .

Was at Vicksburg last saturdayand Hon Frank Everett was ~~Master~~ Master of Cermonies ~~m~~, But. I beleive Edward Khayat can out do him. Enclosed is cliipings and ~~progra~~& program .

Mrs. Henry W. Gautier
641 Columbus Drive
Pascagoula, Mississippi

Dear Mrs. Gautier:

I apologize for being so long in answering your nice letter about the Grant and Krebs families. I have had unusually heavy demands upon my time from both my work at the plant and my outside activities. In fact, I am afraid that the situation will not improve for a matter of several weeks at the best.

I was pleased to learn about the activities of Mr. John Grant. I have also engaged help in having the records in West Chester, Pa. searched for information about the ancestory of Captain John Grant. I hope to write Mr. Grant soon.

I would be pleased to send you copies of my charts for the Historical Society files. My cousin Adele Grant has told me that she has had requests which total about seventeen copies. I have advised her that I would suggest that we wait until things solidify a bit. I am still getting information fast enough so that any charts I made now would be badly out of date within a few weeks. I feel that the same applies to a lesser extent to your request. I do not have but a single copy of the chart on hand at present which I could send. However, I am planning to send it to Professor Cyril Cain with the request that he makes it available to you.

Professor Cain has recently written me and he is among those whom I hope to write in the next few days.

With regard to the wills of Hense' and Cecile Krebs, I would very much like to have copies. I would prefer English translations. If needed I can make photographic copies and return them to you.

Thank you very much for you help. Professor Cain sent me a copy of outline of the Krebs line from the Baron to your husband. I'd like to know of the progress you make with him if it is convenient.

If you want copies of the charts now, let me know.

Yours very truly,

T. R. Bainbridge

P.S. If it should be convenient, I would very much like to have about three more copies each of the postcard and leaflet about the Old Spanish Fort. If there is any cost involved, let me know.

Mrs. Archie Gautier: Staying busy her

By JOANNE GEORGE ANDERSON

To be seventy years young is sometimes far more cheerful and hopeful than to be forty years old.
—Oliver Wendell Holmes

"I don't ever take my shoes off." That is how Mrs. Archie Blanche Quin Gautier describes her busy life.

Age has slowed her a bit (she will be 80 years young on Jan. 31), but Mrs. Gautier still maintains a work schedule that would tax a much younger person.

Getting Pascagoula's Old Spanish Fort established as a national museum has been one of her proudest accomplishments. Restoring, managing and promoting the fort have filled her hours and days these past 28 years.

The direction of the fort was a legacy from her sister, the late Mrs. Hattie (Hermes) Gautier. "The American Legion had occupied the fort until about 1948 or 1949," Mrs. Gautier recalled. "When the Legion moved to Market Street, Hattie, Vincent Ros, the late Dr. S. B. McIlwain and Mrs. McIlwain, George B. Hague, and the late Mr. Stratton of Lake Avenue met and decided to make the fort a tourist attraction. Others through the Jackson County Historical Society, who helped in the restoration were the late Mr. T. R. Wells, the late Judge Heidelberg, the late Mr. J. A. Stafford and Joiner Haltom Jr.

"The fort was empty when they began work. It leaked like a basket. Ingalls made the shutters copying original plans. Hattie and Mrs. Bessie B. Seely then began scavenging the county for historical items, relics and artifacts to be displayed at the fort. Hattie had taught school in Gautier so she knew half the county. She knew who to go to. Bessie loved antiques. They made a good team. I remember one day, for example, Hattie came home with a ropespring bed and an old clock."

Hattie Gautier somehow secured volunteer help to run the tourist attraction. She wrote a brief history of the fort for her volunteer guides to use. Door receipts were sufficient to pay utility bills and insurance and occasionally there was enough money left to pay volunteers from $4.50 to $7 for a day's work.

When Hattie Gautier died, Archie Gautier became director in 1955. "I really did it for Hattie," she said. "I knew she would have said 'Don't let this close up.' I took it because no one else would do it. I enjoyed the work. I would sometimes stay until seven o'clock at night if I had tourists there."

Mrs. Gautier did further research on the fort's history during her years as curator. Built in 1718 its history is fascinating: Simon de la Pointe constructed the building. Its walls are constructed of massive pine timbers, oyster shells, mud and moss. All outer walls are 18 inches thick. The fort is the oldest in the Mississippi Valley and has protected and sheltered generations of settlers from many nations. Nearby is the family cemetery of Baron Von Krebs who invented and operated a cotton gin 20 years before Eli Whitney announced his invention.

Mrs. Gautier received no salary for this work, a work she carried on until this April when she suffered a stroke. Though she is unable to be physically at the fort during her convalescence, she spends many hours each day handling fort correspondence. Postage is from her own pocketbook.

The preservation of the fort was assured when Mrs. Gautier succeeded in getting the outpost listed in the U.S. Directory of Museums. She has written to various experts throughout the country in an effort to identify and classify various objects which have been donated to the museum. She joined the National Historical Society so that the fort would be listed in the society's Yellow Book.

But the forst, as important as it is to her, has only filled a part of her life. She is responsible for organizing or helping organize many of Pascagoula's and Jackson County's active organizations. "If there's anything I don't belong to, let me know," she said. "If it doesn't exist, I'll organize it."

Friends point out that Mrs. Gautier is more than just a joiner or organizer. She's a worker. "I'm a joiner alright," she added, "but I work in everything I'm in."

Mrs. Gautier's work has been recognized locally, nationally and internationally.

She is listed in Who's Who in America for her effort in making the fort "a stopping place for tourists from all over America."

She is listed in the Dictionary of International Biography published in London and has been listed in Who's Who of American Women since 1955.

The Mississippi Press Register named her Citizen of the Week on Nov. 18, 1963.

In 1969 the Pascagoula Business and Professional Women's Club voted her Outstanding Citizen of Jackson County.

The Duchess de Chaumont Chapter of the DAR presented her in 1967 a certificate for "outstanding service in preserving the history of Jackson County."

The American National Red Cross presented her a certificate of appreciation for "selfless devotion to her community by active participation in Red Cross wartime and peacetime programs."

The B&PW Club in 1963 presented her its Outstanding Citizen's Certificate for service to Jackson County.

The Two Thousand Women of Achievement Diploma was awarded to her in 1969 from London, England, for "distinguished achievement."

She has a certificate of appreciation from President Harry Truman "in grateful recognition of valuable service contributed to the nation as (Selective Service) registrar during the period Aug. 30, 1948, to Sept. 18, 1948."

She is a charter member of the Jackson County Genealogical Society, Pascagoula Women's Club (past president), Pascagoula - Moss Point Art Association, Jackson County Historical Society ("I like history best of all," she commented.), Fort Maurepas 1699 Historical Society, Jackson County Library Association, Elks Auxiliary (organizer and first president), Community Concerts Association current vice president), Jackson County Bicentennial Association, Mississippi Archaeological Association and Mississippi Historical Society (past president).

She is a member of the Women's League, First Baptist Church, Cerebral Palsy (board member), Cobs Cemetery Association, School for Exceptional Children (board member), Singing River Art Association, National Historical Society (founding associate), International Platform Associate, Volunteer Service Council of Southern Mississippi (chapter representative), Intercontinental Biographical Association and Marquis Biographical Library Society (advisory member).

Born Jan. 31, 1896, in Panola, Miss., Mrs. Gautier was the second of five children of Charles and Lulie Catherine Quin Harrison. She remembers the family moved to Braxton when she was about three years old. Later they moved to a town no longer on the map, Old Hebron. It was in nearby New Hebron that she was educated through high school.

"School was just grand," she said. "I loved recess best of all. We played basketball. I was right into everything the school had. We had good teachers."

She worked toward a college degree at Normal College in Mendenhall in 1913-14 and then at Mississippi Southern in 1915. Her curiosity about the West led her to a summer semester's work at University of Southern California in 1922.

She taught at Kossuth, Miss., in 1915-16, Escatawpa from 1916 to 1918, Pascagoula from 1918 to 1920 and El Paso, Tex., from 1920 to 1922.

Something about Pascagoula and its beautiful Singing River lured her back to the Deep South and in 1922 she married Henry W. Gautier. (Sister Hattie [illegible] county's brother-Hermes earlier.)

[illegible] she said. "I wouldn't go anywhere else in the world. I just couldn't see myself living anywhere else."

Mrs. Gautier is one of the few residents who remember the singing of the phenomenal Pascagoula River. "It was heard from Gautier to Moss Point," she said. "I used to hear the Singing River. All of a sudden you'd hear a strange voice, like an alien voice. It would pass. Sometimes it would come back or come again from the same direction. I couldn't tell if it was from above or below the water."

Mrs. Gautier and her late husband lived most of their married life at her present address, 709 Columbus Drive. They had two sons. Robert Henry Gautier, a graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy, is a retired Naval captain. He was skipper of the first Ingalls-built submarine, USS Bluefish. Marvin McGehee "Mac" Gautier, a graduate of Tulane University, is a civil engineer employed by the Jackson County Port Authority.

Her home is one of many which made up an early Naval housing complex associated with a World War I shipyard, International Shipbuilding Corp. "Hermes Gautier, Bill Colmer (former Cong. William M. Colmer), and Tom Kell bought the Navy houses," she said. "Ours is one of the larger ones because it was built by the contractor for his own use." The Hermes Gautiers lived next door to the west and her brother John Earl Quin and Mrs. Quin live next door to the east.

Mrs. Gautier remembers that after 10 years of teaching and then substituting in the Pascagoula school system, she was ready for a change. "I enjoyed working with the Cub Scouts a lot when our boys were little," she said. "I was a den mother."

Soon Mrs. Gautier became less and less known for being an educator and better known for her numerous civic activities. "When Henry died, I had thought I'd resign from everything, but I couldn't," she said. "I'm not going to retire." She has traveled to Europe twice in recent years.

On Wednesday, Jackson County will honor this educator, civic worker, wife, mother, and historian at a special luncheon. Archie Gautier has enriched her 80 years by giving generously of herself. But possibly in the final writing, Jackson County has been enriched the more.

Ruskin once said that when we fail to praise a person who deserves praise, we deprive ourselves of one of the very happiest of our privileges, the privilege of rewarding labor that deserves a reward.

Wednesday, to be proclaimed Archie Gautier Day, is a day for Jackson Countians to exercise a happy privilege.

BARON FRANZ VON KREBS

Baron Franz von Krebs was born in Castle Cachem, whose towers rise above the gently flowing waters of the Mosel River in the Rhine province of Germany. What persuaded him to leave his ancestral home and become a pioneer in America is not disclosed, but in 1730 he took ship and arrived eventually in Mobile, which from that time on was his home or chief residence, though he lived in Pascagoula also, where he owned and operated the first cotton gin of which there is any local record.

The Baron dropped his title and the "von" into the ocean as he came over, and became known as Sieur Francis Krebs. He married a daughter of Joseph Simon de la Pointe and Jeanne Puluot of Canada; he had a son, Hugo, and one daughter, Marie Josephine Krebs.

Francis Krebs married Marie Louise de Belle Isle, daughter of Moreau Augustine de Belle Isle and Marie Louise de Guilorie de Isle a Guillory, his wife.

Pierre Krebs married Aline Peteet, of Pascagoula, and it is said that from that marriage are descended the Sandses and Rapiers of Mobile.

Hugo Krebs married Marie de Josieuse, of New Orleans.

Marie Josephine Krebs was married to Captain Antione Narbona, mentioned as belonging to the French Navy. Their daughter Ana (also spelled Anna) Narbona, became the wife of Sig. Don Enrique Grimarest, the most distinguished figure in the whole ghostly company; for in the Archives of the Indies at Seville is a copy of a letter signed by Don Bernardo de Galvez, the governor of Louisiana, proposing to the King of Spain that Don Enrique, Captain in the regiment of Navarre, be made governor of Mobile. The date of this document is May 26, 1781. There are in the same archives two other papers relating to Grimarest. One announces his promotion to be lieutenant-colonel for "distinguished merits contracted at the capture of Mobile, and the other is the royal license granted Grimarest to marry Dona Ana Narbona.

Hamilton's Colonial Mobile registers Grimarest's title as "Political and Military Governor of the Town of Mobile and its District." The town is sometimes called in the Spanish documents "Plaza de la Movila", says Hamilton. It appears that Grimarest began his governorship in 1783. It was in that year, on December 26, that he lost his wife Ana, and the burial took place in the public cemetery, possibly the one just west of Jackson Street.

A descendent of Hugo Krebs and Marie de Josieuse, but whether immediate or not is not stated, was Joseph Krebs, who, as related in the family records, married William Fisher's daughter, and it was Joseph Krebs' daughter, Corinne Krebs, who was married in great state, July 15, 1850, to Henry G. Humphries, in her father's house, Conti and Hamilton Streets.

Henry G. Humphries was a successful cotton man here before the war. He was a member of the secession convention in Montgomery, from Mobile County in 1861; provost marshal at Mobile, 1862-3; and enrolling officer, 1864-5. He had a long lineage, beginning with Sir John Humphries, a native of Dorsetshire, England, who was a member of the illustrious house of Bohun. Sir John's wife was Lady Luch, daughter of Baron Clinton, eleventh Earl of Lincoln. Sir John was deputy-governor of Massachusetts. A descendent, John J. Humphries, moved to Columbus, Mississippi, and there engaged largely in cotton planting. His son, Dr. W. N. Humphries, was a trustee for the Mississippi College for Women, and his son, Henry G., settled in Mobile in 1819.

Mr. Humphries built the handsome house now standing at the southwest corner of St. Louis and Conception streets, and it was there his daughter, Marie, became the wife of the Hon. Marion Gaines, of Austin, Texas. It is now the home of Mrs. Nina Hood Boykin, a daughter of the late C. J. Hood.

It may be mentioned tha t the old Krebs house, northwest Conti and Hamilton streets, lately removed, was occupied in 1865 by Louis D. Krebs; in 1866, by Mrs. M. Krebs; in 1878, by L. D. Krebs, and in 1886 by Miss Florida B. Krebs, by whom, in 1901, it was sold to the Mobile Library Association.

A few stray ends may now be knotted and the work will be as complete as the material at command permits it to be. There is a note about Chevalier de Belle Isle, whose daughter Sieur Francis or Francois Krebs married. The chevalier arrived in these parts June 4, 1721, on the good ship Portefaix from France, along with DeGuilliorie and DeJosieuse, whose names play some part in this narrative, and Dubas, Senac, Petat and Vivia, whose names do not. The archives in Paris record a grant under the charter of the Western Company, September 7, 1717, to Count M. A. de Belle Isle, chevalier at the court of Louis of France and general of the marine in Louisiana (in 1730). Belle Isle appears to have come over to occupy his grant and grow up with the country.

Dear Mrs. Gautier

Enclosed are the documents and pnotographs recently forwarded to me. I regret the delay nut ypersonal problems just overwhelmed me.

Please accept my thanks for your aid on this matter even though we did not pinpoint either his residence or nativity locale. From the evidence availazble to us at this time itx looks like New Orleans was his residence.

The date of death appears to be accurate and this may help in the search of an obituary. Locale of death is not stated, again,it probably was Pascagoula or New Orleans.

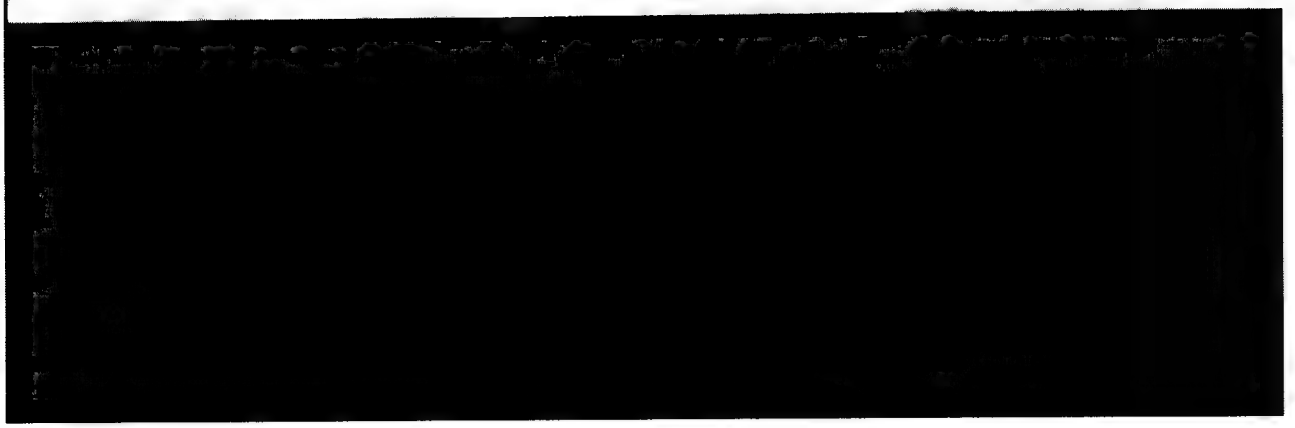
I have no record of him being higher mank than Lt./Pilot.

We will continue to keep our files open and hope some day you can come across additional information. Suggestinn: Is it possible to search for a certificate of death for Martin Freeman in your county now that we have an exact death date? Most death certificates do carry nativity locale and nativity date.

Thanks again. I have not returned to Polaroid photo of a phot of Martin Freeman as there was no return note. Do let me know if you didn't intend this to remain with me.

Sincerely,

Rudolf J. Friederich



HISTORY OF JOHN Mc RAE

1977

John Mc Rae was from a long line of hardy and resourceful Scotch Highlanders. John Mc Rae was born Sept. 6, 1792 in Sneedsboro, N.C. He married Elizabeth Mary McRae Nov. 22, 1809. Moved to Winchester S. W. (South west Miss) where he was soon to become a successful trader and commission merchant. His barges piled produce which he shipped cotton on his own schooners to New Orleans, Mobile and up the atlantic coast as far away as Boston. The Mc Rae business grew so rapidly that nine years after his arrival in Miss. he decided to move again. He moved his family to the mouth of the Pascagoula River in Jackson County. (First barges on the Pascagoula river)

He moved to the Gulf Coast due to his health. Here he bought a large track of land and settled his family in a home on the Miss. sound. In 1834 he acquired additional properties near mouth of Pascagoula River. He built a large Colonial home, now Gautier, it was completely destroyed by fire. He was the first to operate schoners in this section.

John and wife Elizabeth were parents of eleven children, six sons and five daughters. He had three sons who became very prominent.
Colin - was a commission Merchant in Mobile, sent by Jefferson Davis as chief financial agent for Confederate States in Europe.
James - a Legislator from this district, also a Colonel in Civil War.
Malcolm - Registar in Chancery Court. (These sons remained bachelors)
John J. - Became Governor of Miss. 1854 - 1858

John Mc Rae died March 11, 1835 and was buried in "McRae Cemetery" in Gautie , Miss.

John Mc Rae was the first person to ship Cotton down the Pascagoula River.

Dear Josephine;

You have no idea how much pleasure I felt on my return from Camp Chinaberry Creek, I found my letters, the contents of which I assure you were indeed pleasant to me as it brought back to me the pleasure that all is well at my home. I am as happy as a king - and not given to mope. Here, they give you all the comforts of city life.

Dear Joe, I must not allow you to remain in suspense about my being on duty at night as at night as at times I have nothing of the guard to do. I am commissioned as a Sgt. and in that position I have nothing to do but drill when I feel like it. You must not feel uneasy about receiving letters from me as we move about so much from place to place I hardly get time to write. Even now I am doing this letter, though quickly before dismissing the home guard men. .....(non legible)

James Alley is doing well. I am as usual in good spirit and healthy. Some of my mustache is coming back and over plus fat is melting off - so much the better.

We have very cold weather here at present. It snowed yesterday and the day before it hailed. Now its pleasant and the sun is shinning. Our eating is scant here and I can assure you if I ever go out soldiering for any damned hum bugging, eating as we get here, you can hang me up as a scare crow.

I will give you an idea of our daily rations that are served out to me for my company of 73 men.

1.80	3# coffee for one day ration for 73 men.
16.20	54 lbs. of heavy meat - all fat generally.
.45	3 lbs. of soup.
.42	7 lbs. of rice.
.14	6 lbs. of candles and they tallow.
.05	1 quart of molasses and this is not for scurvy.
5.40	54 cans of beans - amount it cost to feed 73 men.

They have given us fresh meat once. Still with this eqting I cannot complain as I do not always eat of it. Sometimes we get chance at chickens, etc., for which we pay.

Give my love Helena Ricca, May, Annie, Mrs. Sullivan and to all inquiring friends.

Now, dear Joe, time will soon pass over. I think we shall have no fighting. We chased the enemy three days ago up within 12 miles of the Yanks - but they fled so we came home. Then I shall go home and lay back in dignity never more to leave you again unless called upon to rejoin.

Kiss the children for me and tell them I am well and killing Yanks for them. My best wishes for you, dear wife and may time speed swiftly for the many days so that you may meet your true and devoted husband.

Mrs. John Edward Krebs
586 No. Willow Street
Pascagoula, Mississippi

Dear Mrs. Krebs:

My husband, John Daniel Moran, and I have been attempting to trace the histories of some of the old French names of early settlers of Harrison-Hancock Counties, and have learned that among his ancestors are the Ladners, Nicaises, Grelots, Dedeaux, Girard, Meaut, etc., and Saucier.

We saw your name listed in an old issue of the Mobile Deep South Genealogical Quarterly as having an interest in the Ladners and Krebs.

We have authoritatively documented my husband's lineage back to the Pierre Morin I, dit Boucher, born in Normandy c1634, and who married in Port Royal, N.S., Canada c1661, as listed on the enclosed data sheet marked "Enclosure No. 1". In addition to the certified abstracts listed on this enclosed data sheets, we have some other certified abstracts of baptismal and marriage records, as well as some notes copied from records of both the Mobile Cathedral and the New Orleans Cathedral pertaining to Morans (Morin until about 1875) Nicaises, Ladners, Sauciers, etc.

My husband's direct ancestor, Joseph Morin (born in Canada, probably, and definitely born to Denis Morin and Madeleine Boule(t)) married Louisa Ladner (Mobile Cathedral record) in 1778. We do not have any record of his whereabouts between c1740 to 1778, although some older members of our family recall a tradition that he came to Paincourtville, Louisiana, and then to the Miss. Gulf Coast when he married Louisa Ladner. In attempting to find some record of how, when, or why he came to the Miss.-Ala.-La. Gulf Coast area, we have collected notes on anything we found which was of authoritative records which even sounded like Morin, Moran, Morand, Morant, Maurin, Mauran, etc.. One of these notes is an extract from Page 23 of the "Mobile Translated Records", copied by me from the original in Mobile County Courthouse in July of this year, as follows: "....the year 1783....Francis Krebs, husband of the widow Mrs. Sossie, daughter of Mrs. Mauran, most respectfully represents to your Excellency that Mrs. Mauran, the mother of your petitioner's wife has possession of and occupied Round Island by permission of the French Governor, Mr. Bienville, in the year 1,745, 30 leagues from Mobile....." Next there is an affidavit in the "Mobile Translated Records" by Chastang, Senior, Dubroca and Duret, ..."old inhabitants of this Town" who then certify that "....Round Island was in possession of the Widow Mrs. Mauran, the Mother of Widow Saucie, wife of the petitioner (Francis Krebs) without title for the same in the year 1,752, and that....." /s/ Chastang, Senior, Dubroca and Duret.

Do you have any idea who may have been Francis Krebs' wife, who was a widow Saucie, daughter of Mrs. Mauran?

If you can tell us anything at all we would be very grateful.

We would be glad to share with you any of our Ladner information--or any other family name we have which may interest you--any of the names previously mentioned in this letter, as well as some Cuevas, a little Fayard, a little LaLancette, etc. Since there were so many Ladners at such an early date, and we don't know which line you are interested in, may we request that you let us know a bit more specifically which?

Our Joseph Morin who married Louisa Ladner (Louisa being daughter of Nicolas Ladner and Mary Anne Magdelaine Pacquet (or Paqui, or Pasquier)) had at least the following children:

Joseph who married Margaret Panguinet*
Pierre, or Peter or Pedro (our ancestor) who married Judith Nicaise*
Maria Josepha who married Juan B. Ladner (of Santiago & M.Carcaux)*
Luisa,Desideria who married Gilbert Ladner (also Puponne Morin??)
Helena Morin who married Basilio Ladner (of J.B.& Francisca Fayard)

*-Records of marriage in our possession. Records of baptism of Luisa, Desideria and Puponne's children, and of Helena Morin and Basilio Ladner's children, are available from St. Louis Cathedral.

We also have a certified baptismal record of Francois Ladnaire called Christian, born Nov. 11, 1766, of legitimate marriage of Nicolas Ladnaire and Magdeleine Pacquier, his wife, and some other authoritative notes as well as a few more Ladner certified records.

In addition, we have accumulated at least a ream of undocumented material pertaining to the alleged Indian ancestry of Mary Josepha Morin who married John Baptiste Ladner and produced children around Bayou LaBatre; however, we have been unable to find any records of authority to support this claim of Indian ancestry. If you have anything authoritative in this regard, or if you know of anyone who has we would very much appreciate anything you can tell us.

Again, we will be happy to share our material with you or anyone else interested in serious genealogical research. We live just off Hi-way 49, in Hattiesburg, just west of the Coca-Cola plant, and are in the phone book. We'd be happy to have you visit.

Yours truly,

Mrs. John D. Moran

That is why the Mississippi Legislature in 1972 created the Mississippi American Revolution Bicentennial Commission. Chaired by the Honorable James P. Coleman of the United States Court of Appeals, it is the duty of this commission to "assist the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission in preparing and executing activities relating to the celebration of the second century of our nations's independence."

On the state level the Mississippi Commission has undertaken, or is considering, the following projects:

1. Restoration of Jefferson College as a museum for southwest Mississippi.
2. Publication of the History of Mississippi under the editorship of Dr. R. A. McLemore, Director of the Mississippi Department of Archives and History.
3. Participation in the Franklin Mint-sponsored medal contest which has recently been completed.
4. Publication of a special issue of the Journal of Mississippi History in February, 1975, dedicated to Mississippi during the colonial and revolutionary periods.
5. Publication of British and Spanish documents for the period 1763-1790.

As important as these projects might seem, the real celebration of our Independence will be in the hearts and minds of our people. For this Bicentennial to have a lasting impact on the history of our nation, people are going to have to ask themselves: "What can I do to improve life where I live? What can I do to help others and in the process help realize the ideas and the ideals for which men lived and died some two centuries ago?" The Bicentennial offers an unparalled opportunity for all Mississippians to come together in the spirit of trust, dedication and cooperation to reflect on who they are and where they want to go.

amount of anchors, he would sell them by the ton, to retailers or exporters at a lower price than the importers from Europe, or the neighbouring colonies, he also casts waggons and chair tires, which he sells on the most reasonable terms, for cash or Connecticut Proclamation Bills. He also will take old and cast anchors in part payment for new ones, in proportion as they are in value.

Two years later, Hawxhurst put himself and his works into print again in the same papers with an announcement of having "lately erected a finery and great Hammer, for refining Sterling Pig Iron into Bar and takes this Method to acquaint his old customers, and others that they may by applying to him in New-York, be supplyed with flat and square Bar Iron, Cart, Waggon, Chair and Sleigh Tire-Mill Spindles; Wrines, Clanks, and Axeltrees, Cast Mill Rounds and Gudgeons." With an eye toward keeping old customers as well as attempting to interest new ones, Hawxhurst adds that he "continues to make Anchors as usual."

During this period of expansion at Sterling the actual owners remain a mystery. Abel Noble, as well as Hawxhurst, certainly had a financial part and probably owned the majority interest in the bloomeries, forges, the furnace, and the anchory. Just when Peter Townsend became associated with the Sterling ironworks has been disputed by writers for many years; previously, all have assigned too recent a date. According to a 1768–75 ledger, Townsend was a partner, with Abel Noble, as early as February 11, 1768. At this time Sterling was turning out wagon boxes, pig metal, tea kettles, skillets, pots, mill rounds, axel-trees, refined iron, and potash. It also produced in the same period 1,386 anchors weighing 185 tons, averaging about 268 pounds each; and 15,231 tons of bar iron. Sterling products were sent to such destinations as the Carolinas, Boston, Quebec, England, "Passagoula" on the Gulf Coast, the British West Indies, and Rhode Island. The ledger containing these entries prefaced shipments to these places with "Voyage to" or "Adventure to," an indication of the lengthy and uncertain nature of Colonial transportation. Many consignments were made to "David Anderson, Boteman, of New, say Old Bridge, N.J.," owner of a sloop used for shipping iron.

On May 23, 1767, the Sterling anchory was destroyed by fire. In October of 1768, an advertisement appeared announcing that

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, COUNTY OF JACKSON

In the name of God amen. I, René Krebs living in the county and state above mentioned and possessing perfectly both my judgement and all my memory, I make, order dictate and declare my testament in the following manner and in the form hereinafter descreed expressing my last will.

I resign my soul to allmighty God, hoping that my sins will be forgiven through the merit and the mediation of our Lord Jesus Christ and my body I resign to the earth to be buried there according to the preferences of my testamentary executors hereafter named and the goods of this world that God has confided to me I have disposed and I give the, as follows, to be divided, shared, distributed and alotted after my death in the manner I have desired. (I have desired... It looks as though this were intended. But the form is ungrammatical and unintelligible)

1. I will, I order and declare and my will is that the three slaves; Zepherin, Constance and Bonne shall belong to Marie, my wife, as property coming from her mother, Madame Dupont.

I wish, I order and my will is also that the property known as the residence of Mme Dupont, mother of Marie my wife, belongs also to Marie, my wife, as property descending from her mother; the sale of the said three slaves and of the said residence having been passed to my name at the time of probate of the estate of Mme Dupont.

2. I will, I order and my will is that my residence on the banks of the Pascagoula river, which I occupy at present, be given in a life estate (en jouissance) for her life time to Marie my wife.

3. I will, I order, and my will is that my boat Zulime not be sold for a year after my death or longer, if my executors think that the said boat con continue to navigate with advantage and my will is that the income from the boat during this extent of time be remitted to Marie, my wife.

4. I will, I order and my will is that all the rest of my property be sold, the half of the product of that sale I bequeath and I give to Marie, my wife, as having two children to rear of whom I leave her guardian and tutrice. The other half of the said property, I will and my will is that it be divided equally among all my heirs. I wil also and such is my will, that Marie, my wife be guardian of Nashalie, my grand-daughter (daughter of my son) of whom I am the guardian.

5. I will and I order that on the properties of which I make disposition in the preceding articles there be levied the sum sufficient for my executors to acquit, pay and liquidate all my just debts and every sort of expense which they will have been obliged to incur for the execution of this my present will and testament.

6. I will and I order that the executors of this my present will and testament (which contains my last will relatively to the division and the distribution which I intend, is to be made of my property and which my executors will carry out immediately after my body is consigned to the earth.

By virtue of

The formalities required by the law of this state concerning wills and by these precents I choose and name my two sons-in-law Hilaire Krebs and J. E. Sarrazin executors of my last will and testament.

" Mobile, two hundred years ago, was under the Fleur de Lys, and was known as Fort Louis de la Mobile, captail of the French territory, in that part of America.

The French province of Louisiana was under contre of the Western Company of France.

Important events ovvured in Mobile at that time., chiefly the arrival of a fleet, from France, sent by Duchess de Chaument, for the colonisation of Louisiana, and destined for her concession at Pascageula.

In 1711 the concession of Pascageula, to Madame de Chaumont, was made under the corporation - "The Western Company", and was registered by parliament, in Paris, on the 7th of September, 1717.

In 1718 Colonel Joseph de la Pointe was commissioned by the French gobernment to build a fort on Lake Catahoula(new Krebs Lake), to protect the concession of Pascageula to Madame de Chaumont.

In 1697 Joseph de la Pointe, accompied La Savole and De Iberville, explorers and founders of the Mississippi French Colonial Company of Louisiana.

In January 1721, the frigate Charles (a war vessal), under commandate Heseph de la Pointe, and flying the Fleur de Lys, dropped anchor in the Bay of Mobile, at Fort Louis de la Mobile. Her passengers included Madame Duchess de Chaument; her daughter, Baroness de la Prode; Count Captain Seumard de Bellille; Sieur Gregrie de Guillery and his wife, Jeanne de Guilleru; and the Bubas', Senacs. Petats and Vivias.

In the year of 1721 at Fort Louis de la Mobile, there arrived, the Ships La Volga, Balone, La Girande, La Neride, La Portefaix, La Africaine (a war vessel), for Madame de Chaument.

December 1721, Madame de Chaumont returned to France.

September 15, 1721, Baroness de la Prode married in the French fort at Pascagoula, under the French flag the Fluer de Lys, Captain Seynard de Bellille, of the Royal Marines of Louisiana. 1991

Baroness de la Brede, the daughter of Madame de Chaumont- the colonist - had a daughter, MarieLouise, who married Francis Krebs, the son of Baron von Krebs and Marie Josephine de la Pointe.

Madame Duchess de Chaumont was lady-in-waiting to Princess Henriettam at the court of Louis XIV, at Foutainebleau palace. She was the daughter of Comte General Gramount, of the French army abd lady Elizabeth Hamiliton of England, and a renowned beauth at the court of Charles the Second.

Madame de Chaumont(Lady Marie Louise Montemart), daughter of Comte and Countess de Gramount, of France, married La Chevalier de Chaumont, who was Duke de Crequin, Chevalier de St. Louis, et de la Legion d' Honnaur, of France.

The late Corinne Krebs Humphries, widow of Major Henry Gordon Humphries and her late sister, Miss Florida Krebs, came from this line of personages, through their late father, Joseph Krebs, of Mobile. The descendants of this distinguished line are three splendid young persons, namely; Mrs. Marvin Spreles, of Mobile, daughter of Chas. W. Himphries Jones, son of Mrs. Corinne A. Humphries (ex Jones), Mobile's "Daughter Under Five Flags".

Miss F. Marguerite Friffin, daughter of Mrs. F. Humphries Griffin, Mobile's "Daughter Under Five Flags".

BARON FRANZ von KREBS was born in Castle Cachem, whose towers rise above the gently flowing waters of the Mosel River in the cestral home and became a pioneer in America is not disclosed, from that time on was his home or cheif residence, though he lived in Pascagoula also, where he owned and operated the first cotton gin of which there is any local record.

The Baron dropped his title and the "von" into the ocean as he came over and became known as Sieur Francis Krebs. He married a daughter of Joseph Simon de la Pointe and Jeanne Puluot of Canada; he had a son, Hugo, and one daughter, Marie Josephine Krebs.

Francis Krebs married Marie Louise de Belle Isle, daughter of Moreau Augustine de Belle Isle and Marie Louise de Guilorie de Isle a Gillory his wife.

Piere Krebs married Aline Peteet, of Pascagoula, and it is said that from that marriage are the descended the Sandes and Rapiers of Mobile.

Hugo Krebs married Marie de Josieuse, of New Orleans.

Marie Josephine Krebs was married to Captain Antione Narbona, mentioned as belonging to the French Navy. Their daughter Ana (also Spelled Anna) Narbona, became the wife of Sig. Don Enrique Grimarest, the most distinguished figure in the whole ghostly company; for in the Archives of the Indies at Seville is the copy of a letter signed by Don Bernardo de Galvez, the governor of Louisiana, proposing to the King of Spain that Don Enrique, Captain in the regiment of Navarre, be made governor of Mobile. The date of this document is May 26, 1781. There are in the same archives two other papers relating to Grimarest. One announces his promotion to be lieutenant-colonel for "distinguished merits contracted at the capture of Mobile, and the other is the royal license granted Grimarest to marry Dona Ana Narbona.

Hamilton's Colonial Mobile registers Grimarest's title as "Political and Military Governor of the Town of Mobile and its District". The town is sometimes called in the Spanish documents "Plaza de la Movila," says Hamilton. It appears the Grimarest began his governorship in 1783. It was in that year, on December 26, that he lost his wife Ana, and the burial took place in the public cemetery, possibly the one just of Jackson Street.

A descendent of Hugo Krebs and Marie de Josieuse, but whether immediate or not stated, was Joseph Krebs, who, wasrelated in the family records, married William Fisher's daughter, and it was Joseph Krebs' daughter, Corine Krebs, who was married in great state, July 15, 1850, to Henry G. Humphries, in her fathers house, Conti and Hamilton Streets.

Henry G. Humphries was a successful cotton man here before the war. He was a member of the secession convention in Montgomery, from Mobile County in 1861; provost marshal at Mobile, 1862-3 ; and enrolling officer, 1864 - 5, He had a long lineage, begining with Sir John Humphries, a native of Dorsetshire, England, who was a member of the illustrious house of Bohum. Sir John's wife was Lady Luch, daughter of Baron Clinton, eleventh Earl of Lincoln. Sir John was deputy-governor of Massachusetts, and there engaged largely in cotton Planting. His son, Dr. W. N. Humphries, was a trustee for the Mississippi College for Women, and his son, Henry G., settled in Mobile in 1819.

Mr. Humphries built the handsome house now standing at the southwest corner of St. Louis and Conception streets, and it was there his daughter, Marie, became the wife of the Hon. Marion Gaines, of Suston, Texas. It is now the home of Mrs. Nina Hood Boykin, a daughter of the late O.J. Hood.

It may be mentioned that the old Kregs house, northwest Conti and Hamilton streets, lately removed was occupied in 1865 by Louis P. Krebs; in 1866, by Mrs. M. Krebs; in 1878, by J.L. Krebs, and in 1886 by Miss Florida B. Krebs, by whom, in 1901, it was sold to the Mobile Library Association. 1993

A few stray ends may now be knotted and the work will be as complete as the material at command permits it to be. There is a note about Chevalier de Belle Isle, whose daughter Sieur Francis or Francois Krebs married. The Chevalier arrived in these parts June 4, 1721, on the good ship Portefaix from France, along with DeCuillorie and DeJosieuse, whose names play some part in this narrative, and Dubas, Senac, Petat, and Vivia, whose names do not. The archives in Paris revord a grant under the charter of the Western Company, September 7, 1717, to Count M. A. de Belle Isle, chevalier at the court of Louis of France and general of the marines in Louisiana (in 1730). Belle Isle appears to have come over to occupy his grant and grow up with the country.

For the first hundred years after the French came to the Mississippi Gulf coast in 1699, the center of the white settlers in the Pascagoula area was the fort built by the French on Lake Catahoula in about 1720. Of the leaders in the Pascagoula settlement, four names stand out...The Duchess de Chaumont, Joseph Simon de la Poin te, Jean Claude Dupont, and Hugo Ernestus Krebs. The Duchess of Chaumont had a land concession from Louis XIV which covered the Pascagoula area from the mouth of the river northward some eight miles, the headquarters of which was shown on a map of that time as on the east side of the river at what is now Martin's Bluff. Joseph Simon de la Point, reputedly an Admiral in the French navy, was appointed by the French government about 1717 to build a fort on Lake Catahoula, now Krebs Lake, as a protection against possible Indian attacks. In Joseph Hamilton's "Colonial Mobile", "A land concession of Fish River, Nov. 12, 1715 to Joseph Simon de la Pointe, the father of Madame Krebs. Joseph Simon de la Point married Marie Foucault and they had two daughters Marie Simon and Elizabeth. Marie Simon married Hugo Krebs in 1741. Elizabeth married Jean Baptiste de La Parde and also Jean Claude Dupont. Hugo Krebs's name occurs often in the church records as the father of Madame Krebs." After a year at the fort, ill health caused him to resign his commission and return to France, but he later returned to the colony. A map under date of 1732 shows "Habitation of Sieur de la Pointe" on Lake Catahoula. Jean Claude Dupont, an officer in the French navy, was named to succeed de la Pointe as commander of the French outpost. In 1763 he is listed as one of the signers of the oath of allegiance to England when that country took over all the French colonies in America. In 1791 he and his wife are named as the grandparents of "Charles Rene Krebs, the legitimate son of Joseph Krebs and Maria Louisa Dupont."

Hugo Ernestus Krebs, the first Krebs to come to Pascagoula, as been identified by his will written in Spanish in New Orleans in 1776. In this will he gives his correct name as Hugo Ernestus Krebs and states that he was from Neumagen on the Moselle, Germany, and that he left fourteen grown children. In the birth records of his children he and Maria Joseph de la Pointe are named as the parents. Hugo Krebs and his wife Maria de la Pointe are said to have lived on a plantation, owning slaves and raising cotton, indigo and rice. He was an inventor as well as a surgeon and farmer. He was using a cotton gin at his plantation twenty years before Eli Whitney...In 1772 Bernard Romans wrote that he saw the roller Cotton Gin on the farm of Mr. Krebs. Hugo and Marie had seven children. Hugo and his descendants owned much of the land in Pascagoula and some in Mobile. The old Krebs house at the northwest corner of Conti and Hamilton Street in Mobile belonged to descendants of Joseph Krebs, and they sold it in 1901. It was used as the Mobile Library. His children intermarried into the Dupont, LeFleau, Delmas, Sarrazin, Ellison, Grant, Baptiste, Walker, Donovan and Jane' families and there are hundreds of thousands of descendants today.

The carpenter shop is the only building left standing at the Fort. In 1949, the Jackson County Historical Society secured a 99 year lease on the Fort. Mrs. Hermes Gautier and the Society began collecting artifacts and restoring the building. The October 1950 dedication featured a pageant, tracing its long history, with Baron Von Krebs played by J.E. Krebs and Marie Josephine played by Mr. John Howkins. It was then opened to the public as a museum. In June 1972, all the Krebs descendants were invited to the unveiling and presentation of a portrait of Hugo Ernestus Krebs, donated by Miss Hermina Earnest of New Orleans. Hugo Krebs' descendants left their mark on the City of Pascagoula. Krebs Lake, Krebs Avenue, and Krebs Cemetery were named for them. Miss Archie Gautier, worked for over thirty years saving and preserving Hugo's old home. Her work with the fort, some done almost singlehandedly, to save the building and its grounds from destruction, was outstanding. She was the curator for those years, always dressed in costume and gave tours to thousands of people from all over the world.

Valentine Delmas was born in New Orleans about 1789 to Jean Baptiste Delmas and Magdelena Raby Delmas, who came to New Orleans from San Domingo. Jean Baptiste Delmas fought in the War of 1812 and thus is considered a soldier of the Revolution. Valentine came to Pascagoula around 1800 and married Marie Josephine Krebs(daughter of Joseph and Marie Dupont- granddaughter of Hugo and Marie de la Pointe). Together they had ten children: John Baptiste, Armand, Carlos, Emily Marie, Elizabeth, Hermina, Harriet, Marie Laura, Celeste and Valentine Tucker.

Around 1800 the Indians were hostile and Valentine took his family and the lumber he had collected to build his home and went to live on Round Island. They lived there for about ten years and Emily Marie, his daughter was the first Caucasian born on the island. Around 1812 he built his home on Pascagoula's riverfront. Valentine was a progressive man of his time and helped establish the permanent settlement of Pascagoula. His Spanish grant of land extended along the Pascagoula River and comprised a large part of what is now the town, including 418 acres. He assisted his son-in-law, Louis Augustus Frederic de St. Ferol, in laying out the greater part of the village. Valentine died around 1840.

Louis Augustus Frederic de St. Ferol,a highly educated Bonapartist who Delmas met in Mobile, went to work as a tutor for his children, for $600.00 a year. Frederic married Emily Marie, Valentine and Josephine's daughter. In Frederic's later years he lived also in New Orleans and translated for the Louisiana Senate. His wife, Emily Marie ran his school in Pascagoula. After her husband's death in 1840, Mrs. Frederic left with five children, taught a private school in her home. Her eldest daughter, Josephine taught until her marriage to Mr. Donovan, and she too, conducted a private school in her home. This lasted until the bulding of the old Scranton Academy, where she was one of the first teachers

More on Louis Augustus Frederic de St. Ferol:

Louis Augustus de St. Ferol Frederic was the son of Jean Baptiste Athanisal de St. Ferol and Marie Antionette Geret.

He was born August 29, 1794 and died in 1840 and is buried at Krebs Cemetery.

During his life he distinguished himself by joining Napoleon's army at the age of 16 and was presented with the Legion of Honor Medal.

After Napoleon's defeat, Louis came to America in 1820 first going to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania and meeting with other Bonapartists and deciding to be a part of the Vine and Olive Colony, which preceded Demopolis, Alabama. Then he met Valentine Delmas in Mobile, Alabama and came to Pascagoula where he helped establish a successful school with Valentine and Josephine Krebs Delmas. Frederic was Headmaster. The school was situated at the foot of the present Delmas Avenue.

He was a civil engineer and helped Valentine Delmas lay out the first streets of Pascagoula and was Pascagoula's first Postmaster in 1829. He married Emily Marie Delmas (born Oct. 22, 1813) who was the daughter of Valentine Delmas and Marie Josephine Krebs.

Louis Augustus and Emily Marie had five children:

La Pointe, a resident of Old Mobile in 1702, built this modest dwelling in 1715-1716 to be used as a residence-workshop while he was completing his elaborate plantation home several hundred yards away. Dartaguiette to min., AC<C13f. 644-645. Carte de la Riviere des Pascagoula...1726 , part Dumont de Montigny, ?BN Cartes et plans, GE.DD 2987, 24
Pg. 180...As far a s the group known as "les Canadiens" was concerned, there were no affluent men, but some were better established than others: Guillaume Boutin, Joseph Simon dit La Pointe, Jean-Baptiste Saucier, Francois Trudeau and Antoine Rivard de La Vigne were all men of above average means. Penigault, Relation, BNFF, 14613, f. 181-94. Graveline, while listed with the Canadians during the early years of the colony, was by this time an independent merchant. Pg. 199...Ducoudray went ahead with his plans to leave as soon as possible. On packets of letters, among them reports from La Vente and Bienville, and a number of other small items to be taken on board the Pelican. In addition, there were numberous passengers planning to return to France. The first bark left that morning, making its way downriver to Massacre Island with one of Becancour's old pilots, Jacques Bernard, dit Matagon, aboard. Two days later another bark left Fort Louis for the port, carrying Canadians Antoine Damedieu, Joseph Simon, dit la Point, Francois Bonvalet and Antoine Fort.(1704).

Pg. 390-391..In the midst of the summer epidemic, however, came brighter moments. On the same day that La Salle's daughter died, Francois Lemaire baptized Marie Alain, daughter of Pierre Alain, Canadian taillandier, and Marie-Catherine Philippe. Three weeks later, Alexandre Huve baptized a young son of Jean Colon, dit La Violette and Marguerite Preau. It was Huve himself, serving as godfather, who named Colon's son Isaac. And several weeks later, on Oct. 16, Le Maire baptized hippolyte Mercier's first child by Joseph Chauvin, it Lery. The infant son (born at seven o'clock the previousevening) was named for his father by his uncle Louis Chauvin, dit Beaulieu, the event being witnessed by close friends Claude Trepanier and his wife Genevieve Burelle (who served as godmother). There were three Chauvin brothers present in Mobile in mmid-1709 when young Joseph was born-~~J~~acques, Joseph and Louis. There was shortly to be a fourth. Nicolas Chauvin, dit La Fresniere, one of the youngest of the eight sons of Pierre Chauvin and Artthe Autreuil of Montreal, had actually been present in the colony before. Following his older brothers and numberous other relatives who had been active in the fur trade in the Great Lakes and upper Louisiana regiouns (in the days before Iberville's presence on the Gulf Coast), La Fresniere had served in Mobile as a "Canadian" diring the years 1702-1706, along with Joseph Simon, dit la Pointe(37 year old native of Quebec and son of Hubert Simon and Marie Viez) and Jean-Baptiste Baudreau dit Graveline. By 1706 La Fresniere, then thirty years old and unmarried, was discouraged about his future, especially after Bienville was forced to remove him from the payroll. His two older brothers, Jacques and Joseph, in Louisiana since 1698, had become established as traders in a small way and his younger brother Louis had recently come to Mobile by way of Detroit and Kaskaskia with a load of beaver skins which he hoped to sell in France. La Fresniere, with ideas for furthering commerce between Louisiana and France, had asked Bienville for permission to return to La Rochelle on the Aigle. La Pointe, who had also been interested in such commerce, was already in La Rochelle, having returned on the Pelican. La Fresniere had only a small amount of capital and it was not sufficient, even when added to his brothers' resources to purchase a seaworthy vessel to transport furs. But there were two other merchants in the colony with greater funds at their disposal: Graveline, and a thirty-eight-year-old Frenchman, Pierre Babin dit La Source.

Pg 444...The majority of the Ile Massacre inhabitants were huddled near the seashore in a long, unvaried line of houses facing the lagoon: Jean Roy and his wife Renee Gilbert and children; Jean La Croix, dit Grimauld and wife Angelique Drouin; Pilot Simon Coussot and wife Marie-Marthe Flein and young daughter Hippolyte. A number of the more recently-arrived, Jacques Allemand and his wife, and daughter Marguerite, and Guillaume Boutin and his family(who had, however, not yet permanently transferred from the mouth of Fowl River) were anti-Bienvillists, seeking refuge from what they felt was personal and governmental tyranny. Some of these settlers had moved to the island before the return of Graveline. Others, such as La Pointe, La Fresniere and Basque tanner Jean Arnaud, had returned with him on the Marguerite. And, for the moment, Graveline's brother , Gabriel Baudreau, and close friends, La Source and Angelique Jallot, were situated near the warehouse, Baudreau soon to be returning to the Illinois country. There was no priest assigned to the settlement as yet; however, Francois La Maire and Alexandre Huve both made occasional visits to baptize slaves and newborns. The most important official stationed on Massacre Island was the keeper of the warehouse, Francois Guyon De Pres Derbanne.

Pg. 466..Looking around at the settlement on Massacre Island, Bienville felt optimistic about the results of the energy and zeal of the inhabitants who had almost completely rebuilt their settlement. Industrious entrepreneus such as Graveline, La Source, La Pointe and La Fresniere would soon make something profitable of that place and with the completion of fortifications, the port would be practically impregnable.

JOSEPH SIMON dit LA POINTE

My family name is pronounced "Deber-ardeny", and I do speak French. My mother's family is almost all French and as a matter of fact, I thank you for inviting an 11th generation prodigal son back to his ancestral home. I am an 11th generation descendant of Joseph Simon de La Pointe (pronounced Pwent) through his daughter Marie Josef who married Krebs, etc.

What I'm going to talk about is going to require the fine museum next door to change their chart about Joseph and I was going to toss in at no extra charge Hugo, but they already have what I have, so I'm going to leave that alone.

More importantly, it's how did I get this stuff and how you can get the same stuff. Now, I speak French fluently, or at least as French is spoken in France fluently. But you can to it even if you don't speak or read French.

To start with, we'll start with Joseph's parents. His father was a man named Hubert Simon. He emigrated to Canada in 1656. He came from the town of Tavernay in France and on November 27, 1659 he married Marie Viez (pronounced Vee-yah) de (pronounced duh) La Mothe. And this is important because a lot of sources will confuse de or dit with duh. To the French at that time would have been an error that would have inconceivable.

For those of you who are in the local Duchess of Chaumont Chapter, this is how the Duchess of Chaumont was related, the one of early French Colonial Louisiana, to Joseph. And I wasn't able to get this information until last week with a letter from Honore..... de Chaumont Quitry..... who is a descendant also, of the Duchess.

First off, she wasn't a duchess! She was a marquess. She was the wife of the second Marquis de Chaumont de Quitry. The Chaumont Quitry family originated in the Calais area and they were originally enobled (?) in the 12th century because they were the hawk keepers for French kings and became the heriditary hawk keepers. Charles Dominguez Donge (unsure of spelling) was the first real governor of Acadia. Cardinal Richelieu and his brother the Duke Richelieu are also members of the Quitry family. The Chaumont Quitry family were merged in the 1680's when the second marquis married his first wife. His first wife died later and his next wife was Marie Terese Viez de la Mothe, the sister of Joseph's maternal grandfather, Robert Viex de la Mothe.

Now, how do you know all this? Well, in the handout, the first thing that you'll see is a whole bunch of French stuff about Quebec. Well, you say, "it's all in French - I don't read French!". Don't need to. Because in your handout later on are 75 important words and by knowing these you can go to any sacramental record in France, Canada or Louisian. If my cousin Charlie can take the same sheet and do it - trust me. His IQ is lower than his shoe size.

But, anyway - you can find in there the index, and there's more than the name Simon in there. The reason is that when you start in French Canada, the repertoire is complete, I mean complete. These people spent twenty years of their life going thru every sacramental church record in Canada. It was sponsored by several Canadian universities and the Canadian government and it is complete. Occasionally they will misspell a name but it has every act. Unfortunately they didn't do it from a genealogical viewpoint.

So, Joseph's father who was Hubert Simon de La Pointe, you have to look under LaPointe, Simon and variances of how its spelled. You will be able to piece together Joseph's parents, getting married, the notary record of their marriage contract, how to trace all the children and their marriages. Then, it gives a guide on the index that tells you where to find different things. All you need to know is that "b" is for baptism; "m" is for marriage and "s" is for funeral and that's how every church record in French is organized up to 1792 - baptisms, marriages and funerals.

Occasionally in a baptism record it will give you a birth date. Usually it's the same day. The French were devout Catholics. Infants who died, who weren't baptized went to Hell. As soon as the kid is clean, off to the church they ran. The same was true ~~they~~ they died, expecially in Louisiana. Bodies get ripe quickly. Put em in the ground! when Anyway, using your key to the 75 helpful words in French, and understanding that if they have a "de" name, look under the "de" name as in LaPointe and you will be able to piece together that Hubert Simon was born in Tavernay, it will give you the bishropic, which is not very helpful but that's how church records were maintained. The Diocese name, the parish name. All this was required by law in 1610 by Henry 4th. There are a lot of churches that kept these records prior to that and every Frenchman had to subscribe to them, Protestant or Catholic. So, just because you find a person in the Catholic record does not mean that he was Catholic. It meant he was following the law.

In the marriage contract, and that's later on, the handout for Quebec (it's in Volume # 6), even mentions that Marie Viez's father was Rober de la Mothe, First Sargeant of th Guards. What's that? Well, a little knowledge of French comes in handy here. If you write to the French Army, they have a history bureau. The French have near-complete (records) for every member of the army going back to the 14th century.

The Guards of the King were his body guards. They were stationed at the various palaces while he was there. They were reserved only for the nobility. If you were a petit nobleman's son who didn't have enough money to buy your commission as an officer, for that's how you became an officer back then, it wasn't by marriage. It was strictly buying, then you weren't enlisted. But still, to be a king's guard, it was an honor. You got paid regularly, you ate regularly and you didn't have to worry about the fact that your older brother was getting the family fortune.

And that was the first clue. After writing off to them, they give you your service record. The only thing you're going to find in the service record is who he married, and in a service record you will find out that his wife is not Sainte Paulin, but Marie Terese de St. Paulin. (unclear) And it didn't give anything, who her parents were or where she's from.

But, there is one branch of the St. Paul (Paulin?) Family who's very famous historically for about 600 years in European history and they are now called the Ducs of Luxemborg. They are the rulers of the Duchy of Luxembourg. Whether or not she's in that group or a branch that branched off much earlier, I can't tell you right now, but what I can tell you is that Robert's sister did become the second Marquis de Chaumont. Louis XIV, right before his death, because the second Marquis was a diplomat and had served the King in a number of ambassadorial and ministerial posts during his career, elevated his marquisat to a duchy. Which was the highest honor you could hold without being of royal blood in France that you could hold without being of royal blood in France - and back-dated to 1710!

So technically she was a duchess. But she wasn't a duchess because of marriage. She was a duchess because of back-dating a document. And that's how Joseph is related to the Duchess of Chaumont.

Back to Joseph's birth. You can go to your nearest Family Historoy Library and order the microfilm like I do and look at the microfilm of the actual document from 1659. And actually, the ones from Canada are easy to read. The handwriting is pretty easy to read. The handwriting is beautiful - you go Wow! You know, sometimes you're going to look at documents and you'll go boy, could that guy know how to write? Believe me there were a lot of them didn't!

Joseph - his baptism is missing, and why that is, I don't know. It could be that a visiting priest came by the house, and after a difficult pregnancy, meant to write it down in the book after getting back to the Church; maybe they went to a mission where he lived and never got around to entering it in the book. I can't answer why he didn't have one. But from several Canadian censuses, and the age of his siblings and the parents, they match up pretty well. It's pretty obvious that he was born around 1670.

Joseph and his brother Ignace were on the first two boats with the Lemoyne brothers, when he came in 1699. And there is a reason he came on those two boats - a very specific reason. Because Joseph's father was like Charles Lemoyne, Iberville and Bienville's father. He went to Canada and he made a lot of money in the fur trade. And I mean a lot of money!

As a matter of fact, he did a lot of business with Charles Lemoyne. Charles Lemoyne was god parent to one of his children. Bienville & Iberville's sister was god parent to another one of Joseph's brothers. The two families were closely linked by their common economic interests.

On the expedition here the Lemoynes as well as Joseph and his brothers, one thing they understood was that the fur trade was dying out in the east because they were killing all the beavers. They knew they were going to have to go west to get any more beavers. That meant that they would be coming down the Mississippi. They weren't foolish! And in French colonization you have to understand the French - where they moved, they brought their system with them. And you have to understand the system, because they were plannng on undoubtedly taking large chunks of rights, which they ultimately did do, both families, for their own economic benefit.

Joseph and his brother Ignace were definitely adventurous. They saw an opportunity and they went along for it. He ended up making a tremendous amount of money in his lifetime - far more than his father did. Also, in Canada the Canadian National Archives has a complete index of all the notarial acts under the French regime to 1763, it actually goes on to 1769. In these you can find Joseph's father wheeling and dealing in the fur trade with Charles Lemoyne as partner and with several other prominent historical figures including the Compte de Frontenac. Because furs were big business.

The French used beaver not only for winter time but also for felt - as in felt hats. As in the hat every man in France wore, was made of felt, unless you were a peasant and wore straw. The demand for furs, until the beginning of the 18th century was strong - and a lot of fortunres were made.

Anyway, Joseph understanding that aspect, and understanding where the furs were coming (from) in the future, that's why he was on that boat with his brother Ignace. They were coming along because they knew that in the future the furs were coming down the Mississippi River. And they wanted to make sure that they got involved in that trade down at that spot.

How they got into those two boats I am sure could be found out in time. I'm just not sure at this point where to look. The French National Archives and the documents relative to that whole voyage, they're not quite sure, upon inspection, what they claim were at the site they gave me, for when I ordered the microfilm, they said "oops! This is not what you want." So we are not quite sure where the original documents of Iberville's were, commissioning him to go to the mouth of the Mississippi.

Joseph, after coming here, seeing the area and understanding that the French had built the fort; that there was land here near the mouth of the Mississippi, he and his family had to put down some kind of stake. They understood one other thing. That was the nature of French trade at this point. There was one other thing from the colonies that France was going to appreciate by 1700 and that is sugar. And the sugar came only from the Caribbean. They did not believe sugar could grow in Louisiana, Mississippi or southern Alabama. Impossible!

What did they know? Anyway, the French at this time had three major ports for trans-oceanic travel - Bordeaux, La Rochelle and La Harve?? And everything that went to America up to 1704, went through those three ports. There were a number of political reasons for it. They would go from those sugar islands as they were called. They would bring things like silk, finished goods, etc. to trade for the sugar. They would take either the sugar and what we would call brown sugar form, or in molasses. They would then jump to New England anywhere from New York on up, trade the molasses, which the British would make into rum, which they found necessary for living in a cold and inhospitable environment, and exchange for iron goods, which they would take to Canada and trade for fur. And then, go back to France to make a fortune. If they worked it right, there are records and a number of books on economics at that time which will show you a return on investments of 10,000 livres. So you can make a lot of money if you can make it back and nothing happened - and you could trade along the way just like you wanted to. And that's how Joseph made his money.

In 1701 he married Catherine Foucault in La Rochelle. She is a native of La Rochelle. She is also the granddaughter of the only admiral in French history to become a Marshall of France, the Compte de Nonge (?). And her family also spawned the Foucaults who go to Canada whom you find in Colonial Louisiana - Nicholas Foucault. For those of you who are versant (?) in government figures in the 1740's and 50's this Nicholas Foucault. That was Joseph's wife's second husband.

not sure of here

They also understood you have to have some people over there, some people in France to protect your interests and money. When Joseph got married to Catherine, as part of the marriage contract, she brought 7,000 tum wah (?). Now, there are two kinds of livres in France. There's a livres dior (?) a livres tum wah. Livres tum wah, most basically, is in silver. 7,000 livres is the equivalent to 7,000 pounds sterling in British money. Joseph understood. He had money now - and connections. His wife was the granddaughter of the Marshall of France, her father had been mayor of La Rochelle for 2 years, appointed by the King. Excuse, me, not mayor, but anton blanc (?) which is the chief administrative representative of the French King in that town. So he had the connection of the Court at this point in time.

Their marriage produced four children, only two which survived, to my knowledge. I cannot find the death record for either the son, or another daughter. The daughter was born in 1719 and I suspect that had something (to do) - that's about the time that Catherine Foucault died. So I suspect the death of the mother and daughter of the child probably occured simultaneously.

He was a member of the parish of Sans Saverta (?)

(missed a few words here)

can't have everything.

I cannot find a death record for the son, and he is not mentioned in the succession so he may have died along the way. He may have died in Haiti, Martinique or somewhere. I don't have a thought of where he might have died. He did not die in Canada or Louisiana.

He (La Pointe) did have two daughters that we are well aware of that came to Louisiana. One married La Prade and the other Mr. Krebs. He remarried Catherine Dussiant (Doucin). He brought her over here to his plantation to show her Louisiana. There is a mention later on in the Krebs concession in Favrot's papers at Tulane - that Joseph's wife had come but once to Louisiana, therefore, had no right to his succession. French thinking!

Catherine dies about 1750. Joseph is now 80 years old. He needs someone to take care of him - he marries again. And this is to Marie Beugnault. And this woman, the name, to people in La Rochelle is well known because this was the greatest of merchant families from La Rochelle. Joseph had done well.

For him to have married into such a family would have required him to have been on an equal footing. It is well known that during Joseph's career he sponsored a tremendous number of great merchant families in Louisiana and Canada, Guadaloupe, Martinique, Santa Dominto & all of them.There is a book that goes into great detail about some of this called "The Canada Merchants" by Boucher, 1987, Cambridge University Press. I didn't put it into the notes. (But I put) a number of the economic sources about that period in the handout under the French sources.

Brodel mentions here - because he was extremely successful at this - leave La Rochelle, go to the sugar islands, trade for sugar. Joseph added a twist to it. He would go to Louisiana and bring back indigo. Indigo was the primary crop of this plantation, and his great-aunt's. They eventually got out of it because indigo farming and the treatment of it to get the dye had a drawback - its extremely toxic to humans. He ran through a lots of slaves producing it. They made the return on it.....The duchess said o.k. - it's time to unload my property, take my money and run. And she did well.

Joseph kept a large portion of his property, but still sold a lot of his interests off to his sons-in-law. He still kept a dwelling in New Orleans. He never, at least I can't find, a record of his actually haveing been there. After a while it seems like all he did was stay in La Rochelle. He may have come over intermittenly, but as I said there is no record.

The La Rochelle passenger lists are very accurate. Now how do you get this La Rochelle passenger list? You write and a nice letter in French. You write! And a nice letter in French. You say, well, I don't do French! Aah! No need to! In the back I show you a nice letter in French for birth, marriage and death records. There is an easy to use source for how to write simple letters in French. Your high school French teacher! I'm not joking.

You go to college professor, they do this for a living - they want money. (go to a) high school French teacher, say I just want to write a simple letter to the town of La Rochelle, France in French, etc. There are tables - not an index! The French don't know what an index is - to them an index is something in the back of the book to tell you the mention earlier in that book. If they're going to make a list of things, they call it a table. And that's how everything is organized. A table. Say "I want you to write and ask for a table of passengers and if they will kindly look and send me a copy." Under how to write letters in French is a sentence, it starts "inclus". You need to put that sentence in there. And what that sentence says is "included are three coupons." You say, "what are coupons?" You go down to the post office and you ask them for an "IRC". If you say International Reply Coupon I guarantee you will get the same response I had when I asked for them. "Huh?" What are those - do we have them here? The post office calls themIRC/s. Anytime you ask the French for something, you send three. If they don't have it they send them back to you - they really will! If they have it they keep them, and it's a bargain! You need to send three coupons with every request you do. As the letters say - never ask for more than two things at a time - if you do I can assure you that you will wait a very long time. Like when your great-great-grandchildren are dying, is when you will get your answer. However you ask for 1 or two and I guarantee you that within 6-8 weeks you'll have a letter in your mailbox. If it's a small town, sometimes a little longer. Sometimes a small town, or if it's a very big town they take longer but most places, 6-8 weeks. And there it is in your mailbox! The French, as they go around and keep records - believe me they keep a lot of records.

It is phenomenal the kind of records you can get out of the Genealogical Society of Utah that they have microfilmed. And as much as they have microfilmed from France, which is an unusually large amount of microfilm, it only represents less than 5% of all the records in France that one can get their hands on.

Anyway, with French records and the French in general, in the handout there is a mention of some books and internet sources. And I'd like to discuss those for a second. Because this is part of how I got the information for Joseph, doing exactly what's in the handout. In the bibliography section, the first two books, if you really want to follow up and do French research you need to become familiar with the content of these books. You really do. Because the French are not English and they way they think and the way they act and what motivates them is not the same as the English.

The English were into capitalism or mercantileism - the French were not. They were into monopolys. That is what they understood. Commerce with France at that time was based on the monoply system. You need to understand why, and it had to do with the way French nobility, the French society and the French church was organized. It was organized on the strict caste system which had rules, detailed idealogically by neat information and detailed rules. But you need to have some feel for how they were different from the English.

When the English would say come to Virginia, the guy would actually get free land. When the guy went to Canada he didn't get free land. He had to buy it. Unless he were given the monopoly to an area, in which case he was given what they transferred over to the new world - what they called their seigneurie system. He became the seigneur. That is not the same as sieur. Sieur is a title, seigneur is an ecomonic title. It means you have the right - the heredity right which cannot be revoked to a piece of property. It is inalienable to you. No one can take it away unless you owe money. But essentially no one can take it - the King can't even take it away.

They brought this system with them and this is one of the problems they had with colonization. Peasants didn't want to come and have to go thru the same crap they were going thru in France except (they had to) worry about Indians, yellow fever - you know, mosquitos, lack of good bedding. So this is the problem France had with colonization - they had no inducement for people to colonize. They had to pay them - actually had to pay a number of Acadian colonists to go to Acadia which is understandable, having been to Nova Scotia. They'd have to pay me to go there, too.

But seriously, the first book, by de Mousnier. The two volume set is indispensable for understanding how the French view their institution and how the institutions worked. And they're quite readable. You don't have to read all of it, but there are parts of it that you should understand, and that, is how the nobility worked. There were several different kinds of nobles. What took precedence, (part missing here) the leura de reason (?) or the book of rights. Each family, the head of the family had a book that was given to him by his father and in it had all the debts of his father, all the favors that were owed his father, all the favors of his father and other people, and for what. And it was expected for the oldest son to take it and add to the book. Now the other members of the family had the right to look at the book, copy anything they wanted, but they would never possess the book unless the oldest son died and left it to them.

In French genealogy circles, you can buy these books - they are still extant today, and French booksellers in France sell them to descendants who just want to see the (?) .. de reason for some famous person or some historic figure, etc. But families operated on you owe me - I owe you and swapped favors. It was a societal institution, it wasn't informal like the English. It was a ritualized concept.

You need to understand that because of merchants in early Colonial Louisiana until the late 1740's, that's what you had in Louisiana, merchants were either farmers or merchants. And farmers were a merchant of the sort, because they were exporting - they weren't subsistent farmers for the most part. Most of these people, after they were 10 years or so went into the export business, and they operated the same way. And you need to understand these concepts because a lot of these French .....(words missing here) start to make sense when you start thinking like the people who are making the records thought. And one (concept) is that if you owe someone, it's an institutionalized thing, it's not like "Well, gee - you helped me build my house and I'll get around to paying you back." Uh, Uh. If the guy says, "Look, I helped you build your house, my house just burned down - come over." You were expected to. And if not, he could sue in court and have the governor to order you to help build his house to pay back the favor.

There are some other concepts in there. The nobility and the bourgeois are two different things - but there were several different kinds. There was the nobility of the ..... There were those whose title stretched back to before there was a ..... on the French throne and there were a lot of families like still in France in the 16 & 1700's. These people looked at the French monarchy as a ....., then there were lawyers. And lawyers, if they were good at which they did, they eventually became the nobles. Because if they became a judge or counsellor of the king, they were ennobled (?) Now, they weren't given the title of a baron, or duke or count. They were called equiat..?.. If you look in the New Orleans and Mobile Sacramental records you will often see that word equisat?? That is generally given to a man who was a noble because he was a lawyer, or in acting as an accountant for the king, but it is usually given for technical services to the king. Otherwise, theyll give the title. But when it just says equisat like they're in the 1730's in New Orleans and you would find a man oliver??? de raissant who is a surveyer and they put equiesat...?? and that's because the father had been ennobled as a counsellor to the king.

You need to understand these institutions and the first book by de Mousnier, and it will do a very good job in an easy to read form. There's a large part of it you don't need to read, but you do need to understand some of these institutions. And with the second book by Braudel, and I'm sure the library has those, you'll understand how the French viewed business. They were not capitalists - they were monopolies. They understood monopolies real well - I have the monopoly from my china factory from this small little area in France. And that meant you were the only guy who's allowed to make china in that area. And you could sue and win if someone tried to make china in yur area. That's how they approached business. I have the right to do this and no one can interfere with it by doing the same thing. Which could have been a severe disadvantage with the English who understood trade a lot better - and capitalism.

With the French internet sources, you get a good... in there I give you several sites, some of them are better than others. But all of France, modern France divided up into departments. And those (illustration) are the departments of France. And they are more like counties than they are like states. All the records in France are kept in 1 of 3 ways - the national archives, the departmental archives or the city archives. The city archives are kept by the mayor. But the departmental & the national archives are kept by the French National government.

They put in the officials for each department other than the mayor of towns, which are elected locally and will be representative of the National Assembly. When you write letters to France or go on the internet you're going to discover each department has what's called a "cercle genealogique" - French for genealogical and it means genealogical society or group. You can ask these people and they will answer them - one question at a time! And I'm serious - you ask two questions and they will ignore it. You ask one question - you can e-mail them sometimes in English. It doesn't hurt to try in English first. Depending on who's receiving it and what kind of mood he's in. But trust me, most French men speak English almost as well as you do. They won't admit it to you - you may have to be friends.....

But each department has, and in the bigger towns also, one for that town as well. And what this can do is, they can look at things the Mormons haven't microfilmed. What they can do is look at published tables of births, baptisms and funerals. Now, after the French Revolution - after 1792, if you have an ancestor who comes over from France and there's a record after 1792, you can send the three coupons and they'll send it right back as quick as they can. That's required by law. Before 1792, it's up to the the towns. If they want to do it they can and if they don't they don't have to. The reason for that is that during the Revolution they made a distinction between... well, a baptism isn't a birth and this marriage, well, that's not really a marriage - that's a church rite. The Revolutionaries in France - that's how they were thinking at the time. And the funeral - that's really not a death. So they changed it to naissance - marriage, and decede - death. So now, from 1792 on, the French records were naissance, marriage and decede (?). You write for an n, m or d and they'll send it back to you. And they send very nice photocopies back. Because they're required by law that the photocopie be complete legible and readable and if not they'll supply you with a legal transcription, attested to as being a true transcript of whatever the document is. Very handy. Three bucks for a legal document.

France is all unto these departments and cities. Most all of the departments of France have cirque de genealogies - it's all on the internet. They have a website. And I have put an example of what are some of the better and some of the more typical. Now if they're in French - sorry! I mean, you know, they are French and it's for their business. But most of them, if you write them in English, I would suspect they would answer. It is my experience with these people that although I am writing to them in French - they are very helpful. I mean, they will do things that will astound me on occasion.

There's one other important source for French stuff. And that's the municipal library of the town. Suppose you have an ancestor where the Church records are no longer in existence, and believe me there are quite a few towns either because of fires or whatever, even like New Orleans where records are missing there , or Mobile, because of fires or whatever. The municipal library for these towns also has records. Also has books that maybe had been printed in 1620 or 1540 - you don't know. But is you write to them and you can write it in English - they'll help you out. I usually send five coupons if I'm asking for a photocopy. There's one library on Conposan (?) France, I asked and because I couldn't get the book, it was long out of print. I sent them $16 and they photocopied 220 pages for me - the entire book - for $16 bucks! I thought that was a hell of a deal! The town library is a very important resource in France and believe me the French genealogists use it. Because the town libraries were all initially set up as part of the seignieural dues that the segnieur town, whoever he was, owed the King. That there be a library there and a set of all the ordinances and writs of the king be on display at the town library. You need to know the way you get their address - these internet site with the French phone book, and it's kind of slow, but it works. And all you have to type in is Biblioteque Municipale and of the town. Now, if the town is real small, may not have a library, or if they're part of a bigger town politically, or for whatever reason, it'll show no answer. But that's like 1 % of all the towns in France. The rest of them have a town library. And believe me, they're very, very helpful. And I know you can write to them in English because I have known people who have and they respond just fine, just like you wrote in French. The only time its very important that you wreite in French is if you write for a record t the town archives.

Now, for the departmental archives. They are not required to do anything except keep the records. Some departmental archives, if you write them and say, "Gee, I am looking for a marriage contract for proof of marriage between these two people and I think it may have happened in 1700, can you help me?" Some will. Some will actually dig then and there and send you a lot more than you thought you sere asking for. Others will write back and say "We're only required under French law to maintain the archives in a presentable format, etc..... ... our hours are... You may come to see what we have". It's a hit or miss thing. I can tell you that its been my experience, about 50-50, half of them will help me, half of them will send me the letter telling me their hours and that I may come by and visit during those hours, if I present proof of who I am.

Of the ones who are helpful, in early Colonial Louisiana, you have a tremendous amount of people from Normandy coming in. At the time what constituted Normandy to the French was the purple area here, this green area here and a little bit of this area right here. (Illustration). That's a bunch of departments. And if all you know is Normandy and you're not sure of the town, try their internet address. But if you have a town, all the departments of Normandy have been very helpful to me. I mean, in one town, the town of Rubon (?) Where I have a guy who does to Canada in 1640, not did they get me his parents only, they got me his parent's birth, their parents marriages, their parent's deaths and took ti back three generations to 1500 for me. So Normandy is very helpful. All of them are like that in Normandy. I can tell you one that's not very helpful at all - that's Charente Maritime (Char-ant Mari-teem), which is in La Rochelle. But in La Rochelle the town libray is very helpful. And the town library can welk over to the mayorie (y?) Or to... they call them the Departmental arcives, but what they are stored in they call the Consul Generale. And they go over there, get the Microfilm, bring them back to the library and make me the copies, take it back over. And they will do that, and you pay for it. I mean it cost me $10 bucks a record - 10 coupons a record, but when you think about it you have no other choice thatn to hop a plane and go over there yourself and speak French to them. It's a bargain at $10 bucks a record. In St. Louis Cathedral it would cost you $12.

Anyway, I was going to leave the rest of the time open for questions because it's a big handout and I didn't get to go through the things in a great deal of detail, so whatever questions you have.....

(Q) The Favrot Papers at Tulane, are they accessible by the public?
(A) Yes, they have two sets of microfilm that go on ILL. They have microfilmed all the original documents. They ahve a published index, which is either three or five volumes. Do not go by the WPA guide. The WPA guide..... they told me. You need their book that they have published. I think it's published in '95 by the Howard Tilton Library in Tulane - three volumes and you don't even have to give them the cite, like well I know, for the Krebs succession for Hugo's second wife. "Well I know there's some stuff in there, would you send to me?" Yeah, they did it. For .25 a page, and legible. They must have some superb microfilm over there. But there are a number of other French and Spanish collections over there that this don't tell you about - you can access them throu their web site, Tulane University, then go to library and one of the selections is Special Collections and under there, if you go through there enough you will find all the Colonial era documents that they have. And one thing that they have is a transcript for those of you who have ancestors who came from Haiti, they now have microfilm for all the Haitian records with claims that the people who came from Haiti, into to New Orleans and Mobile made to the French council in New Orleans including the proofs of genealogy. Actually, as I say, for .25 a copy yo can't beat that price. But, they are very, very helpful. Unfortunately the only thing bad about Tulane is that their website is hellish to get around, to navigate. It's obviously was invented by someone who was not thinking of ease of use. Because when you start going thru special collections you get a lot of "this URL is not on server"and it is their button you pushed to get that message.

Any other questions?
(Q) - Bob Krebs - Do you know where Joseph died?
(A) - Joseph died in La Rochelle in 1755. His succession, according to the town library, his succession record extends over 300 manuscipt pages. And knowing the rate per page, I went - "you betcha!". La Rochelle, I need to go to, not just for Joseph, but for some other ancestors who were from there.

His succession was viciously disputed because his wife declares bankruptcy after his death. This is where knowledge of French institutions and French law comes into effect. Bankruptcy takes precedence over an estate in France. I am not sure how the English worked it at the time. But, if an estate is already settled - its settled. Is that not so? Well, in France that's not so. With the wife going bankrupt , it went back against his estate - and that's why there's so many documents there. But, I suspect there were a number of traders whose trading houses collapsed toward the beginning of the French and Indian War. It was a really bad time for the French to decide to fight the English again. Because what they had done was, they had clamped down so hard on this trading with the English that a lot of trading houses in la Rochelle, Bordeaux and LaHarve (?) fell apart. And the resulting bankruptcies rippled across France. It was a dumb thing they did. You know - you have the guys who are living off nobles, and they have no idea what trade is about, you know, making these decisions.

But, Joseph's wife went into bankruptcy, his third wife. I haven't found out when she died yet. By the way, another little interesting fact about Joseph that I meant to mention earlier. In 1724, Joseph, because his plantation is operating here in Pascagoula, he has workers on it, its a thriving enterprise and he's got slaves, decides he needs (words missing here) women for the workers. And he petitioned the Duke of Orleans who's the Regent for Louis XV, for fifty prostitutes from the prison for his workers on his plantation. They guy who send me this is a French historian and he said acording to the records, 46 were sent. Or 46 was released to him.

(Q) Were these white workers or black workers?
(A) The record doesnt say. The French - you know, what I think Joseph was looking - any kind of women will do for these guys. You know, the casinos hadn't opened....

(Q) "ooveray (?) were workers.....
(A) ooveray (?) That meant white. O.K. You have your answer.

(Q) When you talked about him getting rid of his estates did he make conveyances outright to his sons-in-law? How did he handle that?
(A) The conveyances were made to the sons-in-law and you'll find that in the Favrot papers. Favrot - his actual concession was at one time in the Favrot papers. No one knows what happened to it. It was not there when they got their hands on it. But they know from the Krebs concession there was plenty of evidence in these that Joseph signed over to Hugo. He was quite happy with Hugo as a son-in-law & that this was a transaction. He also sold some of the property to the second husband of his other daughter - not LaPrade.... (couldn't think of it.... Go over to the museum....

Krebs got the bulk of the property that he did not sell off here on the Pascagoula River but his great aunt is the one who truly made a bag of money on land speculation during the period. There is, in a book that was published in 1995 in Paris by a guy named Bernard(? Lougon?) which is about early Colonial history in Louisiana. He seems to indicate that the duchess was actually one of the underwriters of John Law, and that was nothing more than a pyramid scheme and she got out of the pyramid at the right time versus those who got stuck with worthless paper.

(Q) Did she ever come over here?
(A) I doubt if she would have. High nobility going to places like --high nobility wouldn't go to Canada. High nobility wouldn't even go to Martinique,which was considered the jewel of all the colonies. Frontenac, although he was from an old family, was not considered high nobility. It was not until the Marquis de Vaudrieul did we get high nobility in the colony, what the French would have considered high nobility.

(Q) Now, yousaid the duchess was considered Simons great aunt?
(A) Uh-huh.

(Q) And that she was married - she was really a marquess because she married a marquis?
(A)Yes.

(Q) But yousaid that in her back lineage she did have.
(A) Well, what happened was - the titles of baron, viscount, count, marquis and duke - and I won't go out the royal titles of prince and king - just those titles - the only persons that could award them to you were the kings. And the kind would award it the heriditarily (?) And it would specify whether it would travel only through a male line or you transfer it over to a female line. Becaue then (there were) some who could go thru the female line, some who couldn't. But, only the king could give you that title. And if he gave it to you hereditarily, he could also amend it, which means - raise it. They only way you could lose your title was by "lese majeste" - or treason to the king. There are nobles who do lose their titles periodically in French history - of higher nobility, if they'be been bad enough the king'd re-do it. If he could make it stick was always another issue. The second marquis was elected to a Duke after he had died. So technically the title of Duke went to the third marquis, his son. She's referred to--- but it's back-dated to 1710. Well, he marquis is dead when this occurs in 1713. Because he died in 1711.

(Q) Well...
(A) Louie elevated him in 1713, he had been dead two years. Well, Louis was kind of old then too, and it's not clear.

(Q) So she made him do it?
(A) Well, she might have gotten Louie to do it.

(Q) That's what I'm saying - she's a smart woman!
(A) But when you think about the St. Louis plantation and the..... of the land involved. I mean, going all the way from Mobile , almost over to Natchez!

(Q)Mobile to Natchez?
(A) Yeah! The entire Chaumont Concession stretched almost to Natchez.

(Q) But does that mean it was all in this area, too?
(A) But it wasn't all coastal. It was like - I forget the number of arpents it was, but it was like two million arpents.

(Q) But see, that's quite interesting and the little history we've got around here, they kept saying her concession was up the river
(A) No

(Q) That's where John Law's concession was, right?
(A) Right, but there's part of Chaumont Concession where what is not Louisiana. Because her manager for her whole operation over - was in Louisiana on the Mississippi River. You can find that in Conrad. And a number of censuses and things like that. And Mr. De Ville's books.... But the manager for her whole concession was over on the Mississippi River. And that's because it was not all coastal - like in a big strip like this - it's more like t-shaped, like this, from what I can figure out from the sources. But see, the trouble with the French National Archives is - they don't have to send you a photocopy. Now they are glad to make microfilm for you - they are profit-minded. They are glad to take a photograph for each page for you at $35 a photograph - yeah, and there's only X amount of money that I'm gonna find out, you know. Her concession as best that I can tell from French and American sources, it was several million arpents.

(Q)What did she do to get a concession?
(A)Well, remember who her husband was.

(Q)The marquis, right?
(A) He had served several ambassadorial posts for the king of France. He had been a minister for the King several times. He ws a member of the San Espirit (?) - there were 65 of them in all of France. It's like the order of St. Louis, but one notch up. It's where we get the expression Cordon Bleu from - because they were given a blue ribbon to wear. Bright blue ribbon. Like I say, there were 65 of them. All the kings kids got one, you know. You're talking about depending on who the king is at that point in time. Maybe only 59-60 people in France could wear it and her husband was one of them. Oh, she ws extremely well connected in Court - because of her husband, you know and if she was as enterprising as Joseph or his brothers or his sister, and when you think about it, after Joseph comes, his sister and her husband came, Lavigne or Lavergne, I mean. With the marriage of Doucin when he records that record - who attests to it in New Orleans when they got married in La Rochelle? His sister and brother-in-law Marie Ann Simon and Louis Lavergne. And they settled in America.

I believe another sister came down after her husband dies and all the kids are out of the house, so to speak. She came down here also. But the point is that all the people in his family on his mother's side (came), his mother came over with a sister and a half-sister. The sister married the head of the progenitor of the ancestors of the Poydras Family, which in later Colonial Louisiana history in the Spanish period, were very, very prominent - and during the territorial period they were extremely popular because they owned the bank in town! The Bank of Louisiana was owned by the Poydrases. And theier half-sister married into the Paternosts (?), progenitors of the Paternost or Paternostra families. They were obviously well worn. Most of the early daughters of the king were well worn, either bourgeois of petit noble. Petit noble just means that their lineage doesn't go back to before there was ..... on the .....of France basically or they weren't that economically important. They could have been politically well fixed but they just weren't hideously wealthy like the Duc de Sans Simone (?) Or something like that.

(Q) Do you give little lectures over at the university?
(A) Which university?

(Q) I thought you were teaching over there.
(A) No! Teach? No one would let me near their children!

(Q) There were many children in south Louisiana and I'm sure elsewhere, born to prostitutes. How were these children named?
(A) O.K. - in the Sacramental records - because I have one! Well, I'm not sure she was a prostitute or just a woman of poor judgement. But, in any case you'll find one of two words. "naturele" or "illegitime"- almost like illegitimate. There's a distinction in French law between the two terms - a naturale means the mother will name the father. An illegitime means she will not name the father - either because she doesn't know who it was or there's some economic incentive. The Baron de Mandeville, in the late Colonial times, his sister who was a baroness and had a right to the title baroness, and goes to Philadelphia to have a child, a naturele. But, for some reason the priest there doesn't say he's the dad because for some reason she doesn't mention it. That's the distinction they make. I doesn't matter if she's a prostitute or just a poor judgement. But any out of wedlock birth, it will say "naturele" and she'll name the father. Now the father doesn't have to acknowledge for his wife to name the father, but illegitime means that she doesn't know as it sounds illegitimate. "I don't know who the Dad is, the child does not have a father" and to Church law at that time, you know, if you don 't have a father you have no rights. You're out of the law.

(Q) In both cases would the child have the sake of the mother's surname?
(A) No. Mine took the father's surname.

(Q) If they named the father was it necessarily the father's name or..?
(A) They could take the father's surname with the permission of the father and to find that, you look in the donation books, or what are called the donation records. In Louisiana they are called the donation books. They have them here in Mississippi during the territorial period but do they call them donation books?

Comments: I think that was property - I don't know.
(A) Well, yes, that was property, being a property record. It tells his property, then that...
(A) Because yes, to the French, your name is a piece of property. You can sell your name, like Cadillac did!

(Q)Where would these be?
(A) Well, in Louisiana you look in the donation book, territorial for Mississippi? I would get into the property records. I don't know how they're organized.

(Q)State Archives?
(A) I would look in the county records during the territorial records in the county records. In the ancestry of mine she gives the son the father's name. He was listed as free naturale - that in 1813. By 1820 by an act of donation he gives his name to my ancestor, and his brother and sister.

(Q) The father does?
(A) The father does.

(Q)When the child becomes twenty?
(A) No, in 1820

(Q) You might find some of the pages missing!
(A) Well, in this case I was lucky. They were real careful to keep that record! Usually when they put naturele there's a reasonably good expectation that the father's going to claim the child. If they put illegitime , that's pretty much the mother saying that "the child's not going to have any legal rights to anything but my name". But, they also lost some other civil rights by being illegitimate. It's kind of lengthy to go into but in the Monscrat ?? book it's covered. It's a wonderful thing to read about how being a bastard was not the greatest of things to be in France. There were some other civil penalties to pay for that - and people would spend money to falsify church records so they could say "I was not illegitime". If any of you have seen the movie Les Miserables with Jean Voljean (?) - it's falsified papers. He was sporting around just like everybody did. It was not that common a thing for people to do. Because there was no penalty for it, with being illegitimate there were certain other penalties or loss of rights that you would have for being illegitimate. It wasn't like England at all in that respect. Any other questions? Thank you very much!

Good evening.....(in French) Bon nuit....friends and family,

My name is Joseph Simon de la Pointe...I come from a long line of adventurers....my father Hubert Simon left the Tavernay area of France to go to Montreal, to help found that great Canadian city. He was good friends with Charles LeMoyne, Bienville and d'Iberville's father and together they made a fortune in the fur trade. He married Marie Viez, whose father Robert was a bodyguard to the King Louie X1V and Robert's sister was the Marquis de Chaumont..who became a duchess in the Royal Court. So as you see....I had very good family and connections.

So I was born in 1670 in Montreal and my brother Ignace and I, of course, were on the first two boats with the Lemoyne brothers when they came to the Gulf Coast in 1699. For one thing, The fur trade was dying out in the east and we had to go west to get more beavers. We traveled the Mississippi, as well, as courier de broi, making even more money in the fur trade than did our fathers. We learned many Indian languages and got along splendidly with the native people, and so we were used by the French king, to help establish the settlement of New France. I made many trips back to France selling furs, sugar, tobacco and other goods from the islands Cuba and San Dominique. On one of these trips I married Catherine Foucault in La Rochelle....the granddaughter of the only admiral in French history to become Marshall of France....so again, very good connections. My aunt, the Duchess Chaumont received a concession ...the Chaumont concession for Louisiana, which amounted to amost two million arpents...from Pascagoula up to Natchez. I had to help her with that concession and did much business there and built a home in New Orleans, Mobile and Pascagoula. We had 4 children, but only the 2 daughters lived, and one of them here tonight, my sweet Josepha, who married Mr. Hugo Krebs, the famous Mr. Krebs of Pascagoula, who was a surgeon, planter and inventor. I deeded much of my land to them and now they can tell you about living on the Pascagoula.

Maria Joseph:

Oh Papa, the glorious times we had on our plantation...hard times yes, we worked hard to become the people we are now, but because of your resources, we wanted for nothing...I had my piano..my lovely dresses and you arranged the most wonderful marriage for me to this Hugo...

Hugo: I was born....in Germany and say what you want from last year....about marriage and the plantation and inventions.

Maria: Remember father and Hugo, when I was going to Natchez to visit friends and Red Shoe showed up warning us about the Indians ' plans to attack Fort Rosalie? He saved our lives!!!

Joseph: Yes, I gave Red Shoe his name..when he was just a boy he came to our plantation and became my friend and ally...I gave him my best pair of red leather boots, which please him so much...he worn them all the time!

Red Shoe: Many Frenchmen were arrogant and wanted our lands, but the LaPointes and Krebs were always our friends and so it was only right that I forwarned you to preserve your lives and our friendship.

Hugo: Recall your children with Maria...

Maria Joseph, yes...we had wonderful children and then there was your second wife...

Hugo: recount your second wife and children. And then ask for people in the crowd to say their last names if they are descendents from the Lapointe/Krebs....

Allow the names to be recounted.....

Joseph: Now , I am not buried in this Krebs Cemetery but you can see that just about all the people buried here are my descendants and I was pulled from the ether realm to make an appearance to share with my people the real founders of this country .... Must tell you I lived to an old age..died in La Rochelle in 1755...had three wives...and now I want to introduce you to a few more people from those earliest days of 1700.....my step-daugther Catherine Dousine...the child of my second wife. Come with me!

Hello Catherine!!! And Graveline!!!!! Bon Seiur....

The Civil War Trousers of

Alfred Edward Krebs, Tobin's Tennessee Light Artillery Battery

by Roger B. Hansen - Demps Mountain, Georgia

Acknowledgements.

The following gentlemen provided valuable input: Mr. Maury Schuh, Mississippi; Mr. John E. Johnston, Atlanta; Mr. Frederick Adolphus, Germany; Mr. Ben Tart, North Carolina.

Location and Provenance.

The trousers were loaned to the Krebs-LaPointe Museum in Pascagoula, Mississippi, by Edwina Krebs in 1958, but have not been displayed in many years. Family history indicates that the trousers were made by Mrs. Helaire (Mary Louise) Krebs for her 17-year-old son specifically during the period of time when he was a Confederate soldier. Photographs of trousers were provided by Mr. Matthew Powell, Executive Director of the museum. However, the inside of the trousers and fly were unavailable for examination or photographs. Special Note: The Krebs-LaPointe museum building is one of the oldest colonial structures in the Mississippi Valley.

Mary L. Krebs

Background.

Alfred E. Krebs (1847-1898) descended from one of the founding German / French families of the Mississippi Gulf Coast early in the 18th century. Their family settlement was initially on the banks of the Pascagoula River about 3-4 miles north of where the river empties into the Gulf of Mexico. A cavalry company or artillery battery was frequently stationed within a couple miles of the family settlement from 1863-65 at Williams' Saw Mill. No less than 10 Krebs' men from the Mississippi Coast enlisted in 7 different units of the Confederate Army. Several enlisted in Mobile, Alabama, 30 miles from Pascagoula. [1]

M1849 Colt Baby Dragoon Revolvers made in 1857. The top one was found by the author near the original Krebs tract in East Pascagoula.

Confederate Service.

Arthur R. Krebs, Alfred's older brother, transferred from a local cavalry company[2] to Tobin's Tennessee Battery on May 30, 1863. Tobin's Battery (and other units) had been rotating to the Mississippi Coast out of Mobile since the middle of 1863 to provide a more reactive force to US Naval raids along the coast. Generally assigned for a month "tour", they would be sent back to Mobile on a rotation basis. While in the Pascagoula community at least one other man enlisted in the artillery battery.[3]

Alfred, being under military age (17), obtained his parents' consent to be with his brother and enlisted in Captain Thomas F. Tobin's Light Artillery Battery, at Blakeley, Alabama, on September 1, 1864.[4] At that time Blakeley, at the head of the eastern shore of Mobile Bay, was bustling with activity as a point of mobilization for reserve regiments and small veteran commands to watch the Federal Navy that had just entered Mobile Bay. It is assumed the trousers that are the subject of this article were either issued to him at Blakeley at this time or brought from home.[5]

The battery was very actively involved in responding to General Davidson's 4000 troop raid to cut the Mobile & Ohio Railroad above Mobile in late November and early December 1864. The raid was defeated near Leaksville, Mississippi on December 10, 1864. The 6-gun battery had been rushed 60 miles northeast out of Mobile, Alabama and was in Leaksville on December 10, but did not participate in the skirmish outside of the town that halted the special van guard of the 2nd New York Cavalry.[6] As the Federal force withdrew south to the coastline, the battery (as part of a larger force) parallel tracked the enemy south, with a river between them. Once near the coast, the Confederate force went into a defensive position on Jackson Creek 15 miles west of Mobile on December 12. As General Davidson licked his small wounds in West Pascagoula, Mississippi, Union General Gordon Granger landed a 4000-man expedition at East Pascagoula to protect Davidson's force and to also aggressively threaten Mobile and its communication from the west.[7]

Tobin's Battery, as part of a 3000-man brigade commanded by General Bryan Thomas, opposed General Granger on Franklin Creek, Mississippi (at the state line) from December 15 to December 29 in several skirmishes. Tobin's battery opened fire on the Yankees at least once near Goode's Lake. On December 16, just after Granger's troops arrived at Franklin Creek, Private Alfred E. Krebs was captured.

Pocket watch, solid brass Confederate Infantry button, and bullets found by the author at the site of the skirmish where Alfred Krebs was captured on December 16

After he was captured, Alfred was held by Granger's provost marshal in East Pascagoula with about a dozen other prisoners and was moved via boat to confinement in New Orleans on Christmas Day, 1864. He was transferred to the Prisoner of War Camp on Ship Island on January 22, 1865. He remained a prisoner until about May 5, 1865 when all the prisoners were transferred to Vicksburg via the Mississippi River for exchange. He was paroled about May 10, 1865.[8]

Alfred Krebs lived until 1898 and fathered 14 children.

Remarks on the Trousers.

Examined through the glass as permission to remove not granted.

Weave: Observations of the non-faded areas appears the cotton warp (vertical) is a natural unbleached white cotton warp with a gray cotton warp every other thread with a woolen gray weft (horizontal), that could be the "gray" natural coloring of the fleece. It was more common in Lower South jean that the cotton was natural, and the wool was a dyed fabric, when it was dyed at all. It is an easy way to give a subtle pattern and overall color to a fabric. Written accounts from Mississippi indicate when a fabric was woven at homesites, they would generally dye the entire material after it was woven making the color generally the same warp and weft. As this is not the case here, there is a probably these trousers were factory manufactured jeans or linsey. However, the weave is very easy to do on a two, three, or four harness manual loom (if woven at home), as well as woven on commercial looms.[9] Based on thread count on warp and weft, Frederic Adolphus confirmed that the Krebs' pant fabric has a warp with a one over and two under typical jean weave which was very common to Confederate uniforms in the Lower South, and that "based on non-faded areas the color is definitely a dyed steel gray" rather than natural fleece. For details on the weave see photographs # 10-12.[10]

Common Features: The brace buttons are made of bone and it is assumed the fly buttons are the same (photographs # 5); the internal osnaburg lining provides reinforcement to the waist. The "mule ear" pockets and the waist tabs attached at the back to tighten the waist were common to Confederate and civilian trousers (see photograph # 1). The stitching across the pocket flap is believed to be the internal stitching to hold the pocket lining material in place (see photograph # 2).

Unique Features: There are more features that are unique than common considering the location and period used:

- The trouser legs are tapered from top to bottom, which is more indicative of tailor-made trousers. Most trousers of the period, including uniforms were straight with the leg diameter same at top as at bottom.
- The manner the mule ear pocket top stitching continues through top of the waist (see photograph # 4). [11]
- The weave has a natural (white) warp alternating with a colored (gray) warp.
- There is no waist "band" sewn separately to the top of the pants as was customary of the period. The practice to not use a waist band would have been used to save labor, and perhaps, material. "This feature came into vogue after the Civil War, and can be observed on civilian clothing, and especially uniform pants of WW1 and WW2, both American and German."[12]
- The top hem of the waist has machine topstitching. "Many homemade garments were partially made on machines, far more than 'uniformologists' would like to believe. This is indeed noteworthy".[13]
- The right side of the trousers, seen above the top left of the waist has a small lip protruding. It cannot be determined explicitly without removing the trousers from the case, but this lip is a watch "pocket" (see photograph # 2). This pocket watch flap looks very comparable to the flap on the watch pocket on the Brunet Confederate trousers (see photograph # 8).

One other pair of Confederate trousers are known to have the general unique tailored features of the Krebs' pants. The "Brunet pants," belonged to Rene H. Brunet who was also was stationed in the western defenses of Mobile, Alabama, with Fenner's Louisiana Battery February – April 1865. Tobin's Battery was stationed in the same defenses during the same period and this lends credence that the unique pattern was from late war Mobile. Though the Brunet trouser pattern is extremely similar, the material used was significantly different. The Brunet trousers were made of gray kersey.[14]

Summary Opinion

1. A full review and comparison of the trousers cannot be made inside the glass case.
2. Factory made or home loomed jean fabric with two-toned cotton warp and probably a dyed wool weft to obtain overall "steel gray" coloring. Without chemical analysis, the dye composition cannot be determined.
3. Civilians could purchase military manufactured jean from the factories or depot quartermasters or exchanged raw wool at factories for jean. The closest depot and / or manufacturing facilities to the Krebs family was Mobile 30 miles to the east. However, the material could have come from several depots in Mississippi or Alabama and had been shipped to Mobile.
4. The pattern is unique with labor saving designs and is very similar to a pair of trousers (Brunet) associated with late war Mobile. The material fits the general weave and color used in the manufacture of Confederate uniforms in the Lower South, but the machine stitching and leg taper indicates tailoring. The tailoring was likely performed in Mobile, but is just as likely what the local provenance states – that they were made by his mother.

B, D, G and H, 15 CS Cavalry, 1st Mississippi Reserves, Co. C and K, 7th Alabama Cavalry. These units were stationed at one month's increments at Williams' Saw Mill near the Krebs' Settlement on Krebs' Lake north of Pascagoula 1863-65. The mill was ransacked of lumber and basically dismantled in January 1865 by Granger's troops. Alfred Krebs' immediately family were involved in farming and mercantile business.

[4] The Battle of Mobile Bay and the surrender of Fort Morgan at the bay entrance on August 23, 1864, spurred the governors to call out the military reserves in Mississippi and Alabama in anticipation of a land battle near Mobile. The event also triggered a spike in local enlistments.

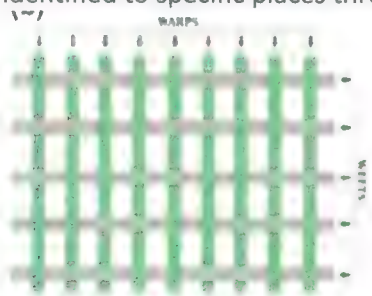
[9] Email from John E. Johnston, February 9, 2021: "The natural color of wool varies from white to brown to gray to black not only between breeds but also within breeds. For example, the Atlanta History Center has four Gulf Coast sheep, a heritage breed very common to the Gulf Coast up until the mid-20th century. Three of the sheep have off-white wool and one has light brown wool. When sheared, the light brown wool looks like it has been dyed with a weak solution of black walnut hulls. The Gulf Coast/Louisiana sheep that had natural occurring gray and brown wool were also immune to a parasite that affected sheep in other parts of the South.

[10]Noted author on Confederate uniforms, Frederick Adolphus, has stated that he has found in his research that Lower South linsey (linen and wool) and jean (cotton and wool) were referred to in interchangeable terms, based upon the weave. Linsey from one factory could be described as jean from another. In addition, "the 2-1 jeans weave is far and away the most commonly encountered Southern uniform cloth weave. It is a generic weave that has documentable uniforms identified to specific places throughout the Lower South", February 11, 2021.



[11] The trousers worn by C.W. Mitchell, Company F, 7th Alabama Cavalry and issued in the fall of 1864 in south Alabama shows typical "mule ear" pocket construction when there is a waist band.

HUGO ERNESTUS KREBS

Marie Josephe Simon dit La Pointe
Submitted by Betty Clark Rodgers

Hugo Ernestus Krebs' immigration to the Gulf Coast is a mystery as the date is not listed among ship lists or in any family records. His family is well documented though, and he is among the earliest pioneers to settle having first been documented June 30, 1739 when he witnessed the marriage of Jean Mayer and Jeanne Finaux, Germans at Mobile. This document also states that Hugo is the "husband of Marie Joseph Simon". In 1738, Marie Josephe witnessed the baptism of her sister's child and was not noted as being married to Krebs at that time. There is no extant marriage record for them but we now know that they were married by June 30, 1739. (Love's Legacy, Vidrine Neumagen, Germany was the ancestral home of Hugo Krebs, located on the Mosel River near the city of Trier. Hugo's parents were Johann Krebs and Anna Charitas Fritsch, who were married on February 4, 1702. Johann Krebs died on October 21, 1751 and Anna Charitas died on March 4, 1773. Nine children were baptized to this family: Susanna on January 22, 1703; Gertrude on March 18, 1705; Johann Reinard on May 1, 1706; Johann Gerlach on May 15, 1708; Caterina on October 18, 1709; Anna Maria Caterina on March 15, 1712; Hugo Ernst on May 15, 1714; Maria Anna on August 8, 1716; and Johann Peter on February 28, 1721. (1)

The mother or birth date of Marie Joseph Simon La Pointe has not been documented, but family records indicate that she was the daughter of Joseph Simon dit La Pointe and Marie Foucault. Some people say that she was the daughter of La Pointe's second wife, Catherine Doucin.(2) Marie Josephe died on November 7, 1751 and was buried in the "parish cemetery". It is not known whether this was in Mobile or in the family cemetery on Krebs Lake at Pascagoula, Mississippi.

Hugo Ernestus and Marie Simon Krebs were parents of these children: Joseph, born January 11, 1742; Francoise, born January 18, 1743; Pierre, born December 29, 1743; Marie Jeanne, baptized October 28, 1745; Mathias, baptized March 6, 1747, died at age four; Marguerite, baptized December 25, 1749; Louis Augustin born December 14, 1750.

After Marie Josephe's death, Hugo married Marianne Chauvin de Joyeuse about 1753. Marianne was the daughter of Phillippe Chauvin dit Joyeuse and Maria Anne Danis of Kaskaskia. Children born to Hugo Ernestus Krebs and his second wife, Marianne Chauvin were: Hugo Daniel, born December 25, 1754; Antoine Raphael, born September 8, 1756; Marie Theresa, born August 1, 1759; Anna Charite, born January 12, 1761; Basile, born March 8, 1763; Marie Rose born 1766 and Cecelia, born 1767. (3)

The last will and testament of Hugo Krebs is dated September 2,1 1776, but his death date is not recorded. In his will, he acknowledges children of both of his wives and the will itself is a very informative historical document as it specifies children, ages, settlement to his wife Marianne and each of all the children. The will was hotly contested by the wife and children of the second marriage and claims were filed in the courts at New Orleans.

The June 28, 1787 inventory of the Archives of the Fort of Mobile lists the following documents brought into the courts to settle the argument: Deeds of grants made in 1715 to M. [Joseph de] La Pointe, stepfather of the Krebs children, of the first marriage, and inventory of the said deceased numbered 640-641; Inventory of the property of the late Jose [Joseph] La Pointe numbered 642; Act of renunciation by the widow [of Hugo Ernestus] Krebs [Marie Simon de La Pointe] and her son, Hugo Krebs, and others, passed during the British regime, numbered 643-644; Miscellaneous documents of the succession of the late Hugo Ernestus Krebs, numbered 645. (4)

These selected documents have mysteriously disappeared from the inventory of the archives of the Fort of Mobile since the inventory date of 1787.

Marianne Chauvin Krebs' will is dated July 30, 1799. It is thought that she died in about the year of 1800.

Hugo Ernestus Krebs is credited with having invented and perfecting an early cotton gin for his cotton crops on the Pascagoula River. It was seen and written in about an account from the travels of Bernard Romans and also Le Page du Pratz in 1734, who described its fashion and operation in detail. (5)

The La Pointe-Krebs House has been the stopping place for travelers, priests, surveyors and government officials since the 1720's. Families gathered there to await priests from the Mobile Diocese to perform marriages and baptisms.

Many documents are recorded that cite "the house of La Pointe" or "the house of Krebs" as the location of these ceremonies. Krebs also owned property in Mobile and New Orleans.

As the Krebs' families grew, additions were made to accommodate them by adding rooms on the east and west ends of the house. The house has been continuously inhabited by ancestors and descendants of the Krebs family since its construction in the 1720's to the 1950's. Jackson County then acquired possession from Ford family descendants and leased the house and grounds to the Jackson County Historical Society who manages the historic house and museum. The Krebs family cemetery adjoins the house site and is still being used for burials of Krebs descendants.

JOSEPH SIMON dit LA POINTE

HUBERT SIMON emigrated to Canada in 1656 from Tavernay, France. On November 27, 1659 Simon married MARIE VIEZ de la MOTHE, daughter of ROBERT VIEZ de la MOTHE.

The Chaumont-Quitry family merged in the 1680's. Chaumont was from Calais, a noble 12th century family who were hawk keepers.

The connection of La Pointe to Chaumont is through the merging of the 2nd marquis Chaumont's second marriage to MARIE THERESE VIEZ de la MOTHE, sister to Joseph's maternal grandfather ROBERT VIEZ de la MOTHE, she being Joseph Simon's great-aunt.

Marie Viez Simon's father, ROBERT VIEZ de la MOTHE was 1st Sgt., Company of the Guards (of the King). Complete records are accessible. The positions of Guards of the King are reserved for nobility or those able to pay for the honor to be the King's guard. His service record shows a wife who was named MARIE TERESE de St. Paul (a different surname from Viez). The de St. Pauls families were in the family groups of the Ducs of Luxembourg.

Robert de la MOTHE's sister, Marie Therese did become a marquesse through her husband, the 2nd marquis Chaumont.

Louis the 14th, right before his death, becauuse the 2nd marquis was a diplomat and had served the King in a number of ambassadorial & ministerial posts during his career, elevated his marquis... to a duchy, which was the hightest honor you could hold without being of royal blood in France coming down to 1710. So technically she was a duchess, but not by marriage, because of a back-dated document.

Mansion's Shorter French and English Dictionary, Boston 1965:

> marquis - [marki], s.m. marquis, marquess.
> marquisat - [markiza] s.m. marquisate.
> marquise - [markiz] s.f. marchioness.

The Winston Dictionary, College Edition 1946:

> marquee [mar-kwis] n. English spelling as plural of of marquee: so called because of it was to shelter a noble lady or marquise. 1. A field tent, 2. A window awning, etc.

This early Krebs family residence, properly known as the LaPointe-Krebs House, for many years was known as the Old Spanish Fort. French Canadian Joseph Simon dit LaPointe was the builder and Hugo Krebs was his son-in-law through marriage to his daughter Marie Josephe.

The original structure of this house is the two center rooms, which could have been built as early as 1718, but the exact date is not known. Most likely it was part of a planned fort complex that was never executed in 1726. The walls are a combination of cypress and cedar frame filled in with oyster shell cement and a bouzillage of clay and moss. It was unroofed in a hurricane in the 1770's, and because of Krebs' expanding family, rooms were added on the east and west ends about 1820. This is the time period chosen for the restoration to preserve the integrity of the old residence.

The Krebs family has called the old house the "Old Spanish Fort" since the late 1800's. According to research by Dr. G. Douglas Inglis of Seville, Spain, this house, among others on the coast at Pascagoula, was ordered to be armed against the English by the Commandant at New Orleans during the late Spanish period. Because of the sturdy construction and 18 inch walls, this is most likely the reason the family called this old house the "Old Spanish Fort".

The LaPointe-Krebs House and adjoining family cemetery are owned by Jackson County and leased to the Jackson County Historical Society and is open to the public.

Helpful Books for French Genealogy

1. Mousnier, Roland E., The Institutions of France under the Absolute Monarchy, 1598-1789, Vol. I translated by Brian Pearce, Vol. II translated by Arthur Goldhammer (Chicago: Univ. of Chicago Press, 1979).

   This two volume set is indispensable for understanding the structure of French society and culture at this point in time.

2. Braudel, Fernand, Civilization and Capitalism: 15th - 18th Century. 3 vols.

   Vol. I, The Structures of Everyday Life: The Limits of the Possible, translated and revised by Siân Reynolds (New York: Harper & Row, 1981);

   Vol. II, The Wheels of Commerce, translated by Siân Reynolds (New York: Harper & Row, 1982); and

   Vol. III, The Perspective of the World, translated by Siân Reynolds (New York: Harper & Row, 1984).

   This three volume set gives a different perspective on societal forces moving history during this period. A superb explanation of the forces driving colonization of North America.

3. Saffroy, Gaston, Bibliographie généalogique héraldique et nobiliaire de la France: des origines à nos jours, imprimés et manuscrits. 5 vols. (Paris: LIBRAIRIE Gaston SAFFROY, 4, rue Clément, 75006, 1975-1988).

   This is a must for finding anything genealogical published in France prior to 1983. Unfortunately it is doubtful whether there will ever be an English version, but the name indices for publications, etc. are invaluable to finding family histories. These books can save a great deal of time, especially for "notable" families. The trick then becomes finding the publication.

I refer you to recommendations made on my behalf by the Conde de Aranda [Pedro Pablo Abarca de Bolea, Conde de Aranda], the Comte d'Egmont, and the Comte de Montmorin [Armand-Marc, Comte de Montmorin-Saint-Hérem], whose support I have solicited. I am sending you a certified document, which the widow Mariana Josefa Cresp signed in my presence. Your Grace will note that she has no grounds for a claim against the land of her deceased husband, which belongs to the children of the first marriage.

This woman only wants to sow dissension among both families, even though she has lost the same lawsuit on three occasions. She has spent close to a thousand pesos from her first marriage on these suits. On the day set for her to turn over the land, she incited her children to bring suit before Your Grace's tribunal against the aforementioned children of the first marriage to make them pay for buildings she constructed on the land, such as the house, cabins, gardens, et cetera. She claims this indemnification without giving consideration to the long period of time that they have extracted products such as pitch and wood from the property. I feel it necessary to tell Your Grace that this woman brags of having the judge in her power, and she claims that she can get him to do anything she says. Such boasts are disgraceful. She did not solicit a search for copies of documents in the archives, as these would negate her claim. If the copy that I enclose is valid, please sign it and return it to me to act upon it. These people are always fighting among themselves, mother against children, brothers against mother. They are, in a word, a bunch of vagabonds, fugitives from justice, without prudence or a sense of right or wrong. For this reason I am writing you so that you will not be surprised. May God protect you many years.

Dear Ms. Rodgers:

Thank you for your FAX of this morning. After reading your request, I am sorry to disappoint you but I don't believe we have the papers which you are looking for. While we have the papers that have been translated in The Favrot Family Papers, Vol. I-III, we do not hold all the documents which are mentioned therein (i.e. the papers contain the letter from Favrot to Miro but not the certified document of Mariana Josefa Cresp and the inventory of the archives of the Fort of Mobile but not all the documents listed in that inventory).

I hope that we understand your FAX correctly, although I think it explains my confusion with your request yesterday. If we can be of assistance in the future, please don't hesitate to ask.

Sincerely,

Courtney Page

Dear Clerk:

If I have reached the wrong department, please pass this along to the proper place.

This concerns a search for early court records during the 1780's 1790's.

I am searching for suits filed by Mariana Chauvin, the widow Krebs against the children of her deceased husband, Hugo Ernestus Krebs' and his first wife Marie Simon LaPointe (Krebs).

These papers are needed to clear family papers during the 1700's regarding the LaPointe family residence and property at Pascagoula known as the LaPointe/Krebs House aka the Spanish Fort. In preparation for our tricentennial in 1999, we are researching this time period.

In the following page, I show reference to these suits by Madame Mariana Chauvin, Widow Krebs, found in papers housed at Tulane in the inventory of Mobile. Pascagoula papers would have been in Mobile at that time, but since it involved Madame Krebs in New Orleans, I think that some of this might show up in your records.

I am sending you a certified document, which the widow Mariana Josefa Cresp signed in my presence. Your Grace will note that she has no grounds for a claim against the land of her deceased husband, which belongs to the children of the first marriage.

This woman only wants to sow dissension among both families, even though she has lost the same lawsuit on three occasions. She has spent close to a thousand pesos from her first marriage on these suits. On the day set for her to turn over the land, she incited her children to bring suit before Your Grace's tribunal against the aforementioned children of the first marriage to make them pay for buildings she constructed on the land, such as the house, cabins, gardens, et cetera.

THESE ARE THE DOCUMENTS THAT ARE SO VITAL TO OUR RESEARCH THAT MIGHT APPEAR IN THIS SUIT:

S:3rd Deeds of grants made in 1715 to M. [Joseph de] La Pointe, stepfather of the Krebs children, of the first marriage, and inventory of the said deceased, numbered 640-641

T:3rd Inventory of the property of the late José [Joseph] de La Pointe, numbered 642

V:3rd Act of renunciation by the widow [of Hugo Ernestus] Krebs [Marie-Simon de La Pointe], and her son, Hugo Krebs, and others, passed during the British regime, numbered 643-644

In the will of the Widow Krebs (Mariana Chauvin) this statement is made:

"...following the death of my aforementioned husband inventories are being made before FRANCISCO BROUTIN..."

Perhaps this Notary would contain records about this suit.

SUMMARY:

I need:

Variations of name spellings:

KREBS - Creps, Crepes, Kreps, etc.
Mariana Chauvin, Widow Krebs.

Joseph Simon dit LaPointe (father of Kreb's first wife)
Grantor of title of property to the Pascagoula land.

Simon is the surname; sometimes listed as Joseph LaPointe.

If it can be determined that these papers are in your possession, I will make arrangements to come over there for photocopies. Or, if permissible, you can make the copies and advise meof the cost. I will remit money when I receive a statement.

I am not asking for genealogy research, I just want to locate the papers and receive copies.

Because of the importance of these papers in our research I would appreciate a reply as prompt as possible. Thank you for your assistance in this matter.

Sincerely,

Betty

Bon Pacquet

There are numerous historic homes in the Louisiana area, but few still intact are as old as Bon Pacquet. Located in Slidell, it is possibly the fourth oldest home in Saint Tammany Parish. The simple three room house has been growing and evolving for four generations, standing the tests of war and depression, to reach the uncertain purgatory in which it now exists.

Pierre Cousin was the first to take an interest in the property. He was born in Bethune, Northern France, migrated to Canada, and later came to New Orleans. Pierre married Miss Francoise Renard and had one son Jean François born in 1743. They settled on Bayou Saint John, in the vicinity of City Park, and established a brick-making kiln. There was intense construction in the city at this time and Pierre prospered.

Pierre Cousin died in 1745 and his son Jean Francois, being the only heir, obtained the entire brick-making operation. He moved it to Bayou Lacombe. After accumulating considerable wealth, Jean Francois married Catherine Peuche Carriere. They had three children; two daughters Louise and Eliza, and one son Francois. Through a second marriage to Cesaire Ducre were born; two daughters Myrthe andC'eleste, and three sons, Terence, Anatole, and Adolphe.

At the callow age of twelve, Terence was sent to France for his education at the "Ecole Louis Le Grand followed five years later, and studied at "Le College Soreze."

The Bon Pacquet property was purchased by Jean Francois Cousin for his son Terence while he was still studying abroad. Leon Melon had received the original Spanish grant for the property on May 14, 1787 from Governor Miro of Spain. The property, consisting of 1,200 acres, was put in Terence's name on December 28, 1826. Three years later Terence sold the property to his brother Anatole and purchased the Dubuisson property on Bayou Liberty. Tranquility Plantation

A large log cabin stood on the Bon Pacquet property. Here Anatole and his family lived until the new brick kiln operation was underway. In approximately 1829 he had a modest three room brick house built directly adjacent to the log cabin. A large raised veranda spanned the front portion of the house, and a smaller one was located in the rear. The house was detailed with fine turned columns, heavy wood shutters, and French doors.

To the rear of the main house was the kitchen. This was simply a large brick room. The left portion was used as the pantry and for wine storage. There was a sizable fireplace for cooking, but all of the baking was done in the red clay oven situated to the far right of the infirmary.

To the left of the kitchen was a spacious wooden building used for general storage. Immediately to the right of the kitchen was the brick salt house. It was low, dark, and cool for preserving meat.

An impressive, well proportioned, two story garconniere was built shortly afterward next to the salt house. The first floor had a packed dirt floor and was seldom used. The airy room on the second floor was for the older boys in the family.

The infirmary for the entire plantation was located to the right of the main house. It consisted of one brick room with a fireplace, and a front veranda. There were over two hundred slaves working the kiln and tending the fields, so this was a badly needed structure.

All of the buildings had cypress shingled roofs. The floors were also of cypress, obtained locally.

Anatole Cousin developed a thriving brick business. He had schooners to take the bricks to the growing communities scattered along the bayous. Bon Pacquet was a complete economic and social entity. The main house served as the center of activity for the bustling complex. It was not just a home to live in, it was a place to work, and a place that was working for them. Enough crops were grown to support the family and slaves, thus creating a self-sustaining economic unit.

Mrs. de la Vergne, one of the present owners, related an interesting story about the house during the Civil War. She explained how all the slaves had been set free. Some did not leave though, and her great grand father Anatole gave each family a plot of land to work. One old black woman Melanie stayed on as the Cousin's housekeeper. The day the Yankee soldiers came to Bon Pacquet, Anatole, Dominique Rouquette the Louisiana poet, and their friend Doctor Dubeurg, all were in the back room of the house. When the Yankee soldiers demanded that she let them into the room, Melanie stationed herself in front of the solid door and insisted that her mistress was extremely sick in that room and they could not go in. The soldiers believed her and the three were saved. Terence Cousin was not as lucky. He was taken captive at his property on Bayou Liberty and taken to Fort Sumpter.

Anatole Cousin died in 1890, and the property was purchased by Colonel Auguste Tabary. Auguste was not interested in the brick business and used Bon Pacquet as a fine vacation home. The brick kiln was purchased by Fritz Solmen and re-established in Slidell. Today it is the Saint Joe Brickyard.

Being a fine craftsman, Auguste undertook several renovations to update the house to turn of the century standards. The original log cabin, directly to the right of the main house, was replaced by three wooden rooms. Now a continuous veranda swept the front facade. It provided shade and served as the main living area in the house. He also added a room on to the rear veranda. The kitchen, salt house, and infirmary remained basically as they were.

When Auguste died in 1898 there were seven children to divide the property among; three daughters, Augusta, Selika, and Zulma, and four sons, Sidney, Emile, Anatole and Jeanne. Each was given one seventh of the property. Augusta bought Sidney, Emile, and Jeanne's shares, which consisted of the three original rooms, one room in the new addition, the kitchen, and the salt house. Zulma bought Anatole's share, and her holdings included three rooms in the addition, and the infirmary. Selika held her one Bon Pacquet continued to exist as a summer home. Mrs. de la Vergne recounted the carefree stories of her summers there as a girl in the 1920's. Her family would leave for the house during the first week of June and stay until All Saints Day in November. A train, "The Great Northern", once ran from New Orleans to Covington. The family and their servants would take the train as far as the Bonfouca station and then take a carriage through the paths to the house. A schooner would come from New Orleans with the trunks and cases. Neuhauser's Store in Slidell would send groceries and great blocks of ice to the family twice a week. The train with the ice was always anxiously awaited. One summer in the mid 20's the family returned to Bon Pacquet and found a road had been cut through the forest to the house. A touch of the romantic tranquility of a secluded vacation residence was lost with the ease of the automobile.

In the 1920's Mrs. de la Vergnes father Louis Victor Menard had the house updated once again. The back rooms had been settling for years and Louis had it torn down and replaced with two large wood rooms. He had a small kitchen added by enclosing the left rear veranda. The floor of the garconniere was paved and divided into bathrooms. Louis had a reservoir built next to the well and had the water piped into the new bathroom.

Late in the 30's the property again underwent considerable changes. Two bathrooms were added on the veranda of the main house. A kitchen was built to the far right, and the rear veranda was garconniere had a two story wood addition with two bathrooms added. A bathroom was added to the infirmary and the front veranda was enclosed to become a room.

The Bon Pacquet property now belongs to Mrs. de la Verne, her sister Mrs. Tremoulet and to the heirs of her ~~sister~~ AUNT MRS. A.A. Mayer. The house was abandoned in 1971 and was quickly stripped of its fine detail work and furnishings by local vandals.

It seems a terrible waste that in this country there are no organizations, as in Europe, set up to protect such properties as Bon Pacquet for historical interest. People should be made culturally aware of the importance of these buildings. Bon Pacquet is too good to lose.

OF CONTEMPORARY INTEREST IS A PLAY WRITTEN AT THE HOUSE BY ANATOLE COLLIN, HIS SON FRANCOIS ANDRE COLLIN AND DOMINIQUE ROULETTE. THIS PLAY IS NOW BEING TRANSMITTED FROM FRENCH TO ENGLISH BY THE ST. TAMMANY HISTORICAL SOCIETY TO BE PUT ON AT ~~THE~~ A PLAYHOUSE NEAR COVINGTON AS PART OF THE BICENTENNIAL CELEBRATION.

Dear Johnnie,

Sorry I'm so long in getting a big thank you off, but we really enjoyed the visit and your help made it more so. I've gotten all the papers sorted and filed but now to go thur and analyze them to see just what is what.

Going thur the book Mobile church records-you say you couldn't give all the sources but where did you get the following;

1735-Marriage of Hugo Ernestus Krebbs & Marie LaPointe

1750-Marriage of Hugo Ernestus Krebbs & Marianna Chauvin-wrong-LaPointe didn't die till 1751

1776-Death of Hugo Ernestus Krebbs-I have his will dated that date

1806-on baptismal of a daughter of Joseph & Marie Louise BRYANT (think it should be DUPONT)

The book "Creole Mobile" source for the following that you didn't give;

Birth of son of Basilio & MARCHAND 18-6-1799

Death of dau of Hugo & Chauvin 1771-La Hist Soc list it as 3-8-1799

Do you know if Basilio & MARCHAND had other children? Did Dubussion remarry after Anna died, what about their children, I've found nothing on them so far. I got her children from Louisia LeFleau will. What about HINDEDNBURG children, if any? Do you know who the parents of ELENOR HINDERBURG nee LeFLEAU were? All the documents I've found on my LeFeau line has never had an R it the name, so feel she is connected to the family, also saw somewhere that she was cousin to JOSEPH JR.

What are the documents that the lady has on the LeFLEAU? What kind of book is she publishing? I got a flyer on the will book that KING & BARLOW are publishing, think I might order it.

We didn't stop at Daulphine Island, after I saw the long causeway to it, I chickend out. I just have this thing about bridges & can't help it. Maybe NEXT time I make it to Mobile I'll try it. Sure wish I could get my husband to come down there with me and see the country.

After I took my Mamma to Oklahoma I came back thur Ardmore on my way home, I could have cried and was so mad. They have the ORIGINAL INDIAN TERRITORY books in the basement, some were lying on the floor, I did pick them up and lay them on shelf. NO WAY to find anything. They are in such a bad shape and no one seems to care. Other holding offices up there are in same shape I hear. Plan to write to the Oklahoma Indian Archives and see if they can do anything about it. No wonder we can't find records for the I T period.

Thanks again for all the help you've given and the good time in Mobile. Keep us in mind and send anything you come up with on to me, will pay you for it.

Hoping to hear from you.

Sincerely,

Peg

Dear Johnnie,

Thanks ever so much your call of last night. I like to have never gone to sleep, just thinking about all the things you said you had to send and all.

Am enclosing the baptismals, etc. I have from the Mobile Catholic Center, think you said St. Louis you had but since I only have two am sending them. They are suppose to have Basilo Krebs marriage, Anna Charite Krebs marriage, Rapheal Krebs death & baptismal, Maria Theresea Krebbs baptismal, but I have not gotten copies of them, as I like copy of originals and not the type they sent.

The translations on some of the marriages and baptismals were done by a friend so not sure how accurate they are, if you can make corrections please do so.

In your book Creole Mobile, I'm having trouble figuring it out. I assume (p 23, 1st item) that Louis Dolive married Louisa LeFleur & that Marone etc were their children. Is this correct, and these records are from Mobile Catholic Center as well?

I am also enclosing copy of what few things I've found showing just what I do have, not much as you can see. I like to PROVE things and relationships, not just what is in some books, as I've found errors like everyone else.

As I told you last night I have been unable to find any will or probate records for when Hugo Danial Krebbs died, ca 1813 I'm told.

Hugo Ernestus supposedly died 1776, made will then, but looking at the deed (enclosed) I translate this as he was still alive in 1792 & 1793. Also his wife, Marianne Chauvin (dit Joice at times) made her claim in 1813. Am I right in this or not? Sure be nice to know for sure when they died.

The LeFleau line is even more frustrating. I've found so many LeFLUEUR that I can't fit it at all. Don't know when Jean Baptist came to America and found no records of him. I thought during that time period and being Catholic that they had to make so many detailed reports, on births, deaths, marriages, inventory of when one died, etc. As I told you I'm no genealogist.

I started about 6 years trying to find out where we get out Choctaw Indian blood. My Daddy thought from his grandmother, but was his great grand mother, LUCY KREBBS married BENJAMIN H LOWERY 1842, Winston Co Miss. Her Mother was Margaret FILLICUTCHA & ETIENNE KREBBS, son of Hugo E & Marianna. Who Margaret's parents I don't know. Jeanne Wilson says Polly Fillicutcha was her Mother, but I have not seen anything to connect the two together, nor anything to sow Margaret's name as Fillicutcha.

You can see the problems I'm up against.

I am also enclosing group sheets that you might file so in case some one else is working on these, they MIGHT get in touch with me.

The enclosed is for your use.

Hoping to hear from you soon and thanks so very much again.

Sincerely,

Peggy

Hi Betty; I am doing research on a Isabella KREBS, who I believe to be the daughter of HUGO DANIEL KREBS b-1754 and Lisa Le Fleaux, b-1758. This Hugo is the son of HUGO ERNESTUS KREBS, to whom you referred to having 14 children. My information indicates that Hugo DANIEL KREBS had 15 children.
Do you have any information pertaining to ISABELLA, ie, birth, death, who she married,etc. Also I would appreciate the names of the 14 children of HUGO ERNESTUS KREBS.
I will be very happy to exchange any information on the KREBS family of Mississippi. I also need information on BILLY KREBS (son of DANIEL), who was killed in the battle of Shiloh during the Civil War.
Any information on this family would be greatly appreciated.
Please respond to; Bill Huston huston@dmi.net
Thank You.

Hi Betty;
Saw your inquiry on this Krebs, so thought I would pass on what I have on him. I have a marriage date of "abt 1742" in Pascagoula, Ms. but no idea of which marriage this would pertain to. Have you made a check of the local parishes in that area for a marriage record? Was his first marriage also in Ms., or did he marry in Germany before coming to New Orleans? I guess this don't help you very much,but thought I would throw it out anyway.

Do you have any information on a ETTIENNE STEPHEN KREBS who married a MARGARET FILLECUTCHA. Their daughter,ISABELLA KREBS, born 28-May-1847 in Winston, Ms. She supposedly married a ERNEST CHARFAUX on 31-Oct-1865 in Mobile, Alabama.

What relationship would this Stephen Krebs be to the above HUGO? Was he one of the 14 children of Hugo. HUGO ERNESTUO had a son named HUGO DANIEL, which could have been a brother to my STEPHEN. Could you help me out on this relationship.

Thank you again and have a great weekend. Bill; huston@dmi.net

Hi Betty;
Thank you for your response to my inquiry on the Krebs family in Mississippi. I have plenty of time, so no big rush. I don't recall if I related this in my prior E-mail, but Benjamin Krebs and his brother BILLY both fought in the Civil War. Benjamin was wounded and Billy was killed in the battle of Shiloh. Both were members of the Mississippi 5th Inf. I would like to see a roster of names for the men that served with that unit to see if these Krebs brothers may be on that roster.
Where are the "archives" located? It may be a long trip for me, as I live about 30 miles south of the Canadian border in north Idaho. (Its still snowing up here)

I would greatly appreciate any information on these Krebs that you may care to pass on. Isabella Krebs was a sister to Benjamin and Billy.

Thank you again; Bill

Hi Betty:--Thanks for all the good information on the Krebs. It sounds as if your work at the archives would be very interesting and informative. I would love to come to Pascagoula and do this research in the archives. Do you live in or near Pascagoula? I do have the FTM and have been trying to update my information as I can determine the validity of the family lines.

As you see,my research on Isabella Krebs(dau of Etienne Stephen Krebs) has been a real bucket of worms. All my previous information on this line has been from family word-of-mouth,so much of it may be distorted or inaccurate. From the information in your last E-mail about Isabella, I have started to think that we are looking at two different Isabellas. The one in my line(according to family word-of-mouth) married a ALBERT PULCHER, b-1855 in Germany, d-1880 Ind.Terr. of pneumonia.
ALBERT PULCHER and ISABELLA KREBS had two children that I am aware of; (1) STEPHEN and (2) LEONA. My line of research comes on down from Stephen. After the death of ALBERT PULCHER, Isabella remarried to a GEORGE COWEE, who was an alcoholic and died at Stringtown at the age of 29. I have no additional information pertaining to this Isabella Krebs or what may have happened to her after the death of her second husband. Also, I have no information on dates of birth,death,or marriages. I know this is a lot to ask, but would your research reflect any of this information on this Isabella Krebs? Any information that you could provide me would be very helpful and greatly appreciated. Could this Isabella have married a third time to ERNEST CHARFAUX???, or would the time period be all wrong. Then, of course, this family information that has been related to me could be all twisted up.

Well, enough of this for today. Hope all is well with you and that you have a great day. My best regards; Bill

Hi Betty,

Thanks for replying. I wasn't worried about you taking a while to reply. I've been busy myself.

I would love to have a copy material from Helaire and Louise family bible. Do you know who has the original (Bible that is)? Helaire is my Great-Great-Grandfather. Could you send a copy to me with the transcription on a separate sheet? I'll reimburse you (or even send you the money prior) for sending them to me.

Is there a way for me to contact you when we visit Pascagoula area? We plan on being in that are some time in the two weeks following Christmas. Also if you go on-line check out my web site:

Mrs. Betty Rodgers, President
Jackson County Genealogical Society
12401 Fort's Lake Road
Pascagoula, MS 39567

Dear Mrs. Rodgers:

This will acknowledge receipt of your check in the amount of $18.00 to cover fee for research and fee for copies of records done for you by this office, for which please accept our thanks.

In response to your inquiries, I have searched our registers with the following results:

Funerals;

LaPointe. I do not have a record for LaPointe who died circa 1747. I do have entered in the register a Joseph Simon Frisquet, who I have been told by another correspondent, is Joseph Simon LaPointe. He could not understand where the Frisquet came from as he said it means cold.

LaPrade. I do not have a funeral record.

Elizabeth Simon (widow LaPrade) Dupont. I do not have a record. I searched from 1732 to 1750

Jeanne LaPointe. She was buried 18 Mar 1764. Recorded on page 77a of Funeral Book #1.

Baptisms:

Joseph Creps. He was the son of Hugues Herneste Creps and Marie Joseph Simon. Born: 11 Jan 1742, Bapt: 11 Jan 1742. Pg. 138a, Bapt.Bk.#1

Francois Creps. He was son of Hugue Ernest Creps and Marie Joseph LaPointe. Born: 18 Jan 1743. Bapt: 20 Jan 1743. Pg. 145a, Bapt.Bk.#1

Pierre Krebs. He was son of Hugo Ernestus Krebs and Marie Joseph LaPointe. Bapt: 29 Dec 1743.

Marie Jeanne Krebs. Daughter of Hugue Ernest Krebs and Marie Josephe de la Pointe. Bapt: 28 Oct 1745. Pg. 158a, Bapt.Bk.#1

Marriages:

Elizabeth Simon (widow LaPrade) to Jean Claude Dupont. I have no record between 1732-1750. (Jean Claude Dupont married Marie Jeanne Guillori widow of Joseph LaPrade 14 Feb 1760. Pg. 43, Mrg. Bk.#1.

You asked for the baptismal record of Marie Joseph (Juana) Krebs circa Dec 1745, but the only baptism I have was for Marie Jeanne in 1745, as stated above. I have a baptism for Maria Josepha Krebs d/o Daniel Hugo Krebs and Luisa Leflau who was baptized 31 July 1789. This is on Page 42 of Bapt.Bk.#2.

The fee for this research is $10.00 for 2 hours, payable to the Archdiocese of Mobile.

If I can be of further assistance, please call on me.

Sincerely,

Erin S. Rehm

Mrs. T. R. Rehm, Archivist.

Mob. mb I:25b-1
June 30, 1739

Three banns published.

Jean Maÿer, native of Faigrechesne,[1] Alsace, Diocese of Strasbourg, son of Baptiste Maÿer and Marie Kernine.

Jeanne Finaux, native of this parish (Mobile), daughter of Jacques Fino and Jeanne Lafond of Isle d'Oleron, Diocese of Saintes.

Witnesses signing: The cross of the bride's mother, wife of St. Martin; A(ntoine) Collon, the bride's brother-in-law; Hugo Ernestus Krebs, husband of Marie Joseph Simon; Lorrentz Conrad Wiltz, a soldier in Karrer's Regiment; Blaise St. Martin, stepfather of the bride; Pierre Rochon, husband of Catherine Paux, who was evidently related to the bride. See the Rochon-Paux marriage, Mob. mb I:22.

1. Clearly written, the name begins with «f»; however, the town's name, obviously Germanic, really could begin with «ph» or «v», which in German have a soft sound like «f», and end with «sheim», a common ending for Alsace place names. (Heim means home; heimat means native country.)

Mob. mb I:52a-3
December 2, (1778)[1]

Three banns announced.

François Krebs, son of deceased Hugues (Ernestus) Krebs and Marie Joseph (Simon dit) Lapointe, deceased.

Dame Helene Maurau (Moreau), widow of Jacques Lamy, deceased, daughter of Joseph Morau (Moreau), deceased, and Marie Jeanne Dauphin, deceased.

Witnesses mentioned: Corneille Macortin, Theodre Benoist.

Witnesses signing:[2] Th(eod)re Benoist, the bride of August 2, 1770; Cornelius McCurtin, the groom of March 24, (1778).

1. Although weddings were usually not allowed during the season of Advent, the couple was permitted to marry because bad weather had prevented an earlier arrival. Note that the three banns had already been published.

2. Salvador de la Esperanza signed the lower edges of this folio, recto and verso, and both sides of the following sheet, so marking the end of an era.

Spanish forces had entered the city of Mobile on March 12, 1780 (Mob. fb I: JDL Holmes transcript). Esperanza, who made the first Spanish entries in the church registers, had arrived with the troops. The British surrendered the fort on March 14.

Mob. mb I:26b-1
November 29, 1739

One bann published; dispensed with two.

Thomas Rachelé or Rachlé, native of Constance,[1] Switzerland, Saint Pierre Parish, son of Martin Rachelé and Anne Marie Meingre.

Jeanne Desorges, native of Mobile, widow of Antoine Marie, daughter of Pierre Desorges and Marguerite Saint Lazare (Salazar?).

Witnesses signing: The cross of Pierre Desorges, father of the bride; Robert Talon, spouse of Jeanne Praux; Lavigne, perhaps Pierre Lavigne, who died in 1746; (Hugo Ernestus) Krebs, spouse of Marie Joseph Simon; Huber(t) de Morue, spouse of Jeanne Elizabeth Boissinot.

1. If Konstanz was meant, it is a German city on Lake Constance.

Mob. mb I:34b-2–35a
February 21, 1747

Three banns published.

François Barbet dit St. Michel, a soldier in Derneville's company, native of St. Michel Parish[1] in Orléans, son of Jean Barbet, hosiery merchant, and Anne Maloute.

Jeanne Simon, Creole, widow of Pierre Millon,[2] daughter of Joseph Simon (dit Lapointe) and Marie Foucault.

Witnesses named: Krebs; Doussin (Catherine or Pierre Louis?);[3] Melisan; Fievre; Houries; (Joseph Simon), the bride's father.

Witnesses signing: E(tienne) Fievre; (Charles?) De Mouÿ; (Louis) Hourie– (Houriez or Houries); (Louis?) Helot (dit La Necessaire?), a soldier in LeVerrier's company, 1745 (HMLO 299); (Hugo Ernestus) Krebs, the bride's brother-in-law; (François Guillaume) Melisan.

1. St. Michel Church of Orléans was not found in Michelin's Guide to France (1972 edition).

2. Pierre Etienne Millon had died in January, 1744. DeVille, G C C, 50.

3. No connection has been found between these two. Catherine was the bride's stepmother. Pierre Louis Doussin had married Marie Colon in 1740. Mob. mb I:17, 26.

Mob. mb I:49a-1
March 17, 1766

One bann announced; dispensed with two.

Jean Gradenigo,[1] merchant, native of Venice, Italy, son of Antoine Gradenigo and Marie Bettio.

Marguerite Kreps, native of this parish, daughter of Hugues René Kreps (Krebs),[2] habitant, and Marie Josephe (Simon dit) La Pointe.[3]

Witnesses signing: (Daniel) Jaquéri; Hugo Krebs, father of the bride; Devin, probably a son of the Devin-Chauvin marriage;[4] P. Rochon, not identified; Rochon le cadet, not identified.

1. He and Marguerite were living at the Opelousas post (Louisiana) before 1778.

2. His name was Hugo Ernestus Krebs, as he signed in 1739 (Mob. mb I:25). His testament, dated 1776, is listed at New Orleans (New Orleans Notarial Archives, General Index, 1771-1833).

3. She died in 1751, and Krebs married Marie Anne Chauvin dit Joyeuse.

4. Valentin Devin, engineer, lieutenant reformé, married Marthe Chauvin before 1732. He died in June, 1735. A son named Valentin was baptized in 1734. Mob. bb I:77, 86, 103, 112; fb I:45, 51.

Mob. mb I:49a-2
March 20, 1766

One bann announced; dispensed with two.

Augustin Rochon, habitant, native of this parish (Mobile), widower[1] of Marie Jeanne (Simon dit) La Pointe, son of Charles Rochon and Henriette Colon.

Louis Fievre, native of this parish, daughter of Etienne Fievre and Marie Grise.

Witnesses signing: James Gray (perhaps the surgeon?), a name mentioned in 1768 and 1780;[2] Devin, same who signed the preceding record; Paul Miller, Jun(ior); John (Obrien?);[3] Jean (Lennox?);[4] (Louis Valentin) Dubroca, spouse of Marie Marthe Fievre; (Joseph) Badon; Joseph (?), surname not decipherable; P. Rochon, identity uncertain; W. Richardson, not identified; (A^{r}?) Solomon, almost certainly Alexander Solomon; Hugo Krebs, probably Hugo Ernestus Krebs; Pat(rick) Murphy, surely the Irishman from Pensacola, whose death was recorded at Mobile in 1767.

1. The priest wrote the feminine form, veuve.

2. Hamilton, Colonial Mobile, 265; Deville, «Early Anglo . . . ,» Geneal. Helper, XXXVII (1983), 12.

3. Two O'Brian deaths were recorded at Mobile in that period: Jacques O'Brian, an Irishman, on April 16, 1766; and Marie O'Brian, August 9, 1766.

4. The only similar name found was that of Sir John Lennox, biographer of Johnstone.

Mob. mb I:51a-4
June 8, 1778

One bann announced; dispensed with two.

Joseph La Bat,[1] native of the parish of Cars,[2] Diocese of Bordeaux, son of François Labbat, deceased, and Dame Marie Faure.

Marie Thérèse Krebs, daughter of Ḥugo (Ernestus) Krebs, deceased, and Marie (Anne) Chauvin, all inhabitants of this parish.

Witnesses mentioned: Jean Baptiste Joseph Lusser, former captain; Antoine Narbonne; Louis Carrière.

Witnesses signing: (M.) Grant;[3] Peter Swanson; (Antoine) Narbonne; (Jean Baptiste) Lusser.

1. He and his wife were living at Mobile in 1786. Census, Mobile, 1786.

2. Not identified. There was a La Bat family in the area of Nerac, department of Lot-et-Garonne. Inventaires, Archives Departementales de Lot-et-Garonne, Agen, France.

3. See his signature on the Girard-Bodin marriage, July 17, 1770.

Mob. mb I:52a-3
December 2, (1778)[1]

Three banns announced.

François Krebs, son of deceased Hugues (Ernestus) Krebs and Marie Joseph (Simon dit) Lapointe, deceased.

Dame Helene Maurau (Moreau), widow of Jacques Lamy, deceased, daughter of Joseph Morau (Moreau), deceased, and Marie Jeanne Dauphin, deceased.

Witnesses mentioned: Corneille Macortin, Theodre Benoist.

Witnesses signing:[2] Th(eod)re Benoist, the bride of August 2, 1770; Cornelius McCurtin, the groom of March 24, (1778).

1. Although weddings were usually not allowed during the season of Advent, the couple was permitted to marry because bad weather had prevented an earlier arrival. Note that the three banns had already been published.

2. Salvador de la Esperanza signed the lower edges of this folio, recto and verso, and both sides of the following sheet, so marking the end of an era.

Spanish forces had entered the city of Mobile on March 12, 1780 (Mob. fb I: JDL Holmes transcript). Esperanza, who made the first Spanish entries in the church registers, had arrived with the troops. The British surrendered the fort on March 14.

Mob. mb I:55b
September 18, 1786

One bann announced.

Raphael Krebs, major son of Hugo Ernestus Krebs, deceased, and Marie Anne Chauvin ditte Joyeuse, originally from the town and parish of New Orleans, and living in this parish.

Marie Catherine Dupont, minor daughter of Jean Claude Dupont, deceased, and Marie Jeanne Guillory, originally from, and living in, this parish of Mobile.

Witnesses mentioned: Mathias Leuxfleaux, Antoine Nicolas, Jacques Genier, Coronet Selhos, Jean Baptiste Dupont, brother of the bride.

Witnesses signing: Mattia Leflot or Leflor, who had spelled his name «Lefleau» in 1779; Marie Jeanne Guillory, mother of the bride, daughter of Gregoire Guillory; Marianne Dupont, sister of the bride and wife of Mathias Leflot; Marie Joseph Narbonne, possibly a Narbonne-Krebs daughter;[1] (Jacques) Genier, born circa 1731, still unmarried in 1786; Conrad Selhof dit (Cottels?), see preceding record; a cross probably made by Antoine Nicolas; Autaunne (MiColay? Nicolas?);[2] Jean Baptiste Dupont, brother of the bride; Françoise Baudens (Bodin), wife of Antoine Nicolas in 1786.

1. Antoine Narbonne's wife was a half-sister of Raphael Krebs.

2. The awkward signature may have been written by someone else, below the cross made by Nicolas.

Mob. mb I:47b-2
October 10, 1765

One bann published; dispensed with two.

Antoine Narbone (Narbonne),[1] habitant, native of Agen in Guyenne, Saint Catherine Parish, son of Louis Narbonne and of Marie Louise.

Marie Jeanne Kreps (Krebs), native of Mobile, daughter of Hugues René Krebs, habitant at Pascagoula, and of Marie Joseph (Simon dit) Lapointe.

Witnesses signing: (Louis) A(ugustin) Rochon; (François Louis) Masuriers or Mazuriers; (François) Daran; Chastang, probably John, younger brother of Joseph; (Joseph) Badon, a merchant, the spouse of Catherine Gabriel dit Montelimard; (Gabriel dit) Montelimard, brother of Madame Joseph Badon and of Madame Joseph Chastang; La——on (Lauson? Lanpis?), not identified.[2]

1. «Narbone» had learned to sign his name since June 14, (1764), when he married Marie Louise Dinant. Mob. mb I:47.

2. This name appears only in this record.

Mob. mb I:42a-1
July 26, 1827

The marriage of Auguste Payen and Philippa McBoy (McVoy?)[1] was recorded two days later, in Mob. mb I:140:

I, the undersigned pastor of this church, on the twenty-eighth day of the month of July, in the year one thousand eight hundred and twenty seven, have joined together in the holy bonds of matrimony Auguste Payen and Philippa Mcboy giving dispensation of the three canonical publications by powers vested in me by the ordinary of the Diocese and no impediment whatever being otherwise found and a license being issued by the clerk of the Mobile County court.

Ant. (Guilhet?), witness Bazile meslier esq.
Joseph Krebs

Marginal note: Augustus/Payen/Philippa/McBoy.

1. Hamilton, Colonial Mobile, indexes Diego McVoy and a (William) McVoy tract title of 1806.

Mob. mb I:48c–48d

Note: A sheet meant for the financial records was bound here. The front (48c) has only numbers and addition sums. Its verso (48d) has the following, in English:

Trustees of the Catholic Church Dr

To Joseph Krebs

To contract for House Rent from 2nd May to 2nd November Six months	@$14	$84	"	"

Mob. mb I:54b-1[1]
May 19, 1786

One bann announced; dispensed with two.

Pierre Trouillet,[2] major son of Charles Trouillet, deceased, former guardian of the king's storehouses,[3] and Marguerite Rochon, originally from, and living in, this parish.

Isabelle Narbonne,[4] minor daughter of Antoine Narbonne, captain gradué of His Catholic Majesty's Army, and Marie Joseph Krebs, originally from, and living in, this parish.

Witnesses mentioned: Don Pedro de Favrot, captain of the Regiment of Louisiana, civil and military commandant of this place; Françoise Gerard, Mrs. de Favrot; Jean Chastang; Antoine Narbonne, brother of the bride.

Witnesses signing: Pedro Favrot, commandant of the said fort; A(ntoine) Narbonne, father of the bride; Jean Chastang, the younger; Antoine Narbonne, brother of the bride.

1. The celebrant did not sign, but it was definitely Fray Eon, the pastor. Even in print, his consistent use of the accent grave in lieu of the accent aigue indicates that he was the scribe.

2. Pierre was baptized March 4, 1752, when he was two days old. His brother, Jean Louis, had been born December 17, 1750 (Mob. bb I:182), but his baptism is recorded on the same folio. The Trouillet brothers sign a well educated and practiced hand. They owned land jointly as early as 1774 (ASP I:847) and in the 1780s they were partners in a naval supply enterprise (Hamilton, Colonial Mobile, 340-341).

3. The descriptive phrase was added between the lines then confirmed as a legitimate addition at the end of the record. Garde-magasin at Alibamons, he died en route to Mobile from that post. DeVille, G C C, 62.

4. She was born in April, 1770. Mob. bb I:237. Widowed about 1795, she may have married Joseph Campbell soon after. Hamilton, Colonial Mobile, 366; ASP I:626, 639, 697, 702-703, 847.

Wm S. Dodson

Alfred E. Krebs and Hermina H Krebs his wife suing in the right of the wife of James P. Ellison

Plaintiffs by attorneys complain of William S. Dodson Senior of a plea that they render to them the sum of Seven Thousand and five hundred dollars which to them they owe and from them unjustly detain. For that whereas the plaintiffs were and are the lawful owners of a certain tract or parcel of land lying and being in said County and described as follows to wit Lots No. 1. 3 & 4 allotted to the plaintiffs in the division between the heirs of Bazile Krebs and being a part of lot No 3 allotted to Bazile Krebs in the division between the heirs of Augustine Krebs being in section No 13 of Township No 8 S of Range No 6 West. and plaintiffs aver that defendant heretofore to wit on the day of November A.D. 1872 and from that day until the day of the filing of this complaint did cut and carry away a large number of pine trees to wit five hundred from said lands without the consent of the owners thereof wherefore they became liable to pay the owners thereof the statutory penalty of fifteen dollars for each ~~A~~ tree so taken away. Yet said defendants though requested have not paid said sum of money or any part thereof but so to do have failed & refused and therefore plaintiffs pray for judgment against said defendants for the sum of fifteen dollars for each tree making in all the sum of $7500.00

Geo C Hewood
Attys for Plffs

Krebs vs Dodson } the court instructs the jury for the plaintiff that if they beleive from the evidence that the plaintiff was the owner of the land at the time the trees were cuts, and the defendant Dodson was warned by Krebs to disist from cutting the trees and that he still authorized the hands to cut trees on the land then this is inexcusable negligent and the plaintiff is entitled to the statutory damages for the number of trees proved to have been cut by defendants and they must find a verdict for plaintiff, provided the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] cutting

If the jury believe from the evidence that the lands in controversy were granted by the United States Government to Augustine Krebs and that they descended from Augustine Krebs to Basil Krebs and from Basil Krebs to the plaintiffs in this suit and that the plaintiffs are the owners of said lands, they have a right to recover for any trespass committed on said lands and if they further believe that Dodson the defendant in this suit cut pine trees off of said lands without the consent of said owners then they will find for plaintiffs — provided they further believe that this suit was commenced within one year after the trees were cut.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI,

COUNTY OF JACKSON.

IN THE CHANCERY COURT,

JUNE TERM,1929.

SCRANTON-PASCAGOULA REALTY COMPANY, a corporation chartered and organized under the laws of the State of Mississippi,

COMPLAINANT.

VS.NO. 5162

THE CITY OF PASCAGOULA, a municipal corporation, whose Mayor is John R. Watts, and whose two Commissioners or Councilmen are Valsin P. DeJean and Eugene Gautier, all resident citizens of Jackson County, also WILLIAM KEHOE & SON, a co-partnership composed of William Kehoe and James Kehoe, non-residents of the State of Mississippi, whose place of residence and Post-office address is Pensacola, Florida, no street address, which said parties are now and lately doing business in Jackson County, Mississippi, and on whom process can be served,

DEFENDANTS.

TO THE HONORABLE CHANCERY COURT OF JACKSON COUNTY:

Your complainant, the Scranton-Pascagoula Realty Company, respectfully shows unto the Court that it is a corporation chartered and organized under the laws of the State of Mississippi, domiciled at Pascagoula in said State. That complainant is not now and has never been engaged in any active business, but complainant has since the year 1906 owned a considerable tract of land situated in the City of Pascagoula, which is divided into lots and which is generally known as "The Communy Tract", That said tract of land originally extended from the east bank of the Pascagoula river with a frontage of about 1100 feet to and beyond Market Street in said City, extending easterly practically across the City limits of Pascagoula. That the principal streets of said City running North and South, are, beginning from the West, the following;

Kerr Street, Canty Street, Pascagoula Street and Market Street. All of said streets are intersected by said Communy Tract, and they run practically north and south across said land.

There is of record in the Plat Book of Jackson County on file with the Chancery Clerk, a plat of said Communy Tract made in the year 1906, and later a part of said tract known as "The Reserve" was also subdivided and a plat thereof placed of record in the Plat Book. Your complainant in previous years has sold to various persons a number of lots in said tract, but the major portion of said lots are still owned by your complainant. In the year 1925, Complainant sold the River frontage constituting the Western portion of said tract and lying between Pascagoula River on the West and Kerr Street on the East. Said River frontage extended about 1100 feet on the River and ran back easterly several hundred feet to Kerr Street. From said Kerr Street easterly, the Communy Tract is about 600 feet wide and is divided into numbered lots and lettered blocks with appropriate street and alley dedications.

Complainant avers that on the Plat of said land which was recorded in the Plat Book, and a tracing of which is hereto attached marked Exhibit"1", there is designated a street known as Communy Avenue, which is shown to be 50 feet wide and extending east and west throughout the tract from a point east of Market Street to Canty Street, a distance of a mile or more, crossing at right angles the following North and South streets of said City of Pascagoula from east to west, as follows:

Market Street, Pascagoula Street, Canty Street.

Said tract of land is intersected by three bayous or natural drains which run generally in a southwesterly direction and into Pascagoula river along its east bank. A large portion of the City of Pascagoula is drained by said Bayous.

Much of said Communy Tract, as platted, is located in said Bayou or marsh lands, and no part of said Communy Avenue has ever been opened up, improved or used for travel. The fact is that it would be impracticable to use said Communy Avenue as a thoroughfare without expending huge sums for filling, bridging, embankments and the like. This condition is true of the territory between Pascagoula Street on the east, and Canty Street on the west. From Pascagoula Street to Market Street the country is generally high, and bridges would not be necessary on Communy Avenue. No part of Communy Avenue has been opened up nor used as a thoroughfare, except that an area fifty feet wide and about four or five hundred feet deep, measured east and west, and running back from Pascagoula Street was cut down in 1928 and the dirt therefrom removed by the Defendants as hereinafter shown.

Pascagoula Street is crossed by a marsh or bayou with a considerable area of low land which is traversed by Communy Avenue. This extends several hundred feet west where a high ridge is encountered, and then for several hundred feet Communy Avenue extends across other bayou or marsh lands for a period of several hundred feet to another high ridge, which is probably the highest point above sea-level in the City. Thence Communy Avenue proceeds westerly across said high ridge a distance of about a thousand feet more or less to Canty Street where it intersects said Street, and thence is projected across ~~this~~ other marsh lands . No part of said Communy Avenue from Pascagoula Street on the east to Canty Street on the West has ever been opened up, improved, bridged nor used as a thoroughfare, and said area stands today very much in the condition that the Creator made it.

Complainant further shows unto the Court that the City of Pascagoula is a municipal corporation of which John R. Watts, is Mayor and Messrs. Gautier and DeJean, Councilmen, duly elected, qualified and acting. Said tract of land hereinabove described lies wholly within the corporate limits of said City as heretofore defined. That not only have the said authorities never opened up nor used Community Avenue as a street, or highway, but there is positively no necessity either present, actual or prospective for the development thereof. Along that part of Community Avenue extending from Market Street to Pascagoula Street and thence to Canty Street there is practically no habitation, and, except the area of marsh lands, that part of the earth's surface taken up by Community Avenue is covered with a luxuriant tree growth. From Pascagoula Street to Canty Street, the greater part of the distance is taken up by low marsh and bayou lands, and the ridge portion lying immediately east of Canty Street is unsettled along Community Avenue, there being only one residence situated thereon. This residence is served by a north and south alley and neighborhood road which meanders in an irregular course across the property of the complainant and others.

Complainant avers that the defendants, William Kehoe & Son is a co-partnership engaged in the contracting business and does public work, such as building side-walks, improving streets, constructing culverts, drains and the like. They are domiciled at Pensacola, but have done work recently and now propose to do other work in the City of Pascagoula.

Complainant respectfully shows unto the Court that sometime during the year 1928, the defendant, City of Pascagoula, let a contract to William Kehoe & Son for the construction of approximately four miles of sidewalk, curbing and gutter along Pascagoula Street, extending on both sides of said Street for a distance of about two miles on Pascagoula Street to the bay or Gulf. In doing said work, it was necessary in places to fill the line or area traversed by the side-walk and in other places to cut down. In filling the defendants required a large quantity of dirt at various places along said street. The land was high, and in order to reach the sidewalk level fixed by the engineer, it was necessary to cut down. In doing the said sidewalk work, the defendants, without the slightest justification or right, entered upon the undeveloped or unopened part along Communy Avenue lying east of Pascagoula Street, and for a period of several hundred feet running back east, cut down the grade for the entire width of said street to a distance of some four feet and removed the dirt therefrom and hauled it away in trucks, and used it for filling at various places between it and the beach, on other people's property. This was done over the protest and objection of the complainant, and without the slightest authority of law. Many trees were cut down and appropriated by defendants to their own use or wasted. There was no pretense of developing said area as a street and to-day there is a wide open gully, or sunken road, or cut like the "Sunken Road of Ohaine" in which the valiant warriors met disaster on the field of Waterloo. Several months have elapsed and defendants have made no pretense of filling said area or developing it as a street or removing the stumps and roots therefrom. Said work was authorized and contracted to be done by the defendant, City of Pascagoula, and was actually done by the defendant, William Kehoe & Son. Complainant avers that they own the greater part of the lot situated along said Street running east and west, as well as the lots east of there and said property has been disfigured and greatly injured. Complainant avers that it had been damaged in the sum of $1,000.00 on account of said trespass.

Moreover, defendants cut down the slope or ridge of complainant's land to a height of three or four feet and for a distance of a hundred feet or more on the East side of Pascagoula Street, and South of Communy Avenue, and left it exposed so that it washes and is unsightly, to complainant's damage in the sum of $500.00.

This was done over complainant's protest and objection, and in violation of law.

Complainant further shows unto the Court that the City of Pascagoula has in no wise taken over Communy Avenue for development, nor has it spent any money or labor in developing or improving the same as a street. Whatever rights it has in said Communy Avenue arises from the fact that said Communy Avenue is shown on the plat aforesaid as a street. At most there was a bare dedication of said area as a street, but the City has never accepted said dedication nor used said property as a street nor has the public used it as a street, nor exercised any rights over said property as a public highway. That said property belongs to your complainant in fee, subject to whatever rights the public may have over it as a passage way, while the public has never used it as a matter of fact.

Complainant further shows unto the Court that the City of Pascagoula has no present purpose to develop Communy Avenue or any part thereof as a street. It has neither adopted any plans for the development of said Communy Avenue, nor does it propose to develop or drain it, nor beautify it nor make it usable as a passage-way, nor to do anything in respect thereto, except unlawfully appropriate complainant's fee simple interest in said land without making compensation therefor. That should said Communy Avenue be developed as a street for use by the public, it would be necessary to drain it in places, to fill stretches of it, to bridge other parts, but the city has neither adopted plans for such develpp-ment, nor does it propose in fact to develop it, nor is there any present or prospective necessity therefor.

Complainant further shows unto the Court that some years ago the City of Pascagoula unlawfully and negligently permitted the International Shipbuilding Company to block up and fill a body of water and natural drain known as Bayou Yazoo, which said bayou formerly extended from a point on the East Bank of Pascagoula River in a Northeasterly direction across the City of Pascagoula, and which Bayou drains perhaps a square mile or more of the City. That said Bayou was a navigable water in law and in fact, that is to say, near its mouth and for perhaps a half mile. Said Bayou was seventy-five feet wide or more and had a depth of three to five feet of water, and was in fact used and navigated generally by the public. That said Bayou crosses the Communy tract between Canty Street and Pascagoula Street, although the mouth of said Bayou was not on the Communy property.

Neither the City, nor any person nor corporation, had any right in law to block said bayou, but the City unlawfully and wrongfully permitted the International Shipbuilding Company to fill up and block said Bayou from a point near its mouth for perhaps two thousand feet up its natural course. Just west of said Bayou Yazoo is another small bayou known as Bayou Pichot, which empties into the Pascagoula River on its East Bank at a point approximately on the South boundary line of the Communy property, which formerly belonged to the complainant. That said Bayou meandered in a Northeasterly direction across the front of complainant's property with a large area of marsh land on either side and across complainant's property at a point near Canty Street, and there extended Northwesterly up into the residential and business districts of Pascagoula. Another prong of said Bayou splits off near Canty Street and runs almost Northerly and drains another portion of the City. These two bayous are very important parts of the natural drainage system of the City of Pascagoula. Between Bayou Yazoo and Bayou Pichot is a very high ridge, constituting what is probably the highest land above sea level in the City. There is positively no necessity for any drainage of said ridge land, because it is naturally drained by these two bayous, in fact constituting the water-shed between said two bayous.

The general course of said bayous as they cross the Communy Tract is shown on the drawing hereto attached marked Exhibit"1", and their relation to one another there appears. Some years ago the International Shipbuilding Company, after filling up the mouth and course of Yazoo Bayou, constructed a small wooden culvert that was designed to carry the water from what had been Bayou Yazoo to Bayou Pichot. This culvert began on the International Shipbuilding Company land, which lies south of the Communy Tract and extending in an irregular line from East to West from Bayou Yazoo to Bayou Pichot for its outlet to or near a point on Canty Street. Said culvert was constructed in part on lands belonging to complainant, but not on any part of Communy Avenue. That said wooden culvert was put in by the International Shipbuilding Company without the authority of the complainant, and your complainant has protested and objected to the presence of same. That said culvert being constructed of wood, was not only inadequate from start to finish and has never carried the drainage waters in a proper or adequate manner, but recently the timbers have rotted and the dirt caved in, so that the same is not only inadequate as a drain, but is dangerous in that children or other persons are likely to fall therein and be hurt or drowned. That the inadequacy of the said drain even in dry weather results in large basinsor pools of water which become stagnant, which are left in the marsh where it was formerly drained by Bayou Yazoo, which condition is unsightly and unsanitary and a menace to the health of the public. That said culvert has never been repaired, nor opened, but has been abandoned.

Complainant further shows unto the Court that some time ago the City of Pascagoula adopted a project of putting in a concrete culvert that was designed to extend from a point on Communy Avenue near what had been the course of Bayou Yazoo, and thence to run 1000 feet or more below and along Communy Avenue, across the high ridge land to connect with Bayou Pichot. That the purpose of said project is to drain the territory that was drained by Bayou Yazoo, but as a matter of fact is wholly insufficient for said purpose. In times of heavy rain falls, the waters back up and become a vast lake covering many acres of low country in the City of Pascagoula and through much private property, and, in fact some of the City streets. The City proposes to put in a concrete culvert between said two low areas in dimensions of approximately seven feet high by four feet wide, whereas said culvert, if constructed, will be wholly inadequate. Moreover, it is so located that the low lands formerly constituting said Bayou and extending beyond the fill made by the International Shipbuilding Company will not be drained, but pools of stagnant water will be left there to become unsanitary and a menace to the health conditions of the City. Your complainant has protested to the City against the use of the property for said purpose and has notified the City and others interested in said project that complainant objects to the use of its lands for said purpose, and have given notice that such use will constitute a trespass. Said project is not put forward nor adopted for the purpose of draining Communy Avenue or the lands of complainant or other lands contiguous thereto, but will be constructed in this wise, namely:

Said ridge land is about thirteen feet above sea level. It is proposed to make a deep excavation along the length of said Communy Avenue for a distance of about one thousand feet or more between the two bayous, and there build a concrete culvert about seven feet deep. When said project is completed, there will be a fill of about six feet over the top of the culvert, that is to say, between the surface and the top of the culvert. Said area to be traversed by the culvert is now perfectly drained, being a water-shed between the two bayous, it is not proposed to develop the street nor to improve it, nor will there be any man-hole or opening for surplus waters on said ridge lands to get into the culvert, but the sole purpose is to connect the two bayous, by the construction of the culvert on complainant's land. While it may be that the City would have a right to improve said street, that is to say, put in paving, of the City of Pascagoula made up of lands of many other persons and not that of complainant.

In pursuance of said project, defendant, the City of Pascagoula, in the past few days have let a contract to the defendants, William Kehoe & Son, to construct said culvert according to plans and specifications on file with the City Clerk, reference to which is craved as often as may be necessary on the trial of this cause. That said defendants were the lowest bidders on the proposed work at and for the sum of $8264.00, and their bid having been accepted, said firm has given a bond for the faithful performance of said contract, and are now about to enter upon the prosecution thereof. That the lands of complainant have been actually entered upon by cutting brush and driving stakes, said contract has been let and accepted and bond given, and the defendant, William Kehoe & Son are now making preparations to begin the work and will any day begin the work. They are now on the ground with equipment ready to start. That this complainant has given notice to both the city and to the contractor that it objects to the installation of said culvert on complainant's land, and has notified them that such work on complainant's property will be an unlawful trespass and an invasion of its rights, but said defendants have set about to construct said culvert and are now ready to begin said unlawful undertaking. Unless restrained by this Honorable Court, complainant avers that the defendants will do or cause to be done the work as proposed.

Complainant further shows unto the Court that the use to which its property is about to be put is not a that point on Commuy Avenue. The whole territory was and is well served so far as drainage is concerned by the two bayous, and this part of Commuy Avenue itself is perfectly drained, being a natural water-shed. The defendant City's rights in said Street, if it had any rights, are simply such as were contemplated and included in the reasonable development and improvement of said property as a street, and if every foot of the street were developed, and every foot of the property along the border of said street were used for residential or commercial purposes, no such culvert would ever be required to make the property usable and valiable along said street or in the vicinity thereof. What the City proposes to do is to subject and appropriate complainant's private property for public use never contemplated by the parties, and this without making any compensation therefor. That complainant would be irreparably damaged and injured, and has no adequate remedy at law to protect itself in this :

In the first place, complainant's land would be invaded and dug up and permanently disfigured by the excavation of the deep drain across its property, which would be a continuing trespass. In the next place, the trespass would be continuous in that, the defendant, the City of Pascagoula, proposes to flow the drainage water permanently through said culvert. In the next place, the lands of many private persons in the vicinity of said culvert would be drained as well as many other private properties situated as far as a mile therefrom, perhaps more. In the next place, complainant would be injured permanently in that the remaining property owned by it in the vicinity would be damaged and ruined in that this large body of water would be brought on the complainant's land where it did not come naturally, in view of the fact that the over-flow coming down Community Avenue and crossing Canty Street would flow through its outlet onto other lands owned by complainant West of Canty Street. That said lands are for residential purposes, and would thus be damaged and rendered unattractive, in that the vast quantity of polluted surface water and sewage would be brought onto complainant's land.

Wherefore, complainant is advised that it is entitled to an injunction against the defendants, restraining them permanently from constructing said culvert or flowing said waters over complainant's land. Inasmuch as defendant proposes to construct said culvert forthwith, the resulting injury to complainant will have ensued and been incurred before the next Term of this Honorable Court.

Wherefore, complainant is advised that it is entitled to an interlocutory injunction, restraining defendants from the construction of said culvert, which, on the final hearing of this cause ought to be made permanent.

Complainant further shows unto the Court that it is a tax-payer of the City of Pascagoula, in view of the fact that it owns a large tract of land in the City assessed at approximately $15,000.00, on which it does now pay, and has for many years paid the levies customarily made for general and special purposes of the City of Pascagoula.

It is interested in the question of drainage of said city, and therefore has a right as a tax-payer and citizen, it being domiciled here, to resist and protest against any invasion of its rights as well as the rights of the public generally in matters of general interest like drainage.

It avers that naturally its lands known as the Community Tract, as well as other lands in the vicinity thereof, as well as hundreds of acres of other lands in the City of Pascagoula, lying South of the L. & N. Railroad, are naturally drained by Bayou Yazoo. That said Bayou Yazoo is a natural drain, having a fixed and well defined course, extending from a point in the extreme East of the corporate limits of the City of Pascagoula or east thereof, and running Southwesterly across the City and across Pascagoula Street at a point near the high School and Methodist Church, and thence Southwesterly across the lands of other persons until it reaches the Communy Tract, which is some five hundred or six hundred feet wide, and running thence into Lake Yazoo or the Pascagoula river, at a point about one quarter of a mile South of the Communy Tract where it empties into said Pascagoula river. That said Bayou Yazoo has one or more other branches which run out Easterly and drain much of the property lying in the eastern part of the City of Pascagoula between there and the beach. One of said branches crosses the Communy Tract at a point just near where the Communy tract intersects Pascagoula Street, and thence extending Easterly almost to Market Street, a distance of approximately one-half mile. In all, several square miles of the City of Pascagoula, including the lands of your complainant, are drained by Yazoo Bayou, Until said Bayou was obstructed and filled in by the unlawful act of the City of Pascagoula and the International Shipbuilding Company, all of said property was well drained.

Said bayou was a large water course navigable for several hundred feet from its mouth for small boats, as complainant has hereinabove alleged, and was in fact navigable up as far as near the Methodist Church or City High School, which is situated on Pascagoula Street, that is to say, there was a well defined water course, and is yet for several hundred feet, and not only was there a water course but there was and is a natural basin several hundred feet wide which is covered with marsh and consists of low lands which are flooded at times by high tide. Said Bayou and its tributaries was a natural drain for the City of Pascagoula, and all the citizens thereof were interested in same being main - tained as a natural drain. Some years ago, the City of Pascagoula wrongfully and unlawfully permitted the International Shipbuilding Company to fill said Bayou, that is to say, from a point near its mouth two thousand feet or more up its course to a point a few hundred feet South of the lands belonging to complainant.

As the result of said Bayou being filled, the territory formerly served is not properly drained, and in periods of great rain falls, the water backs up for a half mile or more to a depth of perhaps eight or ten feet covering an area of a square mile or more, and even backing the waters as far as Pascagoula Street to an extent that they flood the streets and much adjacent territory, including much land belonging to complainant. Said water gradually runs off through the artifical drains constructed by the International Shipbuilding Company, but they are poor and inadequate. The flood waters remain there for many hours, and remain there longer than they would remain had said Bayou not been blocked or filled up. In fact, before the Bayou was filled, through the unlawful act of the City of Pascagoula, said drainage system worked perfectly, and there was hardly any flood water on said lands, although it is true that in periods of extreme high tide under storm conditions, the salt water backed up said Bayou.

Not only is said area flooded through the Bayou being blocked, but the box culvert as originally constructed was too high, and was too small, so that a further result large ponds of stagnant water are permitted to remain in low areas, which stagnant waters are left to evaporate or to remain and become infected with snakes, mosquitoes and other vermin. This condition is not only unsightly and adversely affects the value of the property, but is a menace to life, and is in fact unsanitary. This condition of ponded waters existing within a few hundred feet of the City High School as well as a Church, thus constituting a nuisance not only to the people who live along the Bayou, but to the school children and church goers of the City. While said filled up condition has existed for some years, it is now and has always been the duty of the City to open up said Bayou, which complainant avers could be done easily by dredging at far less cost than the proposed culvert could be put in along Commuy Avenue.

Complainant, like other citizens and taxpayers, is entitled to have its lands drained in the proper and natural manner. As formerly existing, and as we insist, if the bayou was opened, this condition would not exist. It is the duty of the City of Pascagoula, and those now holding the office of Mayor and Councilmen to open up said Bayou, and thus restore the natural drainage which formerly existed and was enjoyed by the city generally, Thus would the City streets be properly drained as well as the lands of the public generally in the territory naturally drained by said Bayou and its tributaries. Demand has been made upon the City to open up said Bayou, and protest has been made on the unsanitary condition, but the City has positively and wilfully refused, failed and neglected to open up said Bayou.

Complainant avers and so charges the fact to be that at a cost of approximately $1.50 a lineal foot, a canal could be opened along the course of the Bayou thus restoring its former course from a point where it now and formerly opened into Lake Yazoo to the northern limit of the fill put in by the International Shipbuilding Company. This distance is about four thousand feet. A canal five feet deep and twenty feet wide could be thus made, which canal while less than the former width of the bayou would be adequate for restoring proper drainage. This project is wholly feasible in fact and in law and would cost less than the proposed culvert. Complainants are advised that it is the duty of the City of Pascagoula, to open up said Bayou. Not only is it their duty but they are guilty of neglect of duty and actual wrong in failing to ppen up said Bayou and in permitting said filled up condition. The International Shipbuilding Company, who filled up the Bayou became insolvent some years ago, and have dissipated all of its assets, and went out of business so that in practice nothing can be done toward forcing the International Shipbuilding Company to remove the obstruction to the natural drainage for which they are responsible.

Complainant further shows unto the Court that said culvert formerly constructed by the International Shipbuilding Company has fallen into grievous disrepair, its timbers have rotted, and it is largely filled up with sand. That the same has never been repaired nor worked on, nor dug out, nor has the City nor the International Shipbuilding Company used it or exercised any control over it. That the said International Shipbuilding Company went out of business about 1920, sold out all of its assets and disbanded as a corporation, and is no longer interested in said culvert.

Complainant further avers that while said Bayou is closed in fact, it is open in law, in that said Bayou was a permanent water course, a natural drain, a navigable water, so shown on the official Township plat reflecting the original Governmental survey. That the submerged lands making up the original bottom of said Bayou are impressed with a public easement or servitude of passage and right of water flowage. That said rights cannot be taken away by public authorities, or by any individual. That said Bayou, while now filled in, is open in law. Complainant is advised that this Honorable Court has authority to and should force the said City of Pascagoula to open up said Bayou and restore the natural drainage therein.

Complainant avers that since this bill of complaint was drafted, the defendants, the City of Pascagoula, and William Kehoe & Son, together with their servants and agents, have entered upon Communy Avenue and are now cutting down the trees and digging up the surface in pursuance of their unlawful purpose of installing a culvert therein.

Not only has complainant given both of them notice heretofore to desist from said unlawful purpose, but complainant has this day notified said defendants, that is to say, William Kehoe & Son and the engineer representing the City of Pascagoula to desist from said work. That in spite of said notices, the defendants continue their unlawful operation and unless restrained will dig up, mutilate, disfigure and permanently injure and damage complainant's property.

For, as much, as complainant is without a remedy in the premises, save in this Honorable Court, it therefore exhibits its bill of complaint and prays that defendants may be summoned to appear herein at the next Term of this Honorable Court to answer, plead or demur to the allegations of this bill of complaint. And complainant prays that on the final hearing hereof the Court will enter a personal decree against the City of Pascagoula and against William Kehoe & Son for damages in the sum of Fifteen hundred($1500) Dollars, on account of the matters hereinabove set up, and Complainant prays that an interlocutory injunction may be issued by this Honorable Court enjoining and restraining the defendants from constructing a culvert along Communy Avenue, and that on the final hearing that said injunction may be made permanent. And complainant further prays that on the final hearing, the Court will issue a mandatory injunction against the City of Pascagoula and the Mayor and Councilmen thereof to open up and restore the condition of the drainage that originally existed in Yazoo Bayou, and if it is mistaken in the relief prayed for, complainant prays for such other and further relief

Which said property forms one body of land and embraces all of that tract of land acquired by W.M. Canty on October 16, 1903, from A.L. Moore, lying south of Columbus Drive, formerly Yazoo Avenue, and also embraces that tract acquired by W.M. Canty on September 28, 1904 from M.M. Watkins and C.Y. Watkins; a plat of the property herein described appears of record at page 72 ½ of Plat Book No.1.

TITLE TO LANDS OF CANTY AS FOLLOWS:

April 8, 1847

By Patent from the US to HELAIRE KREBS dated April 8, 1847, Book 51, pages 628-629.

November 14, 1846

A body of land embracing said tract was allotted to MARY GRANT, a daughter and one of the heirs of Helaire Krebs, the original entryman and patentee at the division of the estate of said patentee made on November 14, 1846.

June 13, 1876

On 13th day of June, 1876 the said MARY GRANT, daughter of the original patentee, conveyed said tract to LUCRETIA C. KREBS, wife of HUBERT F. KREBS by warranty deed which appears in Book 2, Pages 42-44.

September 2, 1895

On 2nd day of September, 1895 said tract was conveyed by J.D. Minor, sheriff, to GEORGE W. TAGGERT and others to enforce a judgement in favor of F.C. TURNER & Co. against Mrs. LUCRETIA C. KREBS by Sheriff's deed, Book 17, pages 16-17

February 16, 1898

Cause #716 shows George w. TAGGERT et al vs M.M. EVANS et al in partition suit, and were alleged to be tenants in common and a partition by sale and distribution of the proceeds sought, resulting in the tract's being conveyed by the Commissioner to J.I. FORD on Feb. 16, 1898, Book 27, page 246.

December 12, 1902

J.I. FORD conveyed the said tract to A.L. MOORE on Dec. 12, 1902, Book 25, page 438.

October 16, 1903

A. L. MOORE conveyed said tract to W.M. CANTY, Book 27, pages 92-93.

SECOND TRACT ACQUIRED BY CANTY

In a second tract acquired by Canty the title is as follows:

November 14, 1846

At the division of the estate of the original patentee, HELAIRE KREBS, there was allotted to HELAIRE KREBS , the only son of the patentee, a tract of land which embraces this tract, said allottment being made on the 14th day of November 1846.

January 13, 1898

Helaire Krebs, widower, son of the patentee, conveyed said body of land to Mrs. MALVINA SARRAZIN, Book 18, 467-68 on Jan. 13, 1898.

August 14, 1900

MALVINA SARRAZIN conveyed said land to MARCELLUS M. WATKINS, Book 21, pages 551-552, on the 14th of August, 1900.

September 28, 1904

M. M. WATKINS and wife C.Y. WATKINS, conveyed said tract to W.M. CANTY, Book 31, pages 127-128 on September 28, 1904.

"In the year 1904 W.M. CANTY and M.M. WATKINS owning adjacent tracts saw the advisability of opening a street running from Pascagoula Street in a southwesterly direction to Lake Yazoo, employed a surveyor who laid off said street under their direction and by doing cut off a triangular piece of land from the northeast corner of the property owned by Canty on the north side of said street as laid out and also cut off a tract of land owned by Watkins fronting on Yazoo Lake on the south side of said street as laid out."

"That in order to make the street as laid out the dividing line between their respective properties, the said W.M. Canty conveyed to M.M. Watkins, the triangular piece which he, the said W.M. Canty owned north of the said street as laid out; and the said M.M. Watkins and wife, C.Y. Watkins conveyed to W.M. Canty that part of the property owned by them which lay south of said street which said deed of conveyance is set out in the above deraignment of title."

"There was a map prepared showing said street which was named thereon YAZOO AVENUE, which said street as laid out ran from the west side of Pascagoula Street south 57 degrees west to Yazoo Lake and that property acquired by W.M. Canty as set out in the above deraignment of title bordered on and lay wholly south of said street."

"The title to the two tracts embraced in complainant's land having been merged in W.M. Canty complainant continues deraignment of title to his property as one tract, to wit:"

June 7, 1906

That on the 7th day of June 1906, W.M. CANTY conveyed said property to E.H. GASKIN by deed found in Book 31, pages 374-375.

July 12, 1906

That on July 12, 1906, E.H. GASKIN conveyed said property MATTIE J. GASKIN found in Book 31, page 375.

July __, 1908

MATTIE J. GASKIN executed a Power of Attorney authorizing and empowering B.H. ELLIS to sell and convey said land and to receive and receipt for all moneys derived by the sale of said land, and which power of Attorney appears in Book 33, page 299 to 300, Record of Deeds.

April 3, 1908

MATTIE C. GASKIN by B.H. ELLIS, her attorney, conveyed said land to W.M. CANTY which appears in Book 33, pages 320-321.

October 21, 1922

September 2, 1919, W.M. CANTY conveyed said property to INTERNATIONAL SHIP BUILDING COMPANY, a corporation, which appears in Book 47, page 225.

November 6, 1922

INTERNATIONAL SHIP BUILDING COMPANY conveyed to WILLIAM M. COLMER, W.F. MARTIN, T.B. KELL and H.F. GAUTIER all of its said real property in the City of Pascagoula except certain parcels already conveyed by it and embracing in said conveyance property of your complainant , which appears of record in Book 52, page 234, Record of Deeds.

May 8, 1923

On May 8, 1923, T.B. Kell conveyed to WILLIAM F. MARTIN, WILLIAM F. COLMER and H.F. GAUTIER, his undivided one-fourth interest in the said property by deed recorded in Book 53, pages 12-13.

August 9, 1923

WILLIAM F. MARTIN conveyed to WILLIAM F. COLMER and H.F.GAUTIER his interest in said property which deed appears of record in Book 53, pages 167-68.

CAUSE # 4815 goes on to state case of erroneous documents and other grievances and I have omitted these things in order to set forth historical data.

Information that the complainant shows to be true by reference to numerous deeds of record of this county, executed by the several children of HELAIRE KREBS, the original entryman and patentee of the land embracing the complainant's property;

"That HELAIRE KREBS, the patentee died on some date prior to the 14th day of November, 1846 and that his six children and heirs had a map made of decedent's real property and filed a suit in the Chancery Court of this county for a partition in kind of said property, that suit was regularly and legally conducted to each of the heirs of HELAIRE KREBS, the patentee, certain lots as platted in the TOWN OF KREBSVILLE, together with certain tracts of decedents property which extend beyond the TOWN OF KREBSVILLE." (no citation of book and page number)

"That said partition and allotment of the property was duly probated on the 14th day of November 1846, but that all papers in said cause were destroyed in one of the fires which consumed the land deed records of Jackson County on THREE occasions prior to 1875."

"Complainant further shows that HELAIRE KREBS, the original entryman and patentee of said tract, died intestate prior to the year 1846 and that his said wife IRENE KREBS died intestate about the year 1870 and that of this union there were six children, namely:

HELAIRE KREBS, JR. the only son, married MARY LOUISE KREBS
EVELINA KREBS who married THOMAS HAWKINS
FERONIE KREBS who married RICHARD RYDER
ZOE KREBS who married EMANUEAL DEAS
MARY KREBS who married W.F. GRANT
DELPHINE KREBS who married LAFAYETTE GRANT

SEE CAUSE for list of descendants of the above six children, page 15.

"Complainant also claims said property by reason of more than fifty years actual open, notorious, peaceable, continuous, undisputed and undisturbed adverse possession of said property as a bar to any and all persons or parties who might have or claim any right, title or interest in said land."

More interesting facts from this Chancery Court cause # 4815:

"MARY GRANT conveyed said tract to LUCRETIA C. KREBS, the wife of HUBERT KREBS on June 13, 1976, that the said Lucretia Krebs and husband immediately built a home on said property and fenced the same and lived there continuously raising their family thereon for more than fifteen years moving from said property to another home shortly before the said property was sold under execution on the 2nd day of September 1895."

"That during all of this time the said LUCRETIA C. KREBS and husband maintained a fence around the whole of said property and subjected the said property to every known act of occupancy, possession and ownership. That from the date of this sheriff's sale of said property above referred to the home built by Krebs on said property, was rented to tenants by the owners of said property continuously up to the year 1903 when the property came into possession of W.M. CANTY."

"That immediately after acquiring said property W.M. CANTY renovated the house situated thereon, repaired fence around said property and leased and rented the same to tenants who lived and maintained their home thereon continuously from the year 1903 until the said property was conveyed by Canty to the International Ship Building Company in September, 1919."

"That immediately acquiring the said property in 1919 the International Shipbuilding Company continued to exercise all ownership... maintained fences around the whole of said property.... And renting the same to certain of its employees."

"That from the time the International Shipbuilding Company conveyed said property on November 6, 1922, until your complainant acquired same on October 30 1924 the said property was constantly occupied; and part of the time was under lease to the United States Government and occupied by students of a Government Vocational School, and immediately on your complainant acquiring said property he moved into the home built on the same by KREBS, the grantee of MARY GRANT, and is now living on said property claiming same undisturbed against the world."

THE SMALL TRACT

"As to the small tract embraced by complainant's property which W.M. CANTY, the predecessor in title, acquired from W.M. WATKINS and wife on September 28, 1904,... this small tract was a part of the home place of HELAIRE KREBS to whom the tract had been allotted under the division of his father's the patentee's estate."

"That the said HELAIRE KREBS lived on said property and maintained a fence around said property continuously for more than fifty years, and that all of the twelve children of the said HELAIRE KREBS were born in the home on said property, the youngest of whom is now over sixty-two years of age."

"That HELAIRE KREBS after the death of his wife, did on June 13, 1898 convey said homeplace which embraced this tract of complainants to a daughter, Mrs. MALVINA SARRAZIN, that MALVINA SARRAZIN continued the occupancy and ownership excercised by her father from the date she acquired said property until she conveyed the same to MARCELLUS WATKINS on August 14, 1900."

"That immediately on acquiring said property MARCELLUS WATKINS moved onto same with his family and was living thereon in the year 1904 when he and the said W.M. CANTY decided to open a street, named by them, YAZOO AVENUE. On the opening of this street... part of the Helaire Krebs property embraced in complainant's property was cut off from the Watkins home by said street as opened, whereupon Watkins and wife conveyed this small tract to Canty on September 28, 1904."

"That the two tracts embraced in complainant's property then became the property of W.M. CANTY who fenced the whole of same and renovated the original Hubert Krebs home as aforesaid and continued actual possession thereof as above set out."

The Coast Ozone Company, named in this suit and represented by Mrs. A.J. LARSEN, "through some error" asserted claim to a small triangular strip off of the east end of the complainant's property. (This strip was used for a baseball park by International Shipbuilding Company and is in contention for ownership in this case.)

Hi,

In a current exchange, I discovered that owners of land can be traced back to at least the Spanosh Grant. Three Rabby (Raby) brothers who were my ancestors (from France?) were supposed to have had a Spanish Grant to a large portion of southern Mobile County in the late 1600's, early 1700's. Please tell me how I (in Wisconsin now) can go about researching this?

Thanks!

John W Rabby
